Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, June 2; Agra, May 30; Calcutta and Madras, May 28.

None of the troops from Abyssinia had reached Bombay up to date, although some of them were daily, if not hourly, expected. Sir R. Napier's request for two of the Indian transport steamers to fetch the homeward-bound European troops from Annesley Bay to Suez had set the Bombay officials hard at work to get the steamers ready betimes for sea. One of them, the Malabar, was in good sailing order, but the Jumna was undergoing some needful repairs to her machinery. The Times of India complains of the additional outlay entailed on the Indian revenues by Sir R. Napier's unforeseen demand. It naturally asks whether none of the twenty-six steamers lying in the bay could have served Sir Robert's purpose. In all likelihood, however, as the Times itself suggests, the great troopships were wanted for good sanitary reasons; in which case no one would demur to an arrangement which gave our brave soldiers a better chance of surviving the proverbial horrors of the Red Sea in June.

SIR CHARLES JACKSON had already arrived at Bombay, and would shortly enter on the inquiry entrusted to his hands. By the Bill, as amended at Simlah on the 20th May, the Commission of which he is president is empowered to examine witnesses in England as well as India. The inquiry would begin at Bombay, but might be afterwards continued, at need, in other parts of the presidency. It is comforting to hear that the Bombay Government believe in the old Bank's ability, not only to pay all its debts, but even to divide some surplus among the shareholders. These last, however, will do well not to be too sanguine.

MR. C. B. SAUNDERS, C.B., whose name in the Trieste telegrams was metamorphosed into Sandeah, has succeeded Mr. Roberts at Hyderabad. So Colonel Meade has once more been passed over, in the opinion of his friends. The new resident however, a Bengal civilian of twenty-five years' standing, whose services during the mutiny went far to earn him the post of Judicial Commissioner of Mysore, is a gentleman of ripe ability, and of some special qualifications for the task of advising a native ruler.

THE flaw in the telegraph line between Mussendom and Guadur has at length been repaired, and messages travel along it at their old rate. When the new Russo-Persian line is once set working, it will probably absorb what little business is still bungled by this Indo-Turkish line. English merchants are pretty nearly tired of having their messages mangled and their speculations spoilt by the ignorance or carelessness of Turkish clerks. It seems likely that the telegraph station at Mussendom will soon be transferred either to Bunder Abbas or the island of Angar, in the Persian Gulf. Persia has already given us leave to set up a telegraph-office in the former port, but Angar, according to Colonel Pelly, our agent in the Gulf, would be better worth securing as the probable centre of a trade which in time would rival that of ancient Ormuz. Persia's right however to the lordship of Bunder Abbas is contested it seems by the present Imam of Muscat, who claims to hold it as an ancestral fief, by a title dating more than two hundred years back. He even threatens to blockade the port, and as Persia has not the ghost of a navy, he might perhaps starve the garrison into a surrender, if the British agent does not interfere.

IT is stated in some of the Indian papers that Colonel C. Herbert, at present in political charge of the King of Oudh, is to succeed Sir A. B. Kemball as Political Agent and Consul-general at Bagdad. Colonel Herbert's brave defence of Attok during the second Sikh war gave him a good start in the field of political preferment, and his later services have doubtless justified his selection to fill one of the most important consular posts in the East. His place in the household of the King of Oudh will probably be taken by Colonel Brooke.

THE Indian papers still found food for discussion in the accounts of Sir R. Napier's doings in Abyssinia. An appropriate tribute to the services of the victorious army, and of all who aided in its success, has been paid by the Viceroy, in the shape of a general order, which will be found elsewhere. If the praise of so good a judge as Sir J. Lawrence can add anything to the fame of so good a soldier as Sir R. Napier, the latter has no cause to complain of unappreciated services. The Viceroy, himself more than half a soldier at heart, desires to "record his opinion that no army could have been led with more ability, energy, and forethought, under circumstances of peculiar difficulty," than Sir R. Napier's; and the troops, he adds, "were worthy of their commander."

THE next time that native Indian regiments are asked to fight by the side of Englishmen we hope at any rate that better arms will be furnished them than those old smoothbores which Sir R. Napier afterwards made over to the Chief of Tigreh. It was with weapons like these that the Punjabies had to meet the fire of men who, according to Sir R. Napier, were for the most part much better armed with good double-muskets, or with matchlocks carrying several hundred yards. It is time to try a rather more trustful policy towards native soldiers than that which the mutinies frightened us into adopting.

MADRAS is breaking out in the direction of public buildings and deeds of public charity. Besides the building of a large Central Railway Terminus, a General Post-office, a Presidency College, and some minor structures, Lord Napier has now laid the first stone of a Senate House for the Madras University. A School of Arts is soon to be erected at a cost of about three lacs, and a Public Library is about to be added to the Central Museum. Mr. Chisholm, says the Madras Times, has adopted for the buildings entrusted to his hands a "modern style of architecture in preference to the Grecian and Italian." What that means is beyond our unaided insight to discover. Is Italian an ancient style then? The absence of chunam in the new buildings is not of necessity a virtue, when the chunam looks as smooth and is nearly as hard as marble.

In his speech on the laying of the foundation stone, Lord Napier announced the gift of a thousand pounds from the Maharajah of Travancore, and of six hundred and fifty pounds from the Rajah of Cochin, for the founding of University scholarships limited to natives of the donors' own provinces. The Rajah of Vizianagram, always foremost in acts of munificence, has founded two scholarships for the study of Sanskrit, and three for the benefit of students in the Provincial School who might wish to work on at Madras for the B.A. degree. Sir Madhava Rao, K.S.I., has contributed Rs. 2,000, the interest of which is to be laid out in prize books. Lord Napier himself has founded a "Governor's Scholarship," designed for the special benefit of the natives of Madras.

Native prizes are opening freely on behalf of a like movement further north. The scheme of an Oriental University at Lahore is already on the way to realise itself. Among those who have thus far helped on that issue are the Maharajah of Puttiala, booked for Rs. 50,000; the Rajah of Jheend for Rs. 11,000; the Rajah of Nabha for the same amount; and the Sirdar of Kulsia for Rs. 8,000.

In Bengal the question of vernacular education does not seem to progress quickly. There has lately been published some lively correspondence between the Local and Supreme Governments on the proper way of meeting the just claims of Bengal on this head. The Viceroy insists on making the landowners pay in Bengal, as they willingly do in the North-West, the chief costs of educating their poorer countrymen. If these men will come forward his Excellency will help them from the Imperial treasury; but he declines to burden the empire with the duty of making up for the shortcomings of Bengal landowners. The Lieutenant-governor on the other hand maintains that the people of Bengal have a positive claim on the general revenues for a much larger educational grant than that now reserved for them. Inasmuch as an educational cess is already deducted from the land revenue in the North-West, why, he asks, should not an equivalent measure be carried out for Bengal, by setting aside for her use some part of the great revenue raised from her soil and people by means of the opium and liquor duties? The Viceroy however sees no parallel between the instances quoted, and declares that the landowners can well afford to pay for popular instruction out of the increasing profits they draw from the land, for which they now pay a much lower rent than their fellows elsewhere. The Viceroy argues well from his rather limited standpoint; but after all, a province whose surplus revenues help to keep all India in good order has some special claim to divert a portion of them for its own good. How would our Indian empire get on without Bengal?

THE Revenue Board of Madras still keeps up its warning note of a threatened famine. But the collectors will not take the note up, and bazaar prices seem to justify their incredulity. Out of nineteen districts, that of Madras alone shows a rise in the market rates of rice from Rs. 392 last year to Rs. 412 this. In several of the southern districts there is on the contrary a marked fall of prices. Barring a certain amount of local disease among men and cattle, and occasional signs of severe drought, the country at large was not in a worse way than usual. Cuddapah seems to have suffered most from want of rain; yet even there prices were beginning to fall.

It seems that the story of the Nagpore Durbār was not quite correctly told. Mr. Morris turned out no native for coming before him in shoes, European or Eastern. But he saw some native gentlemen looking clearly uncomfortable and moving about unsteadily in their new English boots. One of them owned to him that he did not feel comfortable, whereupon the Commissioner told him there was no need for his wearing such things, as the Government order was merely permissive. The two were talking together in the friendliest way; so the idea of an intended rebuke was quite unfounded.

THE Bengal Government has ordered a special inquiry into the railway accident at Shamnuggur. In reply to a memorial from the British Indian Association on this subject his Honour snubs that interesting body for believing in "the transparent falsehoods" circulated among the natives touching the number of people killed and wounded.

FROM the North-West frontier we learn that a Prince Feroze Shah has appeared at Khoten, stirring up the people there to rise against somebody or another. In Afghanistan Shere Ali was advancing on Cabul. Abdurrahman Khan came off worst in Maimanah, whither he had gone to get in his revenues. The head-men rallied to the flag of Shere Ali and drove away the son of Ameer Azim Khan with heavy loss. The Ameer was still in Cabul.

THE death of the Ameer of Bokhara is accepted without a question by the Indian papers. In the Russian journals however no reference seems to have been made to such an event. When General Kaufmann neared Samarkand, in furtherance of his quarrel with the Ameer, the latter sent messengers offering terms. But the offers seeming as delusive as many previous ones, the Russian General continued his advance. After a brief resistance the Bokharians fled on all sides, leaving all their twenty-one guns in Russian hands. On the next day the head-men of the city came to offer their submission. The Russians marched in, occupied the citadel, and left the townsfolk to pursue their usual business in peace.

THE Daily News having assumed that the breakfasts at the India-office were given at the expense of the Indian taxpayer, Sir S. Northcote's secretary has written to assure the readers of that journal that the Indian Minister pays for those entertainments entirely out of his own pocket. Sir Stafford ought to have full credit for not following the example of workhouse guardians and the late East India Company.

SIR R. NAPIER was to reach Paris this morning, there to remain for a brief rest under the roof of Lord Lyons. The thanks of both Houses will be voted him on Thursday evening. In our present issue will be found the long-expected despatch, for want of which those thanks have so long been deferred. Sir Robert goes through the perilous ordeal of mentioning names with more than average success, no doubt because there were really fewer failures than usual to hush up or explain away. We can well believe that he finds it "impossible to do full justice" to the merits of all concerned in an enterprise remarkable for its completeness. Like a good general, Sir Robert knows how to praise, and we are glad to see how widely the praise is due.

THE spoils of Theodore's wardrobe, as described by us a fortnight ago, are now being exhibited in the South Kensington Museum.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

DESPATCH FROM SIR R. NAPIER.

The Gazette of last night publishes the following despatch, which was received yesterday at the India-office, from Sir Robert Napier:—

Commander-in-Chief's Office, Camp Koomeylee,
June 1, 1868.

Right Honourable Sir,—In continuation of my despatch (No. 40), dated May 12, I have the honour to report that I this day passed the Sooroo defile with the last column of the Abyssinian expeditionary force, the 25th Bombay Native Light Infantry, and the 27th Belooch Battalion. The march from Dalanta to Antalo was trying, from the frequent severe storms of rain which appeared to accompany us, and from which our troops, in some degree, and more especially the followers and transport animals, could not fail to suffer. The wild border tribes of Abyssinians and Gallas, through whom our route lay, from the Taccassi to Antalo, being very little under the control of their distant and almost nominal rulers, they were perfectly well behaved on our advance, finding by degrees our vulnerable points, had been for some time making attacks upon our muleteers and camp-followers, when venturing far from their escorts, and on some occasions even on our armed soldiers. In the first instance some camp followers were killed, and in the last, our soldiers being driven to use their weapons, several Abyssinians and Gallas were killed and wounded. Considerable numbers of armed men, principally Gallas, watched our march from the hills, and though restrained by the pressure of our columns, they made attempts on our line of baggage, but met with little success. Soldiers were freely interspersed along the line, and the rear guard from Marowa to Antalo was continuously under the command of an experienced officer, Lieutenant-colonel Bray, of the 4th (King's Own) Regiment, until we reached the coast. This was a very clear indication of what a force returning in difficulties would experience. In the friendly territory of Prince Russai the troops returned to marches made easy by improved roads and the increased supplies of articles of food, turned into great luxuries by a period of privation, which were stored in the fortified ports of Antalo and Addigerat. All local information led me to believe that there would be no danger of floods before the middle of June, but, owing to the extreme severity of the spring rains, a succession of floods during the early part of May did much damage to the Sooroo defile road. On the 19th of May, with hardly any warning, a heavy flood, coming from a lateral tributary, which enters above Sooroo, filled the Sooroo defile channel so suddenly that seven camp followers and some cattle, not being instantly removed from the waterway, were swept away and perished. On the 30th of January full precautionary instructions were issued to secure the safety of the troops in the Pass, and I had no apprehension on their account. The losses of the 19th arose from unavoidable causes, and were not likely to recur. In case we might be detained during the rainy season, an alternative line, turning the Sooroo defile, had been surveyed by Lieutenant de Thoren, 45th Regiment, Quartermaster-general's department, by which a safer, though less even path, might have been opened. By the exertions of the garrison of Sooroo, directed by Captain Christie, Royal Engineers, the damage to the road in the Pass was rapidly repaired after each flood. The severe weather in the high mountains, with the reaction after excitement and the scanty food, naturally increased the sick lists, but there are few bad cases. The wounded are rapidly recovering, and although the total number of sick ultimately amounted to two hundred and sixty, no member of the force, however humble, has failed to obtain transport when required. The whole force have returned in safety to the coast, and the greater part have already re-embarked. It is now my duty to lay before her Majesty's Government a statement of the services of the troops under my command, and of the general, departmental, and personal staff. Those who first claim notice are the pioneer force, who landed in Zoulla in October last, and consisted of Major Marrett's Mountain Battery (Native), the 3rd and 4th companies of Bombay Sappers and Miners, under Captains Leslie and Leacock, the 3rd Bombay Light Cavalry, commanded by Colonel Graves, and the 10th Native Infantry, under Colonel Field, who commanded the whole. Their labours were not commenced under very encouraging circumstances; a barren shore, so shelving that the troops had to wade several hundred yards daily in landing stores; a supply of water so scanty that it disappeared immediately, and a temperature so sultry that any exertion was oppressive; but the spirit of the troops never flagged, encamping grounds were cleared, twenty miles of road were made from the coast to Koomeylee, and towards Sooroo; a depot was established at Senafe, and huts erected for the muleteers. Lieutenant Beck's Company of the Bombay Marine Battalion was the first party of infantry in Abyssinia, amongst the earliest labourers in the Sooroo defile, and throughout the campaign performed most valuable services as pioneers, in sinking wells, and opening and maintaining the road to Senafe. The left wing of the 10th garrisoned Senafe, and had a large share in the works which made the depot a model of neatness and of convenience in its water supply. The right wing of the 10th formed part of the advanced pioneer column, and shared in all its labours; after five months of work it had an unwilling rest at Antalo, and was soon again in the front, and at the capture of Magdala.

The next arrivals in the country were Murray's Armstrong Battery, the 33rd Regiment under Colonel Dunn, V.C., and Beville's Belooch Battalion. Captain Murray, during a long detention of his battery at Koomeylee, sought occupation for his men in every way that could aid our progress. It mattered little whether they cleared the obstructions in seven miles of road, carried water for six miles to support a working party, moved stores for the commissariat, broke in mules to harness, or fitted them with pack-saddles; everything was done with the same ability and zeal that has carried the battery over 800 miles of mountains in efficient condition. The 33rd Regiment furnished a detachment of two companies to Koomeylee, for sinking wells. They were the first British infantry in Abyssinia; they furnished heavy fatigue parties for all the works at Zoulla. In the absence of a sufficient number of the Land Transport Corps, the men converted themselves into extemporary muleteers, and recaptured and saved large numbers of mules which would otherwise have perished. They then proceeded to Senafe. The Belooch Regiment went to Koomeylee, where Major Beville, with the right wing, joined Start's Bombay Sappers in making the admirable road in the Sooroo defile. Major Hogg, with the left wing, made the scarcely less difficult one at Bary Guddie. The Belooches then garrisoned Addigerat, and raised much of the intrenchments there. The right wing partook of all the labours of the advance, and was present at Arogie and Magdala. The left wing, long delayed for carriage, at length pressed to the front, and, by hard marching, was present at Magdala on the 13th April. The 10th company Royal Engineers, under Major Pritchard, composed of a body of highly instructed and valuable soldiers, arrived from England, and was amongst the first to land at Zoulla. The well sinkers, directed by Lieutenant Le Mesurier, the signallers, under Lieutenant Morgan, and the telegraphers and photographers have rendered excellent service throughout the campaign. The head-quarters of the 10th Company has always accompanied the leading column in the advance. The 4th King's Own Regiment, commanded by Lieutenant-colonel Cameron, with the 3rd and 25th Bombay Native Infantry, under Lieutenant-colonels Campbell and Little, on arrival at Zoulla were immediately put to work upon the railway, in landing water and stores for the force, and on the embankments to protect the Commissariat stores, which were liable to be inundated at spring tides; all these were heavy labours which left no soldier unemployed. Nothing could exceed the spirit with which these regiments worked in order to hasten the advance. The work on the foreshore fell chiefly on the native troops. Little could the mud-bespattered labourer with his basket be recognised as the smart sepoy of the parade ground.

Major Chamberlain's pioneers, on arrival, at once took their place on the works; they brought the energy and the spirit of their race, together with their organisation for skilled labour, to bear on every duty, and the works received an increased impetus. At fifty feet below the surface they found sweet water, an inestimable blessing to the Ishmaelites of Zoulla, who in their gratitude were ready to worship the Panjaubees. There is no part of the way which does not bear marks of the labour of this regiment, either on the roads or the telegraph. The 33rd Regiment was never idle; at Senafe and Antalo every man was employed not only in making the roads and intrenchments, but in cutting and bringing in grass and wood for the Commissariat, and poles for the telegraph. When joined by the 4th King's Own Regiment they bore the first brunt of opening the way through the rocky mountains of Lasta to Magdala. The A and B Batteries, 21st Brigade, Royal Artillery, under Lieutenant-colonel Penn and Captain Twiss, took over the steel mountain guns on landing; they broke in mules, fitted their harness, and made extraordinary progress in the organisation of these batteries, which maintained their thorough efficiency during the march to Magdala and back. Whilst waiting for the time when they could advance, and when the provisioning of Senafe was of the first importance, these batteries carried up several convoys of stores and provisions to that post. The 5th Battery, 25th Brigade, Royal Artillery (brass rifled mountain guns), under Major Bogle, arrived from Calcutta complete and efficient in every particular of equipment. The circumstances of the campaign did not permit this battery to join the advance troops; but while waiting at Zoulla before they advanced to Senafe, Major Bogle volunteered the services of his battery for every useful work. In carrying treasures and stores to Senafe the battery marched nearly one thousand miles. It furnished a detachment, under Major Hills, V.C., which manned two eight-inch mortars, a valuable battery on elephants, which was carried to Magdala and employed in the attack on that fortress. In case of a protracted defence these mortars would have been invaluable. Elephants have frequently been employed for the transport of artillery in Indian warfare, but it has been generally by means of draught; when guns have been carried it has only been for short distances. It has been the privilege of this campaign to prove that elephants could carry Armstrong twelve-pounder guns and eight-inch mortars over steep mountains for many hundreds of miles. There were forty-two elephants employed in the conveyance of ordnance and ammunition, and of these five have been lost from hard work and want of water during the operations before Magdala.

The Royal Naval Rocket Brigade, under Commander Fellowes, furnished chiefly by her Majesty's ship Octavia, broke in their own mules, quickly learned duties and a drill which were new to them, carried stores and provisions to Senafe, marched well, and were with the leading brigade in the advance on Magdala. They have added to the high reputation which the Royal Navy have ever held when serving with the army in the field. The 45th Regiment, commanded by Lieutenant-colonel Paris, arrived at Zoulla early in February, and remained there employed on the railway and other works until the 19th of March, when at length the obstacles to their advance being overcome, the head-quarters and all companies making most strenuous efforts to reach the front, arrived at Dalanta in time to share in the operations against Magdala, after having marched 300 miles in twenty-four days, accomplishing the last 70 miles across the Wandach Pass, 10,500 feet high, and the Taccassi and Jeddu ravines, in four days, a rate of marching in such a country hardly to be surpassed. Four companies being urgently required were detained at Koomeylee until late in March, when they were sent to garrison Addigerat and Antalo.

In addition to the severe mountain marches in which each soldier carried a heavy load, regiments of ten worked at the roads on the line of march or immediately on arrival in camp. Not unfrequently every available man of a regiment has been on working parties or outlying picket. The constant storms of rain and the cold nights of the high altitude were encountered cheerfully on rations reduced to eight ounces of flour and meat only. An increase was made to the allowance of meat, it is true, but that increase gave no compensation for the articles of rum, sugar, and compressed vegetables which had to be left behind. The 2nd Bombay Grenadiers and 18th Bombay Native Infantry, commanded by Lieutenant-colonels Muter and Combe, and the 21st Bengal Native Infantry (Punjabees), by Major Thelwall, c.b., while longing for an order to advance, contributed most cheerfully their labours for many weeks to the railway, the roads through the Pass, the wells, the water supply, and the conservancy of the Pass. Of the regiments of the 4th Brigade, which had been held in readiness in Bombay, the 26th Cameronians, under Lieut.-col. Henning, alone landed, and were moved as quickly as possible to Senafe; but, short as was the detention of this regiment at Zoulla, it also contributed its labours to forward the work at our base. The 5th and 8th Regiments Bombay Native Infantry, commanded by Lieut.-colonels Taylor and Sandwith, both regiments with a high reputation, returned to India on the fall of Magdala, without having landed in Abyssinia. These three regiments were all wanted earlier, but were not sent for, because they could not have been moved to the highlands for want of food and transport. Before the arrival of the Cameronians, when the connecting posts of our line had been numerically much weaker than I desired, I had obtained the services of 200 seamen and marines, under Captain Colin Campbell, from her Majesty's ship Octavia. They marched towards Senafe, but the arrival of the Cameronians rendered their proceeding onwards no longer necessary.

The cavalry service has been such as to call for the fullest powers of that arm as light cavalry. The long line of communication required that the cavalry should be in many detachments. They have had peculiar responsibility thrown upon their officers and soldiers. Left in isolated positions, far from control, entrusted with commissariat duties, while charged to be conciliatory to the people of the country, they have been firm in maintaining inviolate the respect due to their position as soldiers. The supplies for the troops marching to join the main force in advance frequently depended on the ability and trustworthiness of a non-commissioned officer of cavalry, and I have had repeated testimony to the efficiency with which these duties have been performed. Seldom or never have cavalry had such a variety of duties in maintaining communications for so many miles, climbing over mountains and through forest ranges, often benighted where a false step would be destruction, and in danger of treacherous attacks from the wild border tribes, who are honoured amongst themselves for slaying without reason and without scruple. The wear and tear of horses in such duties have been considerable. The men, however, have returned to their more regular duties with a discipline and efficiency unimpaired. The wing of the 3rd Dragoon Guards was long detained in India, and arrived late in the campaign. Notwithstanding the distance and the severity of the country through which they marched, Colonel Tower by judicious management brought both men and horses in the most efficient condition in time to share in the investment of Magdala. The 3rd Bombay Cavalry and the 3rd Regiment Sind Horse, commanded by Major Briggs, having been the earliest in the field, have borne the hardest share of the duties, serving in their turn as parts of the pioneer force. The rough training of the Sind Frontier Brigade, ever on outpost duty, rendered Major Briggs' regiment admirably qualified for the duties which it was called upon to perform in Abyssinia. The 12th and 10th Bengal Cavalry, under Majors Gough, V.C., and Palliser, took up on the 18th of March and the 1st of April, the chain of posts between Antalo and Tacassi, and Major Gough brought up the head-quarter detachment of the 12th, reduced to ninety-six men, to share in the attack on Magdala.

Major Palliser, with the head-quarters of the 10th Cavalry, arrived at Attala in most opportune time to preserve our communications, which were very seriously assailed; had the service been of longer duration the regiments of Bengal Cavalry would have added to the high opinions their soldier-like performance of their duties and efficient equipment have called forth. The Royal Engineers, directed by Lieutenant-colonel St. Clair Wilkins, have rendered invaluable services during this expedition, which has given such an ample field for their employment. Their energy and skill are shown in every work, from the first landing in Zoulla to Magdala, and require a special separate report. The works of the Madras and Bombay Sappers and Miners, under Major Prendergast, V.C., Royal Engineers, and Captain M'Donnell, Royal Engineers, have been singularly valuable and important, and will be described in the report of the Engineer operations.

The very great services of the Commissariat Department, directed by Lieutenant-colonel Lucas, and of the Transport Corps, directed by Lieutenant-colonel Warden, both under the control of Lieutenant-colonel Holland, of the Commissariat Department, have been rendered under many disadvantages, and require a separate report to do full justice to the officers and subordinates of their establishments. The duties of the Medical Department, under the chief direction of Dr. Currie, c.b., Inspector-general, have been efficiently and satisfactorily performed. The necessities of the campaign demanded that the equipment of the medical, equally with those of every other department with the advanced troops, should be reduced to the lowest scale; but, with the very limited means at their disposal, Dr. Currie and the Deputy Inspectors-general, Dr. Pelly and Dr. Mahaffy, together with the regimental and staff officers serving under them, performed their duties in a manner which has reflected great credit on that department of the army. The services of the Veterinary Department, under Staff Veterinary-surgeon Hallen, an able and valuable officer, have been of the highest importance. A copy of Mr. Hallen's report on the working of this department is attached. Mr. Hallen makes special mention of the services of First Class Veterinary Surgeons Lamb and Anderson. The telegraph, directed by the intelligence and experience of Captain St. John, Royal Engineers, and by Lieutenant Pusey, Royal Engineers, was carried to Antalo under circumstances of great difficulty; and although the wire was often mischievously cut and communication interrupted, it was immediately restored. Errors were most rare; the telegraph worked well, and rendered important service. The officers of the Trigonometrical Survey—Lieuts. Carter, director, and Dummiler and Holdich, Royal Engineers, assistants—by the most strenuous exertions and at the cost of great fatigue and privations, succeeded in surveying nearly 6,000 square miles, and carried their work from the coast to Magdala. The labour of these officers, two of whom have been obliged to return to England from loss of health, will prove very valuable.

I am greatly indebted to Major-general Sir Charles Staveley, K.C.B., who has afforded me the most valuable support and assistance throughout the campaign. He laid the first foundation of order at Zoulla, and, when summoned to the front, ably commanded the First Division during the advance, in the action of Arogie, and at the capture of Magdala. As second in command he has possessed my fullest confidence. Major-general Malcolm, c.b., commanded the Second Division, which held the line of country from Senafe to Antalo, and subsequently to Lake Ashangie. It required good temper and judgment to maintain the good understanding which I had established with the chiefs and people of the country. General Malcolm did this, and by his vigilance and activity kept the communications in Tigre in good order, and restored order in the district of Ashangie. His Excellency, Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, was so good as to grant my request for the services of Major-general Russell, who left his important office, military and political, as resident of Aden, to command at Zoulla. In the administration of that post General Russell has entirely fulfilled my expectations and wishes. I am greatly indebted to him for the excellent manner in which he has conducted the very important and trying duties of his command. Brigadier-general Collings, an officer of mature judgment and experience, conducted to my satisfaction the command at Antalo, a position of vital importance, both as affording support to the front and as the last point of connection with the friendly province of Tigre, the supplies of which were so valuable. Brigadier-general Stewart commanded at Zoulla for some time, and on Major-general Russell's arrival proceeded to Senafe; in both commands Brigadier-general Stewart met with my approbation. Brigadier-general Wilby was usefully employed in the Koomeyloo Pass, in the earlier stages of the expedition, when the difficulty in arranging the transport of supplies to Senafe was greatest. In the attack on Magdala General Wilby commanded the 2nd brigade of the 1st division, which assaulted that formidable position. Brigadier-general Schneider commanded the 1st Brigade of the 1st division which led during the advance on Magdala, was engaged at Arogie, and in the assault on Magdala. Both of these officers have met with my approbation in the exercise of their respective commands, and have been very favourably recommended to my notice by Major-general Sir Charles Staveley. Brigadier-general Petrie, commanding Royal Artillery, has afforded me every assistance. He was constantly present with the advanced troops, and directed the whole of the artillery at Magdala. General Petrie mentions most favourably his divisional commanders, Lieutenant-colonels Wallace and Milward, whose reports on their respective commands will be forwarded. It was due very much to the care and judgment of Colonel Wallace that the elephants with the heavy batteries accomplished their unequalled march with so much success.

Lieut.-col. Milward, whose merits I had learnt to appreciate in China, was permitted by his Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding in Chief to join me for the special purpose of directing the steel mountain batteries. The success of these weapons has been fully established, and the rapidity and completeness with which they were organised is due to Col. Milward's experienced direction. General Petrie also mentions the commanders of batteries, Lieut.-col. Penn, Captains Twiss and Murray, and Brevet Major Hills, v.c., Majors Marett and Bogle, and particularly his brigade major, Capt. Geary, and his aide-de-camp, Lieut. Chapman, of the Royal Artillery. Col. Graves, 3rd Cavalry, very efficiently commanded the whole of the cavalry on several occasions, including the operations before Magdala. The 3rd Bombay Light Cavalry, very soon after its arrival in Abyssinia with the Pioneer Brigade, lost nearly one half of its horses from the epidemic. Immediate steps were taken to remount the regiment from Egypt and Bombay. When the force advanced from Antalo, Colonel Graves's regiment was remounted, and, by the great care bestowed on the horses, their condition was preserved in a remarkable manner. Colonel Graves deserves much credit for the efficiency which his regiment has maintained under these trying circumstances. Lieut.-colonel St. Clair Wilkins, commanding Royal Engineers, arrived in Abyssinia with the reconnoitring party. His report of the operations conducted by the officers of the Royal Engineers will show how unremitting have been his labours, and how extremely valuable have been his services and those of the department under his orders. Captain Goodfellow, next in seniority, whose services at Zoulla in constructing the pier have already been noticed, was the chief engineer in the highlands, and displayed great intelligence and activity in every duty throughout the operations.

I desire to express my very high appreciation of the services of the officers commanding the several corps of the expeditionary force, and of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers who have served under them during the campaign. Lieutenant-colonel Tower, commanding Wing 3rd Dragoon Guards, and Major Miller, who brought the wing from India in admirable order; Major Briggs, commanding 3rd Regiment Sind Horse, and Majors Palliser and Gough, V.C., commanding 10th and 12th Regiments Bengal Cavalry; Lieutenant-colonel Loch, 3rd Light Cavalry; Lieutenant-colonel Wallace, commanding Heavy Artillery; Lieutenant-colonel Milward, Mountain Rifled Batteries; Captain Murray, commanding G. Battery, 14th Brigade, Royal Artillery; Lieutenant-colonel Penn, commanding A Battery, 21st Brigade, Royal Artillery; Captain Swiss, commanding B Battery, 21st Brigade, Royal Artillery; Major Bogle, 5th Company, 25th Brigade, Royal Artillery; Major Marrett, Native Mountain Train; Major Hills, Elephant Mortar Battery; Commander Fellowes, commanding Naval Rocket Brigade; Major Pritchard, commanding 10th Company, Royal Engineers; Major Prendergast, V.C., Royal Engineers, Madras Sappers and Miners; Captain M'Donnell, Royal Engineers, Bombay Sappers and Miners. Lieutenant-colonel Cameron has won my admiration by the manner in which he has commanded his excellent regiment (the 4th King's Own), and the soldierlike spirit which, by his teaching and example, he has so well fostered and maintained. Colonel Field, Major Chamberlain, and Major Beville, commanding those admirable native regiments, the 10th Bombay Native Infantry, the 23rd Pioneers, and the 27th Beloochees; Lieut. Beck, commanding detachment Marine Battalion; Major Pearce, 10th Native Infantry; Major Cooper, commanding 33rd Regiment (the Duke of Wellington's), which led the assault on Magdala. Major Cooper was among the first who scaled the defences near the gateway. Drummer M'Guire and Private Bergin, of the 33rd, were the first who led the way through the stockade to the right, by which the defences of the gate were turned. Lieutenant-colonel Campbell, 3rd Bombay Native Infantry; Lieutenant-colonel Parish, 45th Regiment (Sherwood Forresters); Lieutenant-colonel Bray (4th (King's Own) Regiment; Major Thelwall, c.b., 21st Punjab Infantry; Colonel Little, 25th Bombay Native Light Infantry; Lieutenant-colonel Muter, 2nd Bombay Native Infantry (Grenadiers); Lieutenant-colonel Henning, 26th Camerounians; Lieutenant-colonel Coombe, 18th Bombay Native Infantry. I am much indebted to Lieutenant-colonel Holland, Controller of Supply and Transports, for the able and judicious manner in which he performed his very responsible duties, and which imperatively detained him at Zoulla, and deprived me of the benefit of his presence at my headquarters. Also to Lieutenant-colonel Lucas, Deputy Commissary-general, one of the ablest officers of the department, on whom devolved the whole executive burthen (a burthen which no less efficient and experienced officer could have sustained) of maintaining the supplies at the main base of operations. Major Mignon, the senior Commissariat Officer on the Highlands, who had the important task of organising the depot during the advance, and Lieutenant Shewell, who were always with the advanced columns, and were constantly under my notice. These officers were the pioneers of the Commissariat Department, and I am greatly indebted to them for their most valuable exertions.

Lieut.-col. Warden had a most arduous task in the organisation of the transport corps. His divisions were thrown into work even before their establishment or organisation were complete. Notwithstanding the misfortunes which beset the corps in its formation, the final result has been most creditable to Lieut.-col. Warden, his second in command, Major Nuttall, and the many excellent officers of all branches of the service whose energy and unremitting exertions have overcome every difficulty. To Lieut.-col. Warden, his officers, and the subordinates of the transport corps I desire to express my deep obligation. My acknowledgments are due to Dr. Currie, c.b., for his able direction of the medical department; to Dr. Pelly, Deputy Inspector-general, who superintended at Zoulla, and under whose immediate charge were the native troops and followers of the expedition. To Dr. Mahaffy, Deputy Inspector-general with the First Division, and also Deputy Surgeon-major Guy, Surgeons Madden and Wyllie, and Assistant-surgeon Martin, whose services have been most favourably brought to notice. I desire to express my appreciation of the very great services of Staff Veterinary-surgeon Hallen, First-class Veterinary-surgeon Lamb, Veterinary-surgeon Anderson and the officers of that department; also to Captain Swanson, Royal Artillery, Commissioner of Ordnance, and to Lieut.-col. Bartlett, Treasurer of the Force.

The officers forming the reconnoitring party, consisting of Brigadier-general Merewether, c.b., Colonel Phayre, Quartermaster-general, Bombay Army, Lieutenant-colonel Wilkins, Royal Engineers, Major Baigrie, Assistant Quartermaster-general, Surgeon Lumsdaine, Captain Pottinger, Royal Artillery, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-general, Assistant-surgeon Martin, who landed at Zoulla in October last, deserve much credit for their valuable service in selecting the Koomaylee defile as the entrance to Abyssinia—a decision arrived at after much labour and research, and fully justified by a further acquaintance with the country. Brigadier-general Merewether has afforded very valuable service in political duties, in arranging with the various chiefs at Zoulla and on the highlands for the transport of supplies; and has ever been most zealous at all times and seasons to promote the success of the expedition. Her Majesty's Government are well aware of Brigadier-general Merewether's unceasing exertions in favour of the captives since their first imprisonment. Brigadier-general Merewether reports very favourably of the assistance he received from Lieutenant Mockler, Assistant Resident, Aden, who remained in charge of the relations with the chiefs of Zoulla, and of the services of his aide-de-camp, Lieutenant Lockhart, of the Bengal Cavalry. Colonel the Hon. F. Thesiger, deputy adjutant-general, left England at two days' notice to join the force in Abyssinia; his thorough knowledge of his duties, combined with great ability and untiring energy, render him a most valuable staff officer. Colonel Thesiger had the duty of keeping me daily, nay hourly, informed of the state of supplies at every post from Zoulla to head-quarters, and in this and other duties has rendered me most important services during the campaign. Lieutenant-colonel MacLeod, Assistant Adjutant-general, an officer of much experience, and thoroughly acquainted with the native army, has ably supported the head of his department, and has performed his duties greatly to my satisfaction. I am greatly indebted to Colonel Phayre, Deputy Quartermaster-general, who has rendered most important services in the early examination of the country, the direction of the pioneer force to Antalo, and the subsequent advanced reconnaissance. The very valuable maps and reports of the route, and of the scene of operations, attest the very great energy and intelligence which Colonel Phayre has displayed in the performance of his duties. Captain Holland, Assistant Quartermaster-General, has had charge of his department at head-quarters, and of all correspondence with the Land Transport Corps. In these duties Captain Holland's exertions have been conspicuous; and the exactness, promptitude, and ability with which they have been carried out deserve my warmest commendation. Captain Holland afforded me great assistance in the reduction of the camp followers.

Major Baigrie, Assistant Quartermaster-general, an officer of ability and great energy, did very valuable service in the first exploration of the coast in October. During the campaign he has served as Assistant Quartermaster-general of the First Division, and been very favourably noticed by Major-general Sir Charles Staveley, in whose estimation of Major Baigrie I fully concur. Captain Pottinger, Royal Artillery, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-general, was very useful with the reconnoitring party. During the campaign he has been attached to head-quarters; he has laboured with zeal and shown ability in the performance of his duties. Captain M'Gregor, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-general, was employed with the advanced reconnaissance, and by his ability and energy proved himself a valuable staff officer. Captain Fawcett, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-general, was also for some time usefully employed with the advanced reconnaissance. Major Goldsworthy, Brigade Major of Cavalry, has neglected no occasion during the campaign of making himself useful. Dr. Lumsdaine, when sanitary officer at Zoulla, by introducing a good system and rules for conservancy, and seeing them carried out, contributed in a very important degree to the healthiness of the garrison and civil inhabitants. I am greatly indebted to Dr. Lumsdaine for his constant attention while forming part of the Head-quarter Staff, and for very valuable voluntary service in many extra duties during the expedition. Major Maude, Deputy Judge Advocate-general, has performed the duties of his office to my entire satisfaction, and has frequently rendered me useful services whilst attending me during the campaign. Captain Young, Senior Paymaster in Abyssinia, has had very responsible duties in keeping the commissariat, the depots, the many columns, and the small posts supplied with money to meet every emergency—duties which he ably and satisfactorily performed. Captain Young accompanied the advance to Magdala. Captain Hand was nominated to the charge of the Highland Train, when the dimensions of the Transport necessitated the appointment of a sub-director on the highlands. He had the advantage of the trained muleteers from the Punjab, many of them old soldiers and accustomed to discipline. The conduct of the muleteers has generally been extremely good, and the services of the Highland Train have been performed in a manner which reflects great credit on Captain Hand, and the officers immediately under him. Captain Griffith, Captain Bainbridge, and Captain Twentymen, Captain Hodges, and Lieutenant Ross have distinguished themselves by their zeal and activity, and deserve special notice. Captain Hand mentions favourably Lieutenant Gaselee, his staff officer, Lieutenants Ramsbottom, Mortimer, Ryves, and Aladie.

In a separate report I have detailed the special services of the officers of the Intelligence department, which have been performed immediately under my own orders, or under the divisional or brigade commanders. I will, therefore, only record here that Mr. Munzinger, the acting British Consul of Massowa, a gentleman well versed in the language of Abyssinia, and the earliest in the field, has rendered valuable service, both in the early reconnaissance and throughout the campaign. Major Grant, c.b., whose African laurels had already been won in another field, Captain Moore, an accomplished Oriental scholar, Meer Akbar Ali; all of these gentlemen have performed very important duties, requiring great tact and judgment. Major Roome, Bombay Staff Corps, Colonel Brazier, Retired List, have also performed very valuable services. It would be difficult to enumerate all Captain Speedy's services—his familiar knowledge of the Amharic language and character of the Abyssinians have rendered him invaluable as an interpreter and envoy. He was already well known by character, and he was immediately accepted by the Abyssinians as a guarantee of good treatment and mutual confidence. I have received the most valuable assistance from the officers of my personal staff. I selected Colonel Fraser, V.C., Commandant at Head-quarters, for the charge of the outposts, a duty of special importance in so intricate a country, which Colonel Fraser performed with increasing vigilance and to my complete satisfaction. Lieutenant-colonel Dillon, military secretary, has been by my side, and has shared my labours from the first preparations for the expedition to its close. I cannot too strongly express my obligation to him. Lieutenant Hozier, Assistant Military Secretary, was obliged, to my regret, to leave the force from ill-health, during the advance beyond Antalo, but not before he had shown himself to be an officer of great energy and practical ability. Lieutenant Tweedie, Political Secretary, has performed his special duties with great ability and to my entire satisfaction. Lieutenant Tweedie attended me in the action of Arogie and at Magdala. Captain Arbutnot, extra aide-de-camp (latterly assistant military secretary), was sent on a special mission to Egypt and Syria, which he executed with much judgment, and returned in time to be present at Magdala. My aides-de-camp, Lieutenant W. Scott, Lieutenant R. Napier, and Cornet Lord Charles Hamilton and Cornet Kennedy, 18th Hussars, have afforded me every satisfaction in the performance of their duties. Lieutenant W. Scott, with my cavalry escort, took part in the investment of Magdala.

I am very happy in this opportunity of saying how cordially Commodore Heath has conducted the naval duties of the expedition in connection with the army. The spirit of their commander has been emulated by the officers and men of the Royal navy under his orders. The labour, under a hot sun, of landing supplies and water, and re-embarking troops, followers, and cattle, has never for a single day ceased since the arrival of the first transport in Annesley Bay. The history of the labour undergone, by which vast quantities of stores and many thousands of men and cattle have been landed and re-embarked without accident, can only be truly told by Commodore Heath himself; but I have much gratification in expressing, on the part of the army, how greatly we are indebted to Commodore Heath and the officers and men of the Royal Navy. Greatly, too, are we indebted to Captain Tryon, R.N., the able director of transports. His thoroughly efficient control of the large fleet under his direction, and his readiness of resource, relieved me from all anxiety in regard to his highly responsible and important office. The campaign has been one of severe military labour from the first landing to the re-embarkation. Every regiment of infantry carried its own pack of tools, and became pioneers, working hardly, whether in the long marches of the advance, or the more trying monotony of the plains of Zoulla. The port of Zoulla, with its landing piers; the railway, with its numerous bridges; the road through the Koomeylee Pass to Antalo and Magdala; the water supply at all the stations; the entrenchments at Addigerat and at Antalo; the commissariat and transport lines, and the camping grounds, where the most perfect order was required to water quickly many thousands of animals; all formed one great military work on which the campaign has been supported.

It would be impossible for me to do full justice to the merits of each portion of the force. All ranks and classes have been inspired with the same honourable spirit, whether in military labour or in conflict with the enemy, and have borne themselves as if success depended on their own individual exertions and devotion. I beg permission gratefully to acknowledge the confidence placed in me by her Majesty's Government for India, and the unhesitating promptitude with which all my requisitions have been complied with. I am deeply sensible of the support and encouragement which I have received from his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge in every stage of the expedition.—I have, &c.,

R. NAPIER, Lieutenant-general Commanding-in-Chief, Abyssinia.

The papers accompanying the despatch of Sir Robert Napier consist of reports from the officers who were in command of the several departments. They fill about twenty pages of the Gazette, and are written by Major-general Sir C. Staveley, Brigadier-general Petrie, Lieutenant-colonel Wallace, R.A., Lieutenant-colonel Milward, R.A., Major-general G. Malcolm, Major-general Russell, Lieutenant-colonel Holland, Lieutenant-colonel A. W. Lucas, S. Currie, Inspector-general of Hospitals, and Lieutenant-colonel St. Clair Wilkins.

KURRACHEE, May 25.—The official correspondence lately published in the local papers, anent the extension of the Sind Railway from Kotree to Mooltan, appears to have disturbed not a little the equanimity of those who drive the "iron horse," and epithets rather "unparliamentary" in their way are freely showered on the head of Major Bonus, R.E., Deputy-Consulting Engineer for Railways in Sind, for his "audaciousness" in addressing his letter No. 147, dated 31st January, 1868, to the commissioner of this province, and propounding therein arguments in respect to the best route for a line of communication with the Punjab, which do not chime in with the opinions entertained by the late Chief Engineer (Mr. John Brunton) on the subject. The following paragraph especially, which occurs in Major Bonus's letter, seems to have given mortal offence:—"The surveys of the Indus Valley line are altogether very unsatisfactory; and perhaps the most unsatisfactory and loosest work of the whole is the section between Sewhan and Sukkur." Mr. Robert Brunton, who has published an elaborate reply to Major Bonus, denies the "truth" of this allegation, "even to an infinitesimal portion of its charge of 'unsatisfactoriness and looseness' in the work done on the surveys," adding that Major Bonus has not the slightest ground upon which to found such an "unprecedented charge against a chief engineer of recognised standing and a staff of fifteen gentlemen, each of whom would scorn to receive salaries without giving in return its value in their best services." I hope the reader will excuse the tautology and bad grammar in Mr. Brunton's style of expressing himself. When a man writes in a temper it is unreasonable to expect him to pay attention to the rules of Lindley Murray, Cobbett, and other people of their class. Mr. Brunton holds himself responsible for the work done on the section of the right bank line from Sewhan to Sukkur, and declares he cannot understand what there is in it to call for Major Bonus's "pointed censure." During the whole survey of the distance between those places, Major Bonus, he tells us, never appeared once on the work. He reminds that officer that "his having journeyed on camels along a country many miles removed from a route he (Mr. Brunton) was travelling on foot with theodolites, levels, and chains, was not exactly the process for rendering himself competent to charge him (Mr. Brunton) with the most unsatisfactory and loosest work." He also reminds the Major that until the "passed cold season of 1867-68 he (the Major) never set foot since the survey began near the route" which Mr. Brunton followed in 1863-64. Then we are treated to a few facts as to his "levels," "plotting," the number of miles of "cross sections" made by him in two months "in search of better ground" (but without avail), and the "flood levels" ascertained and "pegged" through the whole of the "through line" survey; all which Mr. Brunton considers conclusive of the "care and accuracy" of the work done by him; and he concludes his "reply" by again reminding Major Bonus that during the "whole of the three cold seasons' field work" he (Mr. Brunton) "never had the honour of seeing" that officer "once on the work," adding, "As I have seen the printed letter from which the above paragraph is quoted circulating at last amongst the members of the Kurrachee community, I reply also in print, intending to forward you a copy of this, my answer, by the first mail, as also to every person likely to be interested in or influenced by the remarks you have so unwarrantably made." Whether this last threat will demolish the gallant Major, and elicit from him a cry of peccavi, remains to be seen.—Times of India Correspondent.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

A RED SEA TELEGRAPH TO INDIA.

It will not be many months before India will enjoy something like a good working substitute for that line of telegraph which has so long tried the temper of all who have had to use it for mercantile or other private purposes. Large stores of material for the new Russo-Persian line are already on their way from England to Persia through St. Petersburg and Astracan. In October the work of construction will probably begin all along the line, under the supervision of English engineers. To meet the new business expected by this line the Indian Government, we are told, has ordered the laying of another wire from Teheran to Kurrachee. A well-trained staff of telegraphers will ensure something like accuracy, speed, and regularity in the delivery of messages. The charge for a telegram of practicable length will be comparatively low; and, to crown all, it is said that the Russian and Persian Governments have promised to leave this particular line free of interference in time of war.

Altogether, as far as appearances go, the new line would seem to satisfy the requirements of Anglo-Indian customers. Merchants will have a reasonable chance of getting messages delivered in much less than ten or eleven days, and delivered in something like their original form. But alas! the prospect is not all unclouded. Here, as elsewhere, "medio de fonte leporum Surgit amari aliquid." The commercial world is not satisfied. It sees serpents in the path, of which ordinary statesmanship takes small notice. It sets no faith in the promises of a foreign rival, and it has a very strong objection to the possible overhauling of its messages by the agents of any foreign Power. In the House of Commons last Friday, Lord W. Hay and Mr. Crawford gave expression to these ideas in their pleadings for a separate line by the Red Sea. The former showed how the Indo-Turkish line is worked at an actual loss, and how little trust could be placed in an alternative line passing "through a country which was the rival of England in India." The member for the City urged the danger of trusting to a system, "any portion of which was under the control of foreign governments," for the exigencies of war "would at once affect telegraphic communication in Europe." Moreover, people had learned by experience that "commercial messages from England were examined en route on the Continent, and in some instances were handed to the Minister of Trade." Merchants, he avows have "lost all confidence in the present system of transmitting telegrams through the Continent." And well they may, if things do happen thus. The position indeed for them is not enviable. Between the Scylla of ignorant carelessness and the Charybdis of cunning curiosity, they are like to suffer a bad time of it. Turkish officials muddle their telegrams into utter obscurity or forget to forward them at all; and European inspectors want to pry into their commercial secrets, under pretence, we suppose, of ferretting out some political intrigue.

There can be no doubt that a Mediterranean and Red Sea cable would be the surest way of helping them out of their difficulties. In guaranteeing the inviolability of the Russo-Persian line, the Powers concerned no doubt mean what they promise. But would it be wise to trust entirely to their promises in the hour of extreme temptation to break them? The old line seems past mending. A submarine cable passing through Egypt would most likely attract all the business for which Mr. Crawford vouches beforehand; while for all practical purposes it would certainly be less dependent on foreign countenance or the chances of war than the line by the Black Sea. There is every argument in short for laying down such a cable, and latest experience in that direction shows that such a cable could now be laid down at very little risk. But the Government unwisely declines to guarantee the cost, and Sir S. Northcote wisely declines to make up for the shortcomings of his ministerial colleagues. In such a case private enterprise might surely take the venture into its own hands with every certainty of ultimate success.

PROFESSOR WALKER-ARNOTT, OF GLASGOW.

THIS distinguished Professor of Botany had been suffering for a considerable time under a severe and painful illness. At the commencement of summer he made an effort to resume the labours of his class; but it was obvious to all that the effort was attended with much risk, and that the conscientious desire to discharge his duty was impelling him to overtask his strength. After a few days Dr. Cleghorn, an old friend and accomplished botanist, recently returned from India, offered, on learning how matters stood, to undertake the charge of the class; and Dr. Arnott was gratified to find that he could entrust his professional work to one whom he knew so well. On the 13th June symptoms of a dangerous character appeared, and, after sufferings of unusual severity, he died on the 17th.

Dr. George A. Walker-Arnott was born in Edinburgh on the 6th February, 1799; but his early years were chiefly spent on the borders of Fifeshire and Kinross. He entered the University of Edinburgh in 1813, and obtained a distinguished place both in languages and in mathematics, attracting by his eminence in the latter study the special notice of Sir John Leslie. He was admitted a member of the Faculty of Advocates in 1821. The advocate's gown, however, was with him honorary rather than professional, and, as he had a dislike to public speaking, he appeared in it only thrice. His attendance on the lectures of Professor Jameson early imbued him with a love for the study of natural science, especially of mineralogy; but the attractions of botany subsequently prevailed. The lectures of Mr. Stewart, an extra-academical lecturer in Edinburgh, developed his relish for this branch of study, which was subsequently converted into a life-long passion by his visits to France in 1822 and 1825, and his intercourse with the great French botanists whose lectures and herbaria he frequented, and whose botanical excursions he shared. One of his earliest botanical papers "On some Mosses from Rio Janeiro," written in French, appeared in a Paris journal in 1823. In 1825 he made a tour to the South of France and the Pyrenees, in company with Mr. Bentham (now the President of the Linnæan Society), the results of which are recorded in an interesting narrative in the Edinburgh New Philosophical Journal of 1826-7. When in Paris, the kindness of Baron Delessert gave him the opportunity of studying in his rich herbarium. He resided for some time at Montpellier, and in the notes of his tour he institutes an interesting comparison between the botanical gardens of England and the Continent. He afterwards proceeded to Geneva, where the great herbarium of De Candolle furnished him with fresh opportunities of study. In 1829 he visited Russia, and acquired during his residence there considerable knowledge of the language. In 1845 he received the appointment of Professor of Botany in Glasgow. From 1825 to 1845 he was continually occupied in elaborate researches, the results of which were embodied in numerous contributions to the transactions of learned societies. This is not the place to present a list of these; upwards of forty are enumerated in the Catalogue of Scientific Papers, issued by the Royal Society. Of his larger works we may mention the "Prodromus Floræ Indiæ Orientalis," prepared in conjunction with Dr. Wight; his monograph of the Indian Cyperaceæ; his "Botany of Beechey's Voyage," and his "Contributions to the Flora of South America and the Islands of the Pacific," along with Sir William Hooker; the article "Botany," in the seventh edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica;" and the well-known "British Flora of Hooker and Arnott." It is a remarkable feature in the scientific work of Dr. Arnott, that so much was done in conjunction with others; his single-hearted devotion to science was conspicuous in his cordial co-operation with men of different nations and different temperaments, such as Sir William Hooker, Drs. Greville and Wight, Roper and Nees von Esenbeck. Indeed, any survey of what Dr. Walker-Arnott has done for the progress of botany would be incomplete if it was confined to the notice of his published works, numerous and important though they are. Account must be taken of the spirit in which he worked, of the extent of the researches which he carried out, of the immense correspondence which he kept up, and of the aid and encouragement which he was ever ready to give to young and rising botanists around him.

The single-mindedness with which he gave up his time to any one desirous of information was beyond all praise. Of late years he devoted himself specially to the study of Diatoms. Numerous papers on this subject have appeared of late years in the Microscopic Journal, but by far the greater portion of his observations were communicated in letters to his scientific friends in England, on the Continent, and in America.

As a professor, he was much respected and esteemed; and he had the gratification of imbuing many youthful minds with a permanent love for his favourite study. As a botanist, his careful habits of observation, and minute accuracy of description, render his works peculiarly valuable; and his reputation in this respect is quite as great on the Continent as in this country.

THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.—II.

MR. ARBUTHNOT and Sir B. Frere, the two dissentients from the report of the Special Committee on the future government of Bengal, are entirely at one in their objections to the plan of maintaining for Bengal a Lieutenant-governor only without a Council, and of making Calcutta the permanent headquarters, if not of the Viceroy himself, at any rate of his Supreme Council. Both too protest strongly against transferring the city of Calcutta, from the hands of the local to those of the Central Government. In view of the intimate connection that exists "between the planters in the provinces and the mercantile community of Calcutta," such a step, according to Mr. Arbuthnot, would cause "the greatest inconvenience." Sir H. B. Frere is yet more emphatic. This "lopping off from the Lieutenant-governor all control over the natural capital of Bengal" would lead to results which no Lieutenant-governor, past or present, "would desire or would have tolerated." It would be like attempting to ease the hands of the Irish Viceroy, by placing Dublin city "under the direct control of the Cabinet, with a separate minister for the government of Dublin." How many able men would accept the Lord-Lieutenancy of the one country or the Lieutenant-governorship of the other on such terms? The scheme in question would further tend to drag the Viceroy down from his present height of impartial supervision into the midst of those differences between the High Court and the local executive which the Lieutenant-governor's loss of all authority in his own capital could not but aggravate. What sort of respect too would the High Court be likely to show to the new-made Deputy-governor of Calcutta? And how could the limits of the new authority be so defined as to prevent continual clashing between two neighbouring Powers on all kinds of questions in which both would have equal interest, and the final settlement of which would bring so much more work upon the Viceroy's already burdened shoulders?

With regard to the best form of local government for Bengal both dissentients agree in recommending "a full Government," that is "a Governor with two members of Council" according to Mr. Arbuthnot, with three or four according to Sir H. B. Frere. Greater efficiency, thinks the latter, in the government of so vast, rich, and populous a province as Bengal, "a country which, except in its capacity for rebellion, would certainly rank, if it could be dropped into Europe, amongst the richest, largest, most populous, and not least civilised nations of this continent," must be secured, "not by intruding a corner of the Government of India into the domestic administration of Bengal, but by allowing the Governor in Council to manage the really Imperial work of India, and by leaving the strengthened Government of Bengal the time and power necessary for the Herculean task of local administration."

How Herculean that task should be has never perhaps been more tellingly yet concisely shown than in Sir Bartle's elaborate survey of Bengal as it is. This part alone of his exhaustive memorandum fills about four folio pages of close print. One long extract from it, which appeared in our last issue, may stand as a fair sample of the whole. From the picture therein drawn of Bengal physical, social, and political, of her great size, her long sea-board, her wealth of cities, rivers, natural products, her forty-two and a half millions of people speaking many different languages, the high intellectual development of the Bengalis proper, and the zeal with which many of them enter into all kinds of abstract speculation in morals and philosophy, Sir H. B. Frere proceeds to point out the absurd disproportion between the political wants of such a province and the scant machinery employed in meeting them. To govern these millions we allow, as chiefs, one English gentleman who must have lived 25 or 30 years "in one of the most exhausting climates in the world," aided by 232 covenanted civilians of all ranks, and by 861 uncovenanted servants, of whom more than half are English or Eurasian. Besides these, Calcutta has some 80 honorary magistrates and 105 justices of the peace, who have "vast unrecognised illegal power," but very little legal, and no semblance of administrative authority.

Such a government, in spite of recent attempts to improve it, must break down at need, as it has several times done already. Bengal "is still practically ungoverned." The Special Committee would "mend matters by docking the Lieutenant-governor of his capital, and by giving him a little more aid here and there to get through his work on the present system." It would try to relieve him at the expense of the overworked Government of India. And yet the load which more than ten years ago broke down "one of the greatest administrators India ever had," has on the whole been so little reduced, that the present Viceroy, a very glutton for work, "declares himself overtasked." What with the great growth of public correspondence, with the vast increase of trade and consequent revenue, with the development of public works, railways, telegraphs, of post-offices, schools and colleges, and of general legislation, the Viceroy's hands, "in a time of peace and of no special strain," are still overfull. And yet it is proposed that to his other duties he should add "the direct government of a great city like Calcutta."

Sir H. B. Frere would reverse the process. Instead of dragging the Viceroy "back to the task from which he partially escaped some years ago," he would yet further emancipate Bengal, and enable her to act with less frequent reference to the Governor-general. An autocratic Governor or Lieutenant-governor however, without some sort of council, would never solve the present difficulty. No one man, however able, could avoid failure in such a country, if he had nothing to aid him "but his own intellect and the departmental experience of the secretaries and clerks under him." Sir B. Frere demurs entirely to "the fashionable doctrine" that a single governor is "a good or possible permanent form of government for any civilised and settled portion of India." Employed at first as a temporary measure, such a government can seldom last beyond the first ten years after conquest. In time a few independent Englishmen coming into the country necessitate the development of a more complex system, as in the case of the North-West Provinces, the Deccan, and all our later acquisitions. No sane man would now think of reverting to "the most complete and most successful of the despotic governments of former days," that of Sindh under Sir Charles Napier. In Bengal however we have been "unconsciously trying" that system for some years past, with the most disastrous results. During the last fifty years the old system that worked successfully in the days of Warren Hastings and Cornwallis has been gradually exchanged for the rule of a single administrator, always indeed a man of first-rate ability, wide experience, and varied knowledge. And yet the issue has been such as every one knows; and the plan now proposed would merely aggravate all the obvious causes of past failures.

Touching the quasi-autocratic form of government, of which the North-West Provinces are quoted as a most successful instance, Sir B. Frere objects that the system there is still young, and that "no administration could have been more surprised by rebellion, none could have been more powerless to arrest or confront it," than that same Government proved in 1857. To a far older province than that, to one not unlike Bengal in size and population, however different in minor respects, to the Presidency of Madras namely, would he look for the true model of an administration befitting the needs and reviving the earlier experiences of Bengal. No other Government has been so uniformly and steadily successful for so long a time. Nowhere else does the Government pay more heed to what the natives of the country think and desire. "As far as the local Government can secure them, there is a good police, a fair administration of justice, an improving public revenue, comparatively comfortable relations between natives and Europeans, and steady if not rapid improvement in almost every branch of internal government." The work of the Madras Government comes before the Supreme and the Home Councils in a form much more complete and better digested than that of any other province. It is also in spirit the most economical Government, and the least subject to sudden and violent changes of policy. And all this happens so, because the machinery of government in Madras bears "some sort of reasonable proportion" to the task it has to accomplish.

Some of our best Indian administrators have no doubt succeeded without a regular Council, through the tact and power of sympathy which have enabled them to "find a Council in every hunting-field and by the side of every village well." But gifts like theirs are very rare, and the only condition on which most men can be trusted with great governing powers is, that they should be bound to consult other opinions than their own. Nothing could be more fatal to our rule in India than the autocracy of an able well-meaning man devoid of the gifts in question. In the East, as in Europe, a sympathetic appreciation of popular feeling has been the one thing needful to the success of despots like Runjeet Sing and Dost Mohammed. Nothing can be more absurd than the popular notion of an autocrat enforcing his own will against the opinions and desires of his people at large. Nor could any one man, "however able, accomplished, or experienced," control successfully, without a Council, so large and complicated a community as that of Bengal.

The following advantages, according to Sir H. B. Frere, would accrue to Bengal from a Government like that of Madras. No great interest would remain unrepresented and ignored. Measures would be more carefully discussed, and less liable to frequent changes. There would ensue a sort of stable policy, which no mental difference between one governor and another would materially affect. The Government itself would carry more weight, and any able, well-meaning, industrious chief might then succeed in governing Bengal in a way impossible under the present system, or with the changes proposed by the Special Committee.

Sir Bartle Frere winds up his masterly memorandum by a few brief suggestions on minor points. Assam and all those districts where the language spoken is more or less Turanian, should be placed under a Chief Commissioner, subject to the Government of Bengal. Behar should not be transferred to the North-West Provinces, which are already too large for their present rule; but it might perhaps be placed with Chota Nagpoor and the Santhal country under a separate Chief Commissioner. A Financial Commissioner, with a seat in Council, should supersede the Board of Revenue. A travelling commission should help the Government in its proceedings with regard to the subdivision of districts. The offices of judge and magistrate should be kept apart, and no one should be allowed to change about from one to the other. One mode of keeping magistrates longer in their several districts might be found in regulating the pay of the lower ranks by length of service alone.

This able memorandum is followed by a well-reasoned minute from Mr. Maine, the law member of the Supreme Council. He too dissents from many of the conclusions of the Committee, especially from those which concern the Government of India. To tie down the Indian Government to Calcutta, and to hand over to the Viceroy some of the duties now discharged by the Lieutenant-governor, this seems to Mr. Maine's thinking a rash exchange of a successful for a very doubtful experiment. Official migrations from the capital to the Hills have long been the rule in all the Presidencies. Sir J. Lawrence merely carried out upon system what before had been less regularly done, and first set the good example of taking his Council with him, thus putting "an end to a costly and mischievous fiction." For the work of the Supreme Council has become mainly administrative, each member taking a department of public business under his charge. The severance therefore of the Viceroy from his Council would only "dislocate the whole machinery of Government." For the first time in recent history the Supreme Government is "abreast of its work and without arrears." In taking his Council with him the Viceroy has restored a "reality," the councillors now doing the work which less responsible secretaries used to do.

It is good, no doubt, continues Mr. Maine, to have a European community influencing the policy of the Central Government. But there are many questions regarding the Punjab, the North-West, and other provinces, which attract small interest in Calcutta itself. Bengal moreover is in many ways unlike all other parts of India; and hence a Government permanently seated in Calcutta must fall into serious mistakes in its dealings with countries outside Bengal Proper. And the natives of other provinces will never, if they can help it, come near Calcutta to take a part in the business of government. On the other hand, Mr. Maine denies from his own experience that the natives generally dislike the climate of the Hills. As for official ability, you may meet more officials at Simla in a fortnight than you will in Calcutta in six months.

On the question of accessibility, Mr. Maine affirms that, when the railway is once open to Umballa, "the advantage in accessibility from the greatest part of India will be decidedly with Simla." The one drawback to Simla is the absence of "unofficial mercantile and legal opinion." The present system might however be improved by forming yearly a great standing-camp at one or another of the great cities in the plains, where the Government on its way down from Simla could transact all business specially affecting native interests. "The Supreme Government would thus become peripatetic."

In proposing to bring Calcutta under the Supreme Government, the Committee would virtually place the persons of Europeans under one jurisdiction and leave all their peculiar interests under another. This would in no way lessen, it would rather increase the present burdens of the Lieutenant-governor. On the Supreme Government its moral effect would turn out bad, for in getting mixed up with local questions between English and native it would lose its character, if not its desire for impartial dealing. And how indeed can you sever Calcutta from Bengal without needless increase of outlay and without unfair limitations?

Bengal, says Mr. Maine, ought to have a full Government, like that of Madras or Bombay. English opinion understands the meaning and powers of a Governor, but practically ignores Lieutenant-governors and Chief Commissioners; hence the Viceroy gets often blamed for results beyond his control. The Government of India can only be brought into harmony with English opinion by giving Bengal a real and tangible Government of its own.

BONUS COMPENSATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The very tender way in which upon two recent occasions certain high authorities have been disposed to deal with possible claims for compensation on account of contemplated changes shows us how highly favoured some servants of the public are in comparison with others, who, it must be admitted, are equally deserving of consideration. When the debate on purchase in the army took place in the House of Commons it was—and that without question—conceded, that before purchase could be abolished it would be necessary to compensate officers for the value of their commissions. Compensation was to be given in full, notwithstanding that the practice of paying a fancy price for a commission—a sum over regulation price—is strictly prohibited at the Horse Guards, and is sanctioned only by custom. Ten millions of money was the enormous sum to which it was roughly estimated these compensation payments would probably amount. Yet a very large minority of the House was ready to pay it. In fact, the country being bound to compensate in full all claims on this head, and so enter upon a large expenditure, was evidently the one single argument that drove a majority of the House to reject Mr. Trevelyan's motion.

In a correspondence respecting the probable abolition of agencies held by certain clerks in the Foreign Office, we learn that Lord Stanley liberally upholds the claims of those serving under him to compensation, should the agencies be done away with, as he is of opinion that the practice of clerks holding agencies "is in pursuance of a system recognised for many years and sanctioned by successive Secretaries of State."

Thus we see that the officers of the much-favoured Royal army—so called in contradistinction to the local army of India—and the clerks in the Foreign Office are not likely to be unjustly dealt with, inasmuch as before any change likely to injure their future prospects takes place, their claims will have every consideration paid to them.

How different was the treatment received by officers of the Indian army at the hands of Sir Charles Wood, and, with one or two exceptions, of the members of his complaisant council! These gentlemen, secure in their councillors' seats, and in the enjoyment of a comfortable official salary, thought proper to shut their eyes very hard indeed to the grievances of Indian officers. Do what they could they really could not see them. And the result of their noble-hearted counsels was, that all claims on account of injustice done to a large body of loyal and deserving public servants at the time of the reorganisation of the Indian army were steadily resisted. Parliament was then inundated with petitions; Royal Commission followed Royal Commission; official labour in the India department, both at home and abroad, was incalculably increased. And, finally, patchwork and subsequent concessions, in order to remedy grievances which it had been stated did not exist, and which must have been accurately understood in all their bearings by the military members of the Council, one an ex-adjutant-general, were grafted upon a measure which, though necessary in the first instance for the interests of the empire, should have been well-considered in all its details before it was carried into execution.

But of all the grievances of Indian officers there was not one so persistently ignored as that which had been preferred on account of the depreciated value of their commissions in the regimental market. These commissions, which previous to the reorganisation represented a solid sum of money, suddenly became not worth a brass farthing. Sir Charles Wood, taking advantage of a decision that had been given in the Court of Queen's Bench, informed the House of Commons that the practice of paying a senior officer to retire was illegal, and that therefore no compensation could be allowed by the Government on this account. Of this "illegal" practice the Court of Directors had written in the following terms:—"We see no necessity for interfering with the arrangement which the junior officers of a regiment may make with a senior officer on his retirement. . . . We shall therefore continue to suspend the operation of the Rule, unless the financial necessity referred to (and of which due notice will be given) shall at a future period be realised. It is needless to say that no such notice ever was given, and consequently on the faith of this despatch, previous to the Amalgamation, and on the faith of the Parliamentary guarantee assuring all privileges as to pension, service, &c., even subsequent to it, officers of the late Company's Army confidently invested their hard-earned savings in the purchase of their senior brother officers.

A gracious act of Lord Cranborne raised the hopes of Indian officers. Taking a liberal and statesmanlike view of the subject, he reversed the decision of his predecessor, and directed that the claims should be investigated with the view to compensation, as "her Majesty Government was unwilling to leave the officers generally any ground of complaint." This was in August, 1866. The letters that have appeared in your columns will have shown how the hopes raised by these words have been dashed to the ground, and how bitter is the disappointment universally felt. Looking at the instructions originally given, and the illiberal construction put upon them by the Supreme Government in India, it would appear as if in some quarter or another it had been determined to neutralise Lord Cranborne's generous concession by rules to the committees, which, as carried out, render any measure to effect the redress of this particular grievance a ruthless mockery of the justice long deferred.—I am, Sir, &c., X.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

IS QUININE A CERTAIN CURE FOR FEVER?

The Delhi Gazette, notwithstanding all the laudations quinine has received, confesses scepticism as to whether it is the infallible cure for fever it is asserted to be. Hearing persons remark they cannot take quinine, or that it does them no good, is sufficiently common to cast a doubt on the supposed universal powers of this remedy. Moreover, very recently more than one medical man has recorded his want of confidence in quinine. Thus Mons. de Chambas used to cure his fever patients in Algeria with water, labelled protoxide of hydrogen! Mr. Lowe, of Madras, writing of Bangalore fevers, remarks:—"In my hands quinine has neither proved prophylactic nor antiperiodic, but it has shown that positive harm may attend its administration." Again, Dr. Livingstone states, the men of his party were equally liable to recurring attacks of African fever whether they took quinine or not. Dr. Rogers, who had much experience of remittent fever as surgeon to the Panama Railway employees, appears to have little confidence in its efficacy. Still more recently, Dr. Beatty, of Bombay, recommending nitrate of potash as the remedy, stated he had "lost all faith in quinine." Similarly many of the best native hukeems despise the drug, asserting that it drives the disease inwards. Another curious feature connected with the subject is the immense number of substances which have at various times been brought forward as cures for malarious fevers. Opium, arsenic, fuming nitric acid, strychnine, potash, alcohol, charcoal, cobwebs, black pepper, and dozens of other materials, both vegetable and mineral, have been vaunted as antiperiodics. But the fact is, that the great majority of fevers have a tendency to terminate in health. Nine cases of simple intermittent fever out of ten would terminate favourably, and the individual get quite well, whether he took water or quinine, cobwebs or charcoal. Hence the special virtues which have been attributed to many of these so-called antiperiodics. Hence also, doubtless, quinine has similarly acquired much undeserved celebrity. There are natives, Brahmmins chiefly, every day suffering from fever, and who steadily, from religious motives or other causes, refuse the medicine of the European, even in the shape of quinine. Yet these men, there is authority for stating, recover from their ailments, at least as quickly as others dosed with the bitter alkaloid of the chinchona. It is strange that up to the present time no organised plan has been carried out by which the action of quinine on fevers as compared with that of other remedies can be compared. Individuals have not been wanting who have attempted something of the kind, and it is on their reports that most of what we know or suppose about quinine has been denied. But we require more authoritative experiments. Let all the uncomplicated fever cases in several large hospitals be divided into three classes. Let one-third be treated with quinine, another third with other presumed antiperiodics, and a third remain without treatment, or give them protoxide of nitrogen to drink, as Mons. Chambas did. And these experiments should be tried under the immediate superintendence of a committee, composed of those without preconceived opinions on the subjects. At the risk of exposing ourselves to the indignation of "the faculty," we confess the heretical idea, that very great difference would not be discernible in the number or length of the febrile attacks, of these three classes. The most recent experiments regarding the action of quinine do not support the presumed powers of this agent. Professor Binz, of Bonn, who has latterly investigated the subject, states that all the permanganates, of potash especially, are more powerful than quinine in arresting putrescence and fermentation, and in destroying animalculæ life. Again, corrosive sublimate exercises a twice greater power in preventing the formation of yeast sporules in fermentation than quinine. Conia, the active principle of the hemlock, exceeds quinine in its peculiar power on the blood globules. Medical men are indeed not yet agreed whether quinine has a sedative or a stimulating action.

OFFICIAL NURSING IN NATIVE STATES.

The Adebe Hind, referring to the opinion of Sir J. Lawrence in favour of making public civil cases triable in native States, in order that the acts of chiefs should be made known to all, says that the comfort and ease enjoyed under British rule is not to be found under native rule, and that the laws and regulations introduced by the English have never been known before; the writer further remarks that the welfare of the people is desired by Government; and that they, the people, are fully aware of it. Viewing the matter in this light, the writer thinks it strange that Hindoostanee chiefs and their dependents should be dissatisfied with the English rule, as they must know that all is done for their benefit, and for the good of their country, &c. The writer goes on to say that "what displeases Hindoostanee chiefs is, that when one dies, and his heir is a minor, the Government sees the necessity of interference; and when this is done, those bad characters who are always on the look-out for such an opportunity at once "got it to eat, and let others eat too;" and with flattering speeches to the Hakim gain his confidence, and soon bring him to their way of thinking. They make complaints against chiefs and their loyal subjects to these gentlemen, who do not understand the covert acts of such people, because they are themselves fair-dealing and honest; and this is the way the designers work, until disputes and difficulties arise, when they make the most of them for their own benefit. In this way they contrive to mislead the Hakim into thinking ill of the chiefs; and the result is, that the management of the State falls into their own hands, when the chief becomes little better than a prisoner in their estimation. In this the chief is not to blame, for if he is displaced at it, he has a right to be so; especially one who in the time of another more powerful sits much depressed, and cannot raise his head, &c. Now the Government is bound to prevent one party from putting this pressure upon another; full inquiry should be made, the persons already noticed above should be kept aloof, and the interests of the chief should be looked to in every way. Another cause of discontent among chiefs is political officers introducing and carrying out English law and custom in native States, thus interfering with private and old established customs. As regards this, it is necessary to act as much as can be done like Hindoostanee chiefs, and to create or cultivate their friendship, instead of treating them with haughtiness and pride. The welfare and interests of the chiefs should also be borne in mind, so that the excellence of the Government may be well represented to their minds. Now, we ask, when a chief is happy, and his dependents and tenantry satisfied, in which grade is the good name of Government? and what grade the praise from Hindoostanee chiefs due to the Government? and how long will the intercourse with the Hakim be withheld from them?

THE SUPREME COUNCIL.

The Friend of India submits that the Council as it stands approximates more nearly to the idea of a cabal than to any other body which is known to the English Constitution; and this state of things will continue unless some steps are taken to put the public in possession of the views which are expressed by our most experienced statesmen on every side of every public question. The existing state of things as regards the Indian Council was brought about by the constitutional changes which were made in 1861. It will be remembered that in the very teeth of an alarming financial crisis, which necessitated a heavy income-tax and excessive reductions of expenditure, Sir Charles Wood thought proper to override the experience of every Governor-general from Wellesley to Canning, and by accepting a strained interpretation of the treaty of 1799, funded half a million sterling out of the Indian revenues for the benefit of the Mysore family. Then indeed an independent spirit of opposition did find expression in the old Legislative Council, in the form of protesting against such an uncalled-for measure; and then, by way of proving to the world how completely he was in the right, Sir Charles Wood abolished the Council and created a new one, and subsequently modified the legitimate powers of the Governor-general, and exercised the authority of an autocrat. From that date the voice of constitutional opposition has been virtually either silenced or ignored, even in the Legislative Council; and the so-called debates cannot be regarded as fair discussions, but rather take the form of studied dialogues, in which the experience of independent members is too often overridden by intellectual ability. The forthcoming measures of Sir Stafford Northcote will undoubtedly aggravate the existing evil. We do not so much object to the nomination of members of the Executive Council by the Secretary of State, because to some extent public opinion will control the selection. Neither should we object to the exercise of larger powers on the part of the Viceroy over his Council, provided Sir John Lawrence was immortal, or could leave his prestige and experience, as the prophet left his prophetic powers to his immediate successor. But the enlarged Viceregal powers are to be granted at the very time when a new Viceroy will be at least capable of exercising them; whilst the constitutional powers of members of Council will be weakened or taken away just at the very time when they will be most required. Such a temporising policy, based solely upon considerations of the present moment, and without reference even to the immediate future, is open, as we have shown, to very grave objection. Every constitutional principle is ignored for the sake of crushing out every element of independent opposition from the Indian Council, and that opposition will consequently find a voice elsewhere, where it will do an infinity of damage by deluding the public opinion which it would otherwise be in a position to educate and reform. If the existence of two parties were occasionally recognised in the Council the two parties would be represented by the press, and the wheels of State would move easily; but already there is a growing opposition, which is smouldering now because there is general confidence in the present Viceroy, but which will prove a thorn in the side of his successors unless a similar element in the Government itself is accepted and acknowledged.

HARD WORK.

The Friend of India readily admits that a very large amount of hard work is got through by public men in England. But it is not the continuous and unmitigated grind which it is in India, but rather spasmodic efforts of certain times and seasons depending in a great measure upon Parliament. Then again it is cut up by holidays and vacations; by trips to watering places, pleasant sojournings in the country, and even continental tours. But in India the work is much the same from day to day; whilst the holidays are nothing more than rest from labour, and the leave is sick leave. Take the Queen's birthday for instance. In England it is a genuine holiday, which may be spent in a thousand different pleasures, for the country is arrayed at this moment in all the summer glory of an English May. The same holiday in India, however, can only be devoted to indoor amusements, and must involve as little exertion as possible; whilst country amusements and country air are alike out of the question. Whilst such is the normal condition of things, we are scarcely surprised that Sir Stafford Northcote, like his predecessors, should be astonished at the prodigious powers of work which are displayed by the members of his Council. Old Indian officials, who must have had good constitutions to have so long outlived an Indian career, who have been trained to continuous work, and under the copper sky of India have had but little notion of relaxation, will doubtless get through an enormous amount of labour, with a zeal and enthusiasm which must surprise statesmen accustomed to the listless and fashionable style of doing business which has long prevailed in public offices in England. They work like men panting for promotion, rather than like conscientious officials going through their daily routine of duty. "Many of the members," says Sir Stafford Northcote, "work as hard as any clerks or secretaries I have known in any public office; and, combined with the amount of work they do as departmental officers, they afford most valuable assistance as advisers to the Secretary of State." We are glad to see Sir Stafford Northcote stand up thus manfully for his Council, and that he duly estimates its value. It may, however, be true that the Council is occasionally obstructive, just as it is true that the Secretary of State is occasionally rash, and too ready to listen to a popular outcry, rather than to views based upon local experience. In fact, we concur generally in the idea that the executive administration of India should be controlled, not by a Council alone, nor by a Secretary of State alone, but by a Secretary of State in Council. Moreover, the value of an opposition in the Indian Council is more felt in England than in this country. The varied opinions of individual members are more widely known both to Parliament and the press, and serve to educate and inform public opinion upon matters upon which a woful experience but too generally prevails. In India the same power of hard work is unquestionably displayed more or less by every member of Council, and especially by the Viceroy; but practically there is less publicity in the proceedings of Government, and they are referred to England without any enlightened expression of public opinion. The consequence is that when they are brought under discussion in the Council at home, less stress is laid upon the opinions themselves than upon the individuals by whom those views are enunciated. We have, however, sufficiently expatiated upon the advantages of a constitutional element of opposition in our Indian councils, and until the value of that element is more generally appreciated we must even be content to go on as we are.

NEWS FROM THE NORTH-WEST.—Ameer Shere Ali has reached Candahar with all his army and artillery. He has made some stay there, and has propounded some excellent arrangements for the government of the district. It is reported that Sirdar Abdool Rahman Khan has retired from Balkh by way of Bamecan, and has reached Cabool with his forces. Before he left he called the Ameer of Budakhshun, and giving him 8,000 men, made him Lieutenant of Turkestan during his, the Sirdar's, absence. Ameer Mahommed Azim Khan is still at Cabool. He has taken Rs. 3,00,000 from the Sirdars and merchants of the city to provide for the wants of his army. He has also, for military purposes, seized upon all the horses and ponies he could find. There was an attempt to bring about a peace between Shere Ali and Azim Khan, but it has not succeeded, nor indeed is any such attempt likely to succeed. Both sides are preparing for a final effort. Every day's delay, however, diminishes the strength of Ameer Azim Khan, and adds to that of his rival. Should the English assist Azim Khan he might yet win, but should they leave him to himself he must inevitably be defeated. From the frontier there is a report that the Moulvies of Bonair went in a deputation to the Akhoond of Swat, with a request that he would institute a jehad against the English. The Moulvies said at first that the English had made preparations for war, and had taken various hostile measures, but that they were now quite quiet, and that such being the case the Moulvies wished to take the initiative. The Akhoond, however, replied that the time was not favourable, and advised peace. He grounded his arguments on the fact that in Bokhara and Cabool wars were being waged, and that it was not wise to add to the flame. Again, the ryots were at present engaged in the labours of the fields, and could not be spared for military operations. Should they, however, be bent on war, they might wait till the cold weather, when they could follow their own inclinations. Should the English attack them in the meantime they could, of course, defend themselves; but they ought not, in his, the Akhoond's, opinion, to assume the initiative.—Englishman.

STATION TALK.

SIRSA, May 21.—Yesterday evening, between five and six o'clock, a terrific hail-storm occurred, which deserves notice. It commenced with a dust-storm, and in a few minutes it became so dark that candles had to be lighted. That venerable and oft-quoted party, "the oldest inhabitant," declares that such large hailstones have never been seen in these parts before. I saw some nearly as large as a fowl's egg. The damage done to the public buildings is considerable, but our pretty little church seems to have suffered the most; upwards of a hundred panes of glass have been smashed to bits. Hundreds of small birds have been killed. Some of the hailstones weighed as much as two chittacks (four ounces). During the storm the thermometer fell from 92 to 85 degrees.

DALHOUSIE, May 22.—I regret very much to inform you of a serious accident which occurred the evening before last to Mr. Ferguson, the missionary at Chumba, whilst on his way into Dalhousie. Mr. Ferguson was walking along the new road which is in course of construction between Chumba and this place, when in crossing one of the unfinished parts his foot slipped and he was precipitated about one hundred feet into the khud below, breaking two of his ribs, besides sustaining other damage. He was found in this state shortly after the accident took place by Colonel Reid, who happened to be encamped near the spot, and immediately conveyed to Mrs. Prinsep's house, which is the first house met with on coming into Dalhousie. Here we may be sure the sufferer will meet with every attention and aid his case may require, but it is reported his injuries are very severe, and that he lies in a precarious state. I trust to be able to report a better account shortly. The weather continues unusually stormy and wet for the season of the year. General Rainier has just returned from a tour of inspection to Dhurmsala, the Kangra Valley, Bukloh, &c., and I hear shortly intends returning to Meean Meer.

UMRITSUR, May 23.—I see you referred a day or two ago in an editorial paragraph to my remarks about the Raja of Kupoorhalla, and deprecate any agitation of the question of the dismemberment of his territory according to the decision of the Governor-general. You are probably not aware that Sir John Lawrence has only carried out the decision of the Marquis of Dalhousie some thirteen years ago, and that the Raja has no one to thank but himself for the consequences of alienating the goodwill of his brothers. Lest you and the public may imagine I am writing without book, and in justification of the opinion I ventured to give some days ago, I will quote the text of the report of the Chief Commissioner of the Punjab on the subject, as it will show that the Governor-general has full warrant for the orders he has issued. It is mere consideration for the rank and position of the Raja that has induced his Excellency to direct the suspension of these orders on the earnest representation of the chief. He can have no reason for thinking that they will be reversed. The case is too strong, as proved by the following extract from the official papers of the day:—"In 1855 a long standing dispute of much importance between the Raja of Aloowallah and his youngest brother was brought to a termination. The father shortly before his demise had endeavoured to have his youngest son declared his heir and successor in the chieftainship; and on this arrangement being objected to by the British Government he made a will dismembering the territory, and leaving large jagheers to his two youngest sons, independent of all control by his successor. After the father's death the new chief vainly endeavoured to have this will set aside. It had been made with the knowledge of British officers, and being undoubtedly genuine, as such was upheld by Government, who declared, however, that so long as the three brothers lived in amity its provisions need not be enforced. Afterwards, when the youngest brother claimed his share, lands to that extent were made over to him." The Raja chose to quarrel with his second brother, Sirdar Bikrama Sing, and the natural consequences has been that he has also claimed his share under the will in virtue of Government decision thirteen years ago, and how his claims could be resisted it is rather difficult to understand.

CENTRAL PROVINCES, May 23.—The Government of India have, I hear, allowed the local Government to appropriate half the revenue to be realised by the recently introduced pandari-tax for local purposes, and Mr. Morris has, with his usual broad-minded policy, determined not to waste the money by distributing it in small sums to all districts, but to spend the whole amount, which will not be less than three lakhs, on one work, which will be decided upon after the receipt of lists, showing the three most important public works required for each division. Here is a nice piece of work for our municipalities. The sewage of all towns is at once to be brought into use in experimental farms to be established at all towns, and one "willing" member is to be told off specially to supervise arrangements. The delectable duty will of course be steadily refused by all the native municipal commissioners, and in municipal towns where there are no Europeans, the question will maintain a statu quo position. Our Aryan brethren acknowledge our desire to teach them self-government, and yet in so important a matter as this, of establishing sewage farms, they will not aid us; it is too bad. The only remedy is, I think, to insist upon all natives desirous of Government service to study and to pass an examination on the system of advancing agriculture by the utilisation of sewage. Wouldn't I like to see Bengalee baboos, and Moulvies, and Pundits, studying the system on a sewage farm. The report of the provincial ethnological committee upon the papers furnished them, as well as upon the aboriginal specimens brought to the Jubbulpore Exhibition, at Mr. George Campbell's suggestion, has now been published here. Mr. Lyall, Berar Commissioner, presided over the committee. The wild tribes have been divided into two great classes—the Kolarians, or Northern division of the aborigines of India, comprising the Sonthals, Kolo, Moondahs, Koorkoos, Bheels, Bhoomiyas, Bhoes, Mairs, and Meenas; and the Dravidians, the Southern division, or people of Tamil tongue, embracing the Oraons, Gonds, Khonds, and South Peninsula aborigines. Some of these tribes are, again, split up into communities, and the traces of other tribes have, on the other hand, been obliterated. The report furnishes some interesting tables regarding the customs and the physique of each race. The average height of those examined in these provinces seems to be five feet three inches; they are well made; most of them have beards and moustaches; all have the moustache, but the absence of whiskers is a marked feature. It is said that cholera is prevalent on the road from Jubbulpore to Soonie, and that cases have occurred at both stations. Travellers from and to Bombay should exercise the necessary precautions, when travelling between the said two stations, to keep off contagion. There is every hope, however, of the epidemic, if I may so call it, abating, as the authorities are on the alert, and, rain having fallen for the last two or three days, the atmosphere has been considerably cooled. I have casually learnt that cholera has also appeared amongst the European troops at Jubbulpore, and carried off some victims, but will not vouch for the accuracy of the latter portion until I hear from there again. The Government of India are said to have indented on these provinces for one or two officers, experienced in land settlements, to be sent to Burmah, and Mr. Augustus Russell, of the uncovenanted service, is said to be one of those selected by Mr. Morris for deputation.

PESHAWUR, May 25.—The almost sudden death of Col. Butler, of H.M.'s 36th regiment, occurred a few days ago. The cause is supposed to have been disease of the heart. He has left behind a wife and a large family to lament his loss. The health of the garrison is keeping good. Among the Europeans there have been several cases of ephemeral fever, but none of any moment. The weather is still for the season very pleasant; evenings, nights, and mornings cool; 80 degrees of heat in the house at noon. During the week there were some heavy showers of rain and a hailstorm. There was a parade of all the troops in the brigade, in honour of her Majesty's birthday, this morning, under the command of the Brigadier-general. The Major-general has gone to Cashmere, and does not return for five months. A report has been in circulation for some days that Assistant-surgeon Mackertish, at Bunnoo, has been stabbed by a Pathan, but no details have come to hand. The rapidity with which the barracks forming a segment of the fort enclosure are assuming a state of completion is exceedingly satisfactory. They are very fine, spacious structures; and they will be occupied by European soldiers before next hot weather. There are very great difficulties in the way of building in this part of India; workmen are very bad and very scarce, and with such available resources as they have, the D.P.W. appear rather more vigorous and expeditious here, on the confines of Central Asia, than in Hindoostan. It does not seem certain by any means that the whole scheme of the "enclosure" will be carried out to completion. Nor does it seem advisable to do so, since the Government have determined to bring the railway into this garrison. Knock down some of the mud hovels called houses, give us good drainage and good clean water, bring in a railway, and we might do well without more barracks.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DEATH AT AHMEDABAD.—We regret to hear of the death at Ahmedabad of Lieutenant-Colonel C. G. Walcott, of the 14th Brigade, Royal Artillery. The deceased officer had seen much service both in the Crimea and during the mutiny-campaign in 1857-58.

THE POLITICAL AGENCY AT BAGDAD.—The Pioneer learns by telegram that Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Herbert, agent of the Governor-general with the King of Oude, has been appointed political agent and Consul-general in Turkish Arabia (Bagdad), in succession to Colonel Sir A. B. Kemball.

THE SUBORDINATE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—The Delhi Gazette has very great pleasure in announcing that an order will soon be out sanctioning an increase of pay in the Subordinate Medical Department. The increased expenditure to be sanctioned amounts to a considerable sum, altogether upwards of a lac.

DAMAGE DONE BY WOLVES.—The Pioneer states that no less than three children have been recently carried off from the Asrapur Orphanage at Cawnpore by wolves, the last victim being a deaf and dumb boy. The subscribers to the institution might inquire why the children have not been better looked after.

THE AGRA GOVERNMENT COLLEGE.—The Governor-general in Council has authorised the affiliation in law of the Agra Government College to the Calcutta University, with effect from January 1 last.

LUNATIC ASYLUMS.—The Hon. the Lieutenant-governor of the North-West Provinces has directed the following officers to be visitors of the Lunatic Asylum at Delhi:—The Commissioner of Delhi, the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi, the Civil Surgeon of Delhi, the Inspector-general of Prisons (ex-officio).

LOYAL MEETING IN CALCUTTA.—An address to the Queen on the escape of the Duke of Edinburgh from assassination was voted unanimously by a large meeting at the Town Hall on Tuesday, May 26. The speakers were the Honourable Justice Norman, Baboo Romanool Tagore, Rajah Kali Krishna Deb, Bahadoor, and Moulvie Abdool Lutef, Khan Bahadoor.

PRINCE FEROCZE SHAH.—We hear from Lahore that there is a report that another person, claiming to be Prince Feroze Shah, has made his appearance at Koten, where he is in the habit of haranguing the people in the streets, and stirring up disaffection. If this be the real Simon Pure, who is the Moulvie, as he is called, who has made his appearance in Bonair?

THE STAFF CORPS.—The undermentioned officers of the Bengal Staff Corps, having completed twelve years' service, are promoted to the rank of Captain, from the date specified, under the provisions of G.G.O. No. 808, of the 26th September, 1866, subject to H.M.'s approval:—Lieutenants Edward Temple, Frederick Van Hagen Sperling, Benjamin Jerrard Parsons, 15th May, 1868.

INCOME-TAX COLLECTORS.—The Hon. the Lieutenant-governor (empowered by the Act for taxing professions and trades) confers on all deputy collectors in the North-West Provinces, whether covenanted or otherwise, invested with full powers, and on all assistant collectors invested with full powers, the powers of a collector in the districts to which they stand posted.

NATIVE SUBSCRIPTIONS TOWARDS A UNIVERSITY.—The Hon. the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab has much pleasure in notifying that the undermentioned chiefs of the Cis-Sutlej States have intimated their willingness to invest the sums hereinafter specified in Government Securities as contributions towards the endowment of a university proposed to be established at Lahore:—His Highness the Maharaja of Puttiala, 50,000 rupees; his Highness the Rajah of Jheend, 11,000 rupees; his Highness the Rajah of Nabha, 11,000 rupees; the Sirdar of Kulsia, 3,000 rupees.

TIGER SHOOTING IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The great heat of the weather during the past month has not deterred Mr. Morris, the officiating chief commissioner, Central Provinces, from taking the field against the numerous tigers in the Arace jungles, in the Wurdah district. In company with the deputy-commissioner, Captain Mordaunt Ricketts, Mr. Morris shot a tigress with three full-grown cubs, Captain Ricketts a tigress. Mr. Morris has returned to Nagpore until the first week in June, when he again beats the same jungle, which is said to be swarming with these pests.

AFFAIRS IN AFGHANISTAN.—According to Indian Opinion, at the late action at the fort of Ghuzni several sirdars were killed on both sides. The Ameer Azim's army, after being expelled the fort, encamped at Saidabad, and 3,000 men had been despatched to reinforce the latter place. The Ameer had exacted Rs. 20,000 from the Cabul agents of the Peshawar merchants. The Ameer of Maimunah, after decoying Abdul Ruhman Khan into the field against Shere Ali, turned round and declared for Shere Ali; and subsequently defeated Abdul Ruhman, who was obliged to flee.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE TO CASHMERE, &c.—The following officers have obtained leave for the season to Cashmere and Mussoorie:—Lieut. Brooke, 92nd Foot, from April 20 to Oct. 14. Lieut.-colonel H. A. Smyth, 8th Brigade, from May 1 to Oct. 15. Lieut. Papillon, 92nd Foot, from April 20 to Oct. 14. Lieut. Hope, 90th Foot, from April 20 to Oct. 14. Capt. G. S. White, 92nd Foot, from April 20 to Oct. 13. Capt. Rattray, 92nd Foot, from April 20 to Oct. 14. Lieut. Jeames, Rifle Brigade, from June 18 to Oct. 15, in extension of privilege leave. Capt. Parish, No. 1 Battery 24th Brigade, to remain at Mussoorie on medical certificate, from April 1, 1868, to March 31, 1869, in extension. Capt. W. E. R. Roberts, attached to the 41st N.I., to Mussoorie and the hills north of Dehra, from April 25 to Oct. 26.

THE LATE RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—The British-Indian Association having requested the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal to appoint a commission to inquire into the reports in connection with the late accident on the Eastern Bengal Railway at Shannugger were informed that in the opinion of his Honour they would have done their duty more wisely if they had endeavoured to dispel such "transparent falsehoods" instead of lending them their support. The natives firmly believe that hundreds were killed, and that the bodies were taken away by a mail train and thrown into the Ganges at Kooshtea. It was even telegraphed to Bombay that 200 or 300 had been killed, and 400 or 500 wounded. Subsequently, thinking the only way of quieting the minds of the natives was to appoint a commission, his Honour deputed Colonel Hyde and Majors Trevor and Hovenden to inquire into the particulars connected with the accident, and submit an early report. The commission sat for the first time on Tuesday, May 26.

VICEREGAL COURTESIES.—The Indian Mirror learns that Babu Keshub Chunder Sen has been invited by the Viceroy to take up his residence at Simla during the present season, in one of those houses which his Excellency has expressly ordered to be built for respectable parties who may be invited or willing to sojourn with him. Babu Keshub Chunder Sen should feel himself honoured by the request so spontaneously made, and lose no time to comply with it. We cannot speak too highly of Sir John Lawrence's goodness and hospitality. If all Englishmen here were as polite and well-meaning as the first English gentleman in India undoubtedly is, the present relation between natives and Europeans would be reversed into one of everlasting friendship, mutual trust, and co-operation.

THE MAHARAJAH OF CASHMERE.—These who speak evil of dignities, and of the Maharajah of Cashmere in particular, will perhaps be puzzled to account for his Highness's liberality in the cause of education. The Maharajah has recently made the munificent donation of Rs. 62,300 towards the foundation of an oriental university for the study of literature and science through the medium of the Indian tongues. This donation has been accepted by the Viceroy, who assures the Maharajah how highly he esteems such princely conduct. The Secretary of State for India, to whom the Government of India communicated the fact, states that he brought this example of liberality to the notice of the Queen, and was commanded by her Majesty to communicate to the Maharajah her high appreciation of his Highness's munificence in so excellent a cause.

THE CHIEF ENGINEERSHIP OF THE EAST INDIA RAILWAY.—The East India Railway has hitherto been under the direction of three chief engineers—one for the Bengal division, a second for the North-West Provinces, and a third for the Jubbulpore Extension. It has now been determined to unite the three divisions under a single superintendence. Mr. S. Power, the chief engineer of the Bengal division, has long wished to retire. Mr. H. P. LeMessurier, chief engineer of the Jubbulpore Extension, whose services have hitherto been only temporarily lent to Government for service in the Punjab, is now definitely released for that appointment; and the board of directors have appointed Mr. George Sibley to be chief engineer of the whole line, including the Jubbulpore Extension, and also member of the board of agency.

LATEST FROM BOKHARA.—News has come in from Bokhara that the Ameer had called upon the Moulvies to preach up a jehad against the Russians, and that, in consequence, there was a very large gathering of men, but the Ameer, by some means, got away and fled to Shehr-i-Subz; others, however, say he went to a place called Qila Qulab. He also endeavoured to stir up the Alooseas against the Russians. Their chiefs however refused to take up arms unless the Ameer himself led the war, and declined to move until the Ameer made his appearance in Bokhara. The Russians are, it is said, bent on making a cantonment close to Bokhara, and have resolved to take the foujdaree and devanny—in other words, the government of the country in their own hands. One-fourth of the country is actually in their possession. Should the King submit, well; if not, the Russians are prepared for war.—Englishman.

SANSKRIT LITERATURE.—Dr. John Muir is bringing out a new edition of his laborious and most valuable work, entitled "Sanskrit Texts." The first volume has already appeared, rewritten and greatly enlarged. A recent article in the Westminster Review, contributed, it would appear, by that excellent Sanskritist, Dr. Goldstucker, speaks of Dr. Muir's work as one "which, under the most modest title, has contributed more trustworthy materials to the elucidation of some of the obscurest points of Hindoo antiquity than many a pretentious book professing the same aim; and, in spite of its extreme cautiousness in arriving at settled conclusions, by its thorough impartiality and judicious treatment of the subject-matter, it will have done more to establish correct ideas than the bold assertions and solemn affirmations with which some other writers on Sanskrit matters are wont to represent the unreliable results of their speculations."

THE LATE MR. ROBERT MORRELL.—The Englishman records with great regret the death of Mr. Robert Morrell, of Morrellgunge, Jessore, known as one of the greatest and best of English Zemindars in Bengal. His loss will be severely felt by his tenants, to whom he was ever a just and kind-hearted landlord, as well as by those who knew him as an accomplished gentleman and sincere friend. The Government of Bengal during the troublesome times of 1857 and 1858 found him a zealous and efficient honorary magistrate, and publicly thanked him for the help he had given in collecting their revenue under most adverse circumstances. In bringing the large estate of Morrellgunge to its present cultivation, Mr. Robert Morrell was a striking example of what European enterprise and energy can do to overcome all difficulties of nature. From a vast jungle, where the tiger and other beasts of prey reigned supreme, he made in a few years a populous and flourishing settlement of happy and contented ryots.

THE CALCUTTA AND SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY.—The following are the principal stipulations entered into between the Secretary of State and the Calcutta and South-Eastern Railway Company for the transfer to the Government of the line between Port Canning and Calcutta:—The company are to receive from the Home and Indian Governments the full amount of the share capital paid into the Home or Indian treasuries. This amounts to £328,500. Or, should they prefer it, an annuity instead of the gross amount of the paid-in capital. The debenture loan of £112,850 will be taken over by the Secretary of State, who will at the same time give the company a guarantee against all the debts and liabilities incurred on account of the line. In connection with this agreement the Government of India will pay to the agent of the company in India the amount of the capital held in this country—£11,340-6. We do not dispute the wisdom of this arrangement, inasmuch as we are of opinion that anything would be better than continuing to pay the guaranteed interest for the full term of the guarantee; but, now the Government have got the line, the public are curious to know what they will do with it.—Englishman, May 25.

EXTRAORDINARY RECOVERY OF AN APPARENTLY DROWNED CHILD—The other day the police were informed that a girl about four years of age was missing from a house in Chitpore, and was supposed to have accidentally fallen into a tank adjoining the premises. Inspector Marklew immediately repaired to the spot and had the tank dragged with a net. On this being done the child was brought up apparently lifeless, but the inspector, finding the body still warm, wrapped it up in a blanket, and after swinging it for some time, the little creature began to move, to the surprise and delight of the parents. The officer, who it appeared had read an account of the way in which persons drowned and who had been given up for dead were brought to life, promptly applied the same remedies, and succeeded, the child being able to speak in an hour. Strange to say that, at the very lowest computation, the little one must have been under water for nearly half an hour.—Englishman.

ACTION FOR LIBEL AGAINST A NEWSPAPER—Mr. Harrison, acting agent of the Punjab Railway, has, we believe, instituted an action for libel against the proprietors of the Mofussilite—damages 25,000 rupees. We hear it whispered that this action will be followed by others. Captain Kingscote, editor or manager of the Mofussilite, whose name has been figuring somewhat prominently in an action at present carried on in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner, Lahore, will also not escape with impunity from his share in late railway transactions. As regards a paper called the Lucknow Times, our local contemporary is probably misinformed in supposing that a settled intention already exists on the part of some of the gentlemen whom it is said to have attacked, to institute an action against it. The paper is certainly not much known at Lahore, and we for one do not get it. All we have heard is, that its proprietors, and that of the Mofussilite, are to some extent the same.—Indian Public Opinion.

SUBSISTENCE ALLOWANCE FOR UNCOVENANTED OFFICERS—We hear that the Government of India has lately submitted a proposition to the Secretary of State to grant a subsistence, or out-of-employment allowance to all uncovenanted officers, on the ground that those public servants, when thrown out of employ by the abolition of their offices or reduction of establishment, are generally subjected to great hardships, in consequence of there being no provision for a subsistence allowance. It appears that the above proposition was originally made by the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, who recommended that a subsistence allowance should be granted to the uncovenanted judicial officers in those provinces when thrown out of employ by the circumstances above stated. The Governor-general in Council has approved of the aforesaid proposition, and made it a general question. His Excellency in Council is said to have suggested to her Majesty's Secretary of State that it should be made applicable in the case of all uncovenanted servants, and not confined to judicial officers only.—Indian Daily News.

PUBLIC WORKS.—We observe that the following officer joins the Public Works Department:—Lieut.-colonel O'Connell, of the Royal Engineers; the services of this officer are placed at the disposal of the Government of India in the Public Works Department.

ARRIVALS FROM ENGLAND.—The undermentioned officers have returned to their duty, by permission of the Home Government, without prejudice to their rank:—Major-general R. Shubrick, Infantry; Lieutenant-colonel H. E. Dyneley, Cavalry. Arrived at Madras on 22nd May.

EMBARKATION OF TROOPS.—A party, consisting of one European officer, two native officers, eighty-seven non-commissioned rank and file and fourteen public and private followers of the 29th regiment Native Infantry, was to embark for Hong Kong in the P. and O. steamer Surat, expected from Calcutta on May 28.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—According to the Pioneer Lieut.-Colonel O'Connell, R.E., Controller P. W. Accounts, Madras, the transfer of whose services has been requested from the Madras Government, will officiate as Accountant-General in the Public Works Department in room of Major McLeod Innes, V.C., who has been appointed to the Bank of Bombay Commission.

ITEMS FROM NAGPORE.—A letter from Nagpore tells us that Mr. Malcolm Low, officiating commissioner of that division, is posted permanently to the Nerbudda division, and will have his headquarters at Hoshungabad instead of at Baitool, so as to be on the line of railway. Mr. Bernard will, on his return from leave, take up the duties of the Nagpore division as Commissioner. Captain Fenton is the new Deputy Commissioner of Nagpore, and Major Dunn, a retired officer of the Bombay army, succeeds Mr. Dangerfield as engineer to the municipal committee. The 91st Highlanders are delighted at the idea of leaving Kamptee, this being their second tour at this unhealthy station. Colonel Pattenson commands the brigade. The Madras corps, the 3rd Cavalry and 1st N.L. will also both move, the former to relieve the 1st Cavalry, which comes from Poona to Kamptee, and the latter to Secunderabad.

THE HIGH COURT.—On his own application before the High Court, appellate side May 27 (Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Collett), Mr. Michael Gould, of the Inner Temple, London, and King's Inns, Dublin, was duly admitted and enrolled as an advocate of the High Court. He is the first Roman Catholic gentleman so admitted in our bar "within the memory of the oldest inhabitant." Mr. Gould took exception to the usual form of declaration necessary to be subscribed—an antiquated form—wherein the obligation to resist the Pope and his Holiness' mandates, &c., is entered. This protest was conceded.

SIR DINKUR RAO.—We gather from the Indu-Prakash that the Maharajah of Rewah has secured the services of Rajah Sir Dinkur Rao as his dewan. The appointment, adds our contemporary, has been creditable alike to the receiver and the donor. Men of Sir Dinkur Rao's abilities can scarcely find a better scope for the employment of their talents than in the improvement of native States. Meanwhile we are sorry to see that Sir Dinkur Rao's talents and experience, acquired in a court so important as that of Gwalior, cannot secure him a share in the government of a larger principality than Rewah.

FURLONGS TO EUROPE.—The following officers obtained furloughs in May last:—Lieutenant and Adjutant W. Coningham, Staff Corps, 26th N.I., from date of departure, for 15 days—Madras, preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe. Captain C. L. Raikes, Staff Corps, attached to 8th N.I., from date of departure, for 3 months—Madras, preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe. The undermentioned officer is permitted to proceed to Europe:—Major T. Sweet, of the Staff Corps, on medical certificate, for 20 months, and to embark from Madras.

MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS.—Under the provisions of Section 6, Act X., of 1865 (the Towns' Improvement Act), the Governor in Council hereby appoints the undermentioned persons to be town-commissioners for carrying out in the town of Tellicherry, in the Malabar district, purposes of the said Act, during the year beginning 1st May, 1868, and ending 30th April, 1869:—Captain Samuel Galbraith, superintendent of police, North Malabar; Surgeon James Edward Dickinson, civil surgeon, Tellicherry; Lieut. H. W. Bird, acting cantonment magistrate, to be a town commissioner for Cannanore, in the Malabar district, during the year beginning May 1, 1868, and ending April 30, 1869.

ITEMS FROM HYDERABAD.—We hear from Hyderabad that the demise of Mr. A. A. Roberts is universally regretted by all classes of the native community. In a case which was being tried before Mr. Roberts prior to his illness, and in which the great Sowcar, Poorun-Mull, was interested, a barrister had been engaged from Bombay on a fee of Rs. 250 per day—not an excessive fee, judged by the Calcutta standard for conducting a Mofussil case. Our correspondent adds:—"It is to be hoped that Mr. Saunders from Mysore may be appointed Resident. It is generally believed he was a candidate for the post when it was vacated by Sir Richard Temple. He would command the confidence of the people here." There was a report on foot that the Nizam had again preferred his claims to Mysore and Goomsoor.

THE PLANTERS IN KUMAON.—We are glad to hear that the agitation in the papers about the complaints of the Kumaon planters has produced the desired effect. It was stated that the late Lieutenant-governor refused to comply with Colonel Ramsay's request to appoint a commission of enquiry. This was not the least to be wondered at. But Colonel Ramsay has, we understand, himself issued a circular letter to the planters in the province inviting them to state their complaints. This, in our opinion, was as much as the aggrieved parties could reasonably expect. Their grievances, if they have stated them, must now receive the enquiry so long solicited. This is the legitimate end and object of newspaper agitation, and we are glad it has been attained. The aggrieved parties have had an opportunity afforded them of stating the causes of dissatisfaction, and we hope that a better feeling will prevail. There may be a great future in store for Kumaon yet, if once a really good understanding is established between the two principal classes of Europeans in it.—Delhi Gazette.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE CAPTAIN STEER.—"One Present," writing to the Times of India, contradicts some of the statements which that paper had quoted from the Central India Times. There was no music, indeed, nor could the four companies of the 36th, at Seetabuldee, have anyhow furnished much. There was also a grave "partly ready," and not in the corner of the churchyard. The chatties in the grave were not broken, but whole. It is utterly false that "no prayer-book was forthcoming when required." Captain Playfair, of the Nagpore Commission, had consented on the previous evening to read the burial service in the absence of the chaplain, and did so. It is not usual in military stations to send out notices to friends of deceased officers. Moreover, poor Captain Steer had been but a short time in Seetabuldee, the last month on the sick report, and had no acquaintances even here beyond the officers of the wing of the regiment, who were all at his funeral except one, who was on the sick report. Captain Steer was buried with the usual honours—there was an escort of a hundred men of the 36th regiment, including the firing party, commanded by a captain of the 91st Highlanders, and everything was conducted with decorum and solemnity. It is true that the unfortunate contretemps which occurred was much to be deplored, but it arose from errors, not of "culpable mismanagement," but want of experience and knowledge.

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE LATE DURBAR AT NAGPORE.—We are now able to put the whole account of the "Shoe" contretemps in the Nagpore durbar before our readers. At the durbar in question six or seven of the leading inhabitants of Nagpore appeared in English patent leather shoes or boots, articles of dress with which, we can we believe safely say, none of them had ever before attempted to adorn themselves. When they came up to be presented to the Chief Commissioner, many of the European gentlemen present remarked how exceedingly uncomfortable they looked, and one or two of them at least were observed, when bending to salute Mr. Morris, nearly to lose their balance. Shortly before the durbar was dismissed, whilst some of the district and other officials were engaged in decorating the durbarees prior to their again going up to the Chief Commissioner to take leave, Mr. Morris asked the native gentlemen sitting next to him on the left whether he found the Belattee shoes comfortable. He received a reply which was only intelligible in the negative, and inquired why he wore them if he did not like them, and observed that there was no necessity for his doing so, as the Government order was only permissive, and was intended to accommodate those gentlemen who were in the habit of wearing English boots. These remarks were made in quite an under tone, and were frequently inaudible, except to some ten or twelve people who were sitting quite close. From the above it will be seen how little foundation there was for the statement of the local paper. No rebuke was administered, and what was said on the shoe question was merely in the course of conversation, as explanatory of the Government resolution on the subject.—Friend of India.

BANK OF INDIA.

On Friday afternoon, May 29, a general meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of India was held at the offices of the Bank, 24, Rampart-row, to receive an account of the liquidation—Mr. H. G. Dunlop in the chair.

The Chairman said the report and accounts of the liquidators had already been circulated, but they would now be read to the meeting in Guzerati.

The report and accounts having been read,

The Chairman said that the meeting having heard the translations read, he would propose that the report and accounts now submitted by the liquidators be approved and adopted. The report had told them everything connected with the liquidation, and therefore he did not think it necessary for him to say anything more. The liquidators had asked the shareholders who wanted information to come to the offices of the Bank; some shareholders had done so, and, he supposed, had received the required information, so that nothing remained now but to propose the adoption of the report, which he now did.

A number of Shareholders then rose to speak at once, when a Parsee Shareholder stated that one of the speakers was calling out that God would ask the liquidators about the affairs of the Bank.

The Chairman: God is not present at the meeting. God "abhi nai hai."

After some more noisy conversation between the shareholders in the vernacular, a Parsee Shareholder asked what were the monthly expenses of the bank?

Dr. Byramjee, one of the liquidators, said that including the rent and everything the expenses would amount to Rs. 600 per month.

The Chairman: All this information could have been got at the office if application had been made.

Mr. Sorabjee Rustomjee Bunshaw seconded the chairman's motion, that the accounts should be adopted, which was unanimously agreed to.

Mr. Eduljee Nusserwanjee Settna then moved—"That the resignations of Messrs. Jehangeer Gustadjee and Dadabhojee Rustomjee Paruck as members of the consulting committee be accepted; and that Messrs. Sorabjee Rustomjee Bunshaw, Jaitha Jairam, and Dr. Pestonjee Muncherjee be appointed additional members of the committee nominated at the meeting of the 2nd July, 1866, to consult with the liquidators on the questions of release and compensation; that any two of the members of such committee may form a quorum, and that the decision of the majority at any meeting shall be final."

Mr. Byramjee Pestonjee seconded the motion, which was unanimously adopted.

There was no other business before the meeting, which then adjourned.

THE GUICOWAR'S EXTORTIONS.

The Barbaric chief of Baroda has set to play his money-squeezing machinery in a more unscrupulous and wilder manner than ever. Having exhausted almost all plausible means to replenish his coffers he lately invited the Setas and Showkars of Baroda, desiring them to lend him money on 6 per cent. interest. Their reply was to this effect:—"Formerly the Sirkar used to pay 12 per cent.; your Highness has now reduced it to six; whilst we cannot obtain money even at eight. Still we would have lent you, but that we are at present in highly straitened circumstances." Hereupon the chief sent for his minister and informed him—"rupia pahije,"—i.e., money is wanted. Bhow Sindhia then sent for Lulloobhai, the Fouzdar, who informed the Guicowar that if he were invested with full powers, he would by any means obtain for the Sirkar a crore of rupees. The powers were at once granted to him, and many a person is now panic-struck. All the instances of extortions can never be told; but surely few else than the Resident could have better information. Government and the public in general may be informed of some of these instances conveyed to our notice. One of the general principles of the Guicowar now is that on learning that a certain individual is possessed of money, he is summoned and informed that either his son or daughter, or he himself, was adulterous, or had committed a certain offence, and that therefore if he did not surrender so many thousand rupees he was liable to confinement and the usual tyrannies. The minimum extortion is Rs. 1,000, the maximum anything above Rs. 50,000. The Patel of Teltalao is imprisoned, not having paid the amount demanded from him. A large sum having been demanded from the agent of the branch firm of Mulharrao, he has disappeared. Meanwhile a fine of Rs. 100 is levied daily from the firm until his return. The subjects of the British Government who have their firms at Baroda having refused to pay anything, they have been ordered to quit the city. The Mody of Paiga was also unable to pay. It was consequently ordered that the sepoys who owed him money should not pay him, their wages being meanwhile confiscated by the Chief. A Patel of Oonjha, subject to the Patun Purgannah, was suddenly arrested, and ordered to pay Rs. 3,200. As he hesitated to obey he was thrashed and confined until he obeyed. A Bania, Motichund, a subject of our Government, has been apprehended, along with his brother, having a firm in a village of the Guicowar, and are not to be released until Rs. 13,000 are paid. The Vahiwtudar of Kadi and Patun is held under confinement until he consents to pay Rs. 20,000, which are to be levied by the utmost distress if he continues refusing. Some years ago a Showkar of Shownghud was charged with a certain offence, which was now revived, and he was not acquitted until he paid Rs. 25,000. Twenty-five years ago a daughter of a Showkar of Shidhpore acquired the inheritance of her deceased father, when a Nuzzerana was paid to the Durbar according to the usage; but another claim was lately made, the woman was imprisoned and was not liberated until she paid Rs. 50,000. The Ameen of Delgaum has been fined Rs. 52,000, which he is unable to pay, and so undergoes imprisonment.—Guzerat Mitra.

TRADE BETWEEN BOMBAY AND TRIESTE.

As the facility of cheap means of communication between your port and ours will naturally develop mutual trade, which in every case will in time increase, it may be interesting to your readers to know its future importance. For greater clearness I shall first give some general observations. Trieste is a very young town of about 100,000 active inhabitants of different countries, who are generally engaged in trade. Its climate is beautiful and healthy. The city owes its importance to its topographical position, which renders it the place of interchange between the south of Europe, the Orient, and north of Africa, with the centre and the north of Europe. Its sphere of activity with the interior extends from the banks of the river Rhine to the Black Sea and to St. Petersburg. Embracing such extensive territories—which are partially industrial and in part agricultural—it is clear that the present trading class cannot constantly exhaust all the branches of trade which might be prosecuted with advantage; and therefore the majority of the merchants turn to that business which at the moment seems more convenient—as, for instance, during the last six months to the export of grain, of which more than one million of quarters were exported, principally to England.

The countries surrounding Trieste are yet virgin, and present, therefore, a constant progress, especially the territory of the Austrian Empire, which is now governed on a liberal constitutional system. The Government is encouraging and assisting generally in the economical development. A great number of new railways are now being constructed, and many others are also under contemplation. A new road of communication will be opened before long, which will connect us directly with Switzerland and the centre of Europe, and two others will connect us too with Hungary—which country, although uncultivated by two-thirds, may be said this year to have preserved the whole of Europe from famine. Observing the imminent increase of the local trade, the Government is now building at the north of our port some large basins and docks at the expense of 25 millions of florins, as the actual port is not sufficient to the present maritime movement, which amounts to two millions of tons, with a traffic of the value of 270 millions of florins, export and import.

Our currency is precisely as in North America—circulating notes and metal coin—and business is otherwise carried on as the mutual parties desire it; sometimes, for instance, in French or English money and weight. The currency is the florin, equal to one rupee, and the weight is the hundredweight—equal to 123½ English lbs. Gold has generally a premium of 3 to 4 per cent. above the value of silver money, and therefore it should be profitable, when the exchange in India is high, to melt silver in Trieste and export it to Bombay; and a branch house of the Indian banks would do a very handsome business here.

With regard to the quality and quantity of the merchandises of your country fit for importation to our port, a glance at the following statistical account may throw the best light on this subject; and you may judge for yourselves the great importance of this matter:—Austria alone, without the border countries, makes a yearly consumption of cotton 1,000,000 cwts., of which about 100,000 bales are of Surat; coffee, Ceylon plantation, 150,000 cwts., of Mysore and Tellichery, about 15,000 cwts.; pepper, 30,000 cwts.; wax, raw, 6,000 cwts.; gum arabic, 30,000 cwts.; hides of oxen, cows, buffaloes, and minor animals, 100,000 cwts.; cocoa-nut oil, Ceylon and Cochin, 25,000 cwts.; fish oil, 45,000 cwts.; arrack and rum, 12,000 cwts.; saltpetre, 6,000 cwts.; mother-o-pearl, 3,000 cwts.; sapan wood, 10,000 cwts.; turmeric and ginger, 2,000 cwts.; tincal, 1,000 cwts.; indigo, 12,000 cwts.; gambier, 10,000 cwts.; cutch, 30,000 cwts.; gallnuts, 3,000 cwts.; silk, 3,000 cwts.; wool, 20,000 cwts.—besides many other drugs, dyes, manufactures, &c.

All these goods are imported indirectly by third or fourth parties in the interior of Austria, and notwithstanding leave a large gain. It is therefore evident that goods directly imported would sell without fail, and yield a fair profit; besides, it may well be imagined to what an extent the development of direct trade between Bombay and Trieste is capable of going.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

BOMBAY BANK BILL.

At the meeting of the Supreme Council at Simla, on the 20th May, Sir J. Lawrence presiding, the Hon. Mr. Maine presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to appoint a Commission to inquire into the failure of the Bank of Bombay, and requested his Excellency the President to suspend the rules for the conduct of business.

The President declared the rules suspended.

The Hon. Mr. Maine then moved that the report be taken into consideration. He said that the Bill would have become law at Calcutta but for the necessity of previously communicating with the Secretary of State for India and the Local Government of Bombay. Those communications had now been received and acted upon. As, in the opinion of the Local Government, the bank would ultimately pay its debts, and have some surplus, the recital of the preamble had been correspondingly modified. The Government of Bombay had further suggested that the Commission should be allowed to act even though its members were reduced to two, but there were inconveniences in a Commission so constituted; power, however, had been expressly given to the Governor-general of India in Council from time to time to add to the persons named in the Commission, and to replace members disabled from acting. Section 3 would require some further change to meet the views of the Secretary of State. The inquiry would begin at Bombay, but provision would be made for continuing the inquiry, if the Government of India should think fit, at places in the province other than the presidency town. In section 4 the committee had, at the suggestion of the Secretary of State, empowered the commissioners to compel the personal attendance of witnesses residing not merely within the Presidency of Bombay, but in any part of British India. The alternative course of examining such witnesses by commission might still be followed by the commissioners, and here the Bombay Government had recommended that this power of delegated examination should be limited to judges and collectors. The Select Committee, agreeing in the view of the Bombay Government, had at the same time thought that the matter was one fairly left to the discretion of the commissioners who might be trusted to select proper persons to take evidence in their name. The most important amendment was the introduction of section 9. The Bombay Government had suggested that provision should be made for pursuing the inquiry in England and elsewhere, and had urged that without this it could never be complete. It was obviously not easy to comply with this request, for of course the Council of the Governor-general had no power to bind directly persons residing in England. But sections 177 and 178 of the Code of Civil Procedure authorised the High Court to issue commissions for the examination of witnesses resident beyond the limits of British India, and the statute 22 Vic., cap. 20, afforded facilities for taking evidence in one part of her Majesty's dominions in relation to proceedings pending before courts in another part of those dominions. It had accordingly occurred to the committee that the difficulty might be met by declaring the commissioners to be a court for the purpose of issuing commissions to take evidence beyond British India. The clause inserted was as follows:—

"The Commissioners may, whenever they think fit, issue a commission for the examination of witnesses resident beyond the limits of British India, and shall, for the purpose of issuing such commissions, be deemed to be a Court authorised to issue commissions by sections 177, 178 and 179 of the Code of Civil Procedure."

Section 179 of the Code of Civil Procedure contained provisions as to the return of the commission to the Court issuing it together with the depositions. The English Courts would, he hoped, consider themselves justified in aiding the commission, if necessary. Section 11 was new, and provided not only for the punishment of perjury before the Commissioners, but also for that of the fabrication of false evidence and committing contempts. In section 12, the committee had considered the desire of the Secretary of State to strike out the provision that no statement made by a witness should be admissible against him in a civil proceeding, and had expressly provided that nothing in the proposed Act should exempt him from a civil suit. The clause in the Bill as introduced was certainly in the usual form. Such clauses of indemnity were not however inserted on any principle which required that a person should be absolved from civil liability because the evidence of such liability consisted in an admission compulsorily extorted from himself. Since legislative changes in England and India which allowed the interrogation and examination of defendants, such a doctrine could not be maintained. Indemnity clauses were simply intended to induce persons aware of facts relevant to the inquiry to come freely forward and to answer freely, and the simple question was whether it was worth while holding forth such an inducement in the present case. Mr. Maine on the whole agreed with the Secretary of State that it was not. Criminal liability rested on a different footing, and the witness answering honestly would still be relieved from penal consequences.

In Section 13 the bar of suits against the Commissioners for anything done in the execution of the Act had been rendered absolute.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon. Mr. Maine then moved that in lieu of the first clause of Section 3, the following should be substituted:—

"3. The Commissioners shall enter upon the said inquiry in the town of Bombay on the first day of June, 1868, or as soon after that day as they can conveniently do so, and such inquiry may be continued in the presidency town or at such other place within the territories under the Government of the Governor of Bombay in Council as the Governor-general of India in Council shall from time to time appoint."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon. Mr. Maine then moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The motion was put and agreed to.

Miscellaneous.

DEATH AT COLABA.—We regret to announce the death of Lieut. G. E. M. Sperrin, of H.M.'s 95th Regiment, which took place on May 30 at Colaba.

COLONELS' ALLOWANCE.—Lieut.-colonel (Major-general) J. Hobson, Staff Corps, having completed ten years' service in the rank of substantive lieut.-colonel, is admitted to the colonel's allowance from May 18, 1868, under the provisions of clause 2, paragraph 61, of G.O.G.I. No. 808, Sept. 26, 1866.

EXAMINATIONS.—The undermentioned gentlemen have passed the prescribed examination in the languages specified, according to the higher standard:—H. S. Spring, Mahrattee; E. W. L. Morant, Mahrattee; G. B. Spring, Mahrattee; W. H. Hamilton, Guzeratee; F. C. Blodwell, Guzeratee; F. Turner, Hindoostanee; Mr. W. H. Payne, jun., has passed the prescribed examination in Hindoostanee, according to the lower standard.

ITEM FROM ADEN.—Lieutenant Abbott, the assistant officiating for the Resident at Aden, lately deputed two Somalis, whose fidelity and intelligence were vouched for by the native head of the Aden police, a Somali himself, to visit the Berbera fair, for the purpose of diligently but discreetly sifting the rumour that some Europeans are held in captivity among the Somali tribes. The agents have been supplied with funds for all probable expenses of their mission, and promised liberal reward in case of success.—Pioneer.

BOMBAY BANK COMMISSION.—The Gazette of India contains a notification that Sir Charles Jackson, Major Macleod Innes, v.c., and Maxwell Melvill, Esq., of the Bombay Civil Service, have received a commission to enquire into the collapse of the old Bank of Bombay.

THE ADEN RESIDENCY.—We perceive by general orders that Lieut. H. L. Nutt received charge of the Aden residency and of the treasury at Aden from Lieut. Miles and Mr. Mullaly, respectively, on May 11.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION.—The Times of India learns by telegram that an attempt has been made at Bunno to assassinate Dr. Muckerlich, of the Punjab Cavalry. The outrage is believed to have been committed by the Wazerees in revenge for shooting a robber. The doctor is fortunately considered out of danger.

BOMBAY MARINE.—Commander G. T. Robinson, officiating superintendent of marine, is appointed to officiate as superintendent of marine, from the date of Capt. Young's death. Commander Robinson and Mr. T. H. Moore, are appointed members of the Bombay Harbour and Pilotage Board.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers obtained leave of absence in May last:—Major T. Sweet, Staff Corps, doing general duty at Vellore, for one month, from date of departure, Madras, to appear before a medical board; Major J. T. Clarke, Staff Corps, doing general duty at Trichinopoly, in extension of privilege leave for two months, to Neilgherries, private affairs; Major P. L. Holmes, Staff Corps, second in command and wing officer 11th N.I., from date of departure, for six months, to Madras and Neilgherries, medical certificate; Staff Assistant-surg. H. C. Peppin, in medical charge depot Poonamallee, for three months, from the expiration of the duty upon which he has been detailed, to Neilgherries, private affairs.

MUSICAL PROGRESS IN BOMBAY.—The example of the Bengalee Baboo must have made a profound impression on some members of the native community, for we find an enterprising individual advertising in a small semi-English semi-vernacular native paper "that he will undertake to give lessons in English singing to young gentlemen of the Hindoo and Parsee communities." No easy undertaking, certainly; for there is still an undoubted preference for nautches and nautch music on the part of almost the whole native community. It would be a curious sight, indeed, to see some big-puggeried Govind or Luxumon standing up at an amateur entertainment, holding a sheet of music before him and singing "Ishweet Ishpirit hear my prayer!"—Bombay Gazette.

SPIRITUAL PROVISION FOR PRESBYTERIANS.—The Government of India has called upon the Government of this Presidency for a return showing the average number of Presbyterian British-born servants of Government, both civil and military, and of their wives and children (separately), residing during the last five years at the military stations of Belgaum, Poona, Sholapoor, Ahmedabad, Ahmednuggur, Nusseerabad, Neemuch, Mhow, Deesa, Hyderabad (Scinde), and Kurrachee. This step is said to be due to the influence of Dr. Macleod and Dr. Watson, who lately visited Bombay, and who appear to have been enjoining upon Government the necessity of paying greater attention to the spiritual wants of Presbyterians in this Presidency.—Bombay Gazette.

FURLONGS TO EUROPE.—The following officers obtained furloughs to Europe in May:—Lieut. col. Dickson, cantonment magistrate at Neemuch, is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months, on m.c.; Major Barras, Bombay Staff Corps, superintendent of police, B. B. and C. I. Railway, is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months, on m.c.; Mr. C. Denton, in charge of the treasure chest at Mhow, is allowed fifteen months' leave to Europe, on m.c., under the uncovenanted service furlough rules; Mr. J. P. Bickersteth, having been allowed leave of absence to Europe for eight months, C. Peile, solicitor, has been appointed to act for him as registrar of the diocese; Lieut. C. Maturin, Madras general list, attached to 17th Madras N.I., is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months on medical certificate; Lieut. H. M. Hozier, 2nd Life Guards, to England, on medical certificate; Lieut. A. Jebb, 85th Foot, to England, on medical certificate; Lieut. Collis, 21st Punjab Infantry, to England, on medical certificate.

A NEW SIGN OF THE TIMES.—A good deal of consternation was excited in Rampart-row on the evening of May 28 by the appearance of the monster steam-roller that the Municipality has brought from London. Apparently it was out for a trial trip, and hundreds of natives crowded round, gazing on it with astonishment and awe. It is a most imposing piece of machinery, about fifteen feet in height, and evidently of enormous power. It consists chiefly of a large square iron case, enclosing the machinery, and open at the front, where one or two of the machine men are located. Several other workmen are employed at the top, where they are protected from the heat of the sun by a suitable covering. Underneath there are two wheels near the front, and the ponderous roller towards the back. It can be easily imagined that this "iron elephant" (for the ordinary phrase of "iron horse" fails to describe the monster adequately) will perform its duty in a most effective and expeditious manner, but it would be a decided improvement if it could consume its own smoke (which on Thursday it emitted in extraordinary volumes), and it must take care not to frighten the horses with its deep and angry groans. We could not help thinking that the municipal steam-roller would be worth all the volunteers in the place if there was any disturbance breaking out.—Bombay Gazette.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

H.E. THE VICEROY ON THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. of India in Council has the highest satisfaction in directing the republication of a general order issued by H.E. Lieut. gen. Sir R. Napier, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., to the soldiers and sailors of the army of Abyssinia, in which H.E. congratulates them upon their successes, and thanks them for their great exertions and endurance.

The Viceroy in Council can add nothing to what is so justly said by Sir R. Napier in praise of his force, but H.E. desires to express his admiration at the whole conduct of the expedition, and to record his opinion that no army could have been led with more ability, energy, and forethought, under circumstances of peculiar difficulty, than have been displayed by Sir R. Napier in this campaign.

The troops were worthy of their commander, and the Viceroy in Council has especial pride in knowing that the British and native soldiers composing the expeditionary force were detached from the armies of her Majesty belonging to the three Presidencies in India, whose reputation they have maintained and increased.

The success has been most complete, and will not fail to be highly appreciated, not only in Great Britain, but throughout the civilised world.

H.E. in Council has much pleasure in acknowledging the very great exertions made by the Government of Bombay and the various departments of that presidency in fitting out and supplying the greater part of the expeditionary force, in accordance with the orders of her Majesty's Government in England; and H.E. has to thank the Punjab Government for the very satisfactory and successful efforts made under the orders of his Honour to provide mules, drivers, and camel-men for service in Abyssinia.

The Viceroy in Council also owes acknowledgment to the Government of Madras for the ready share taken by that presidency in the arrangements connected with the expedition.

The thanks of the Gov. gen. in Council are further greatly due to H.E. the Commander-in-Chief in India, and to the various departments and officers in Bengal, by whose efforts the force that proceeded from this presidency was despatched in a most perfect state of equipment.

A royal salute has already been fired from the ramparts of Fort William in honour of the capture of Magdala and release of the captives.

By order of H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. of India in Council,

H. W. NORMAN, Colonel,
Secretary to the Government of India.

MEDICAL CIRCLES.

May 19.—No. 491.—With reference to G.G.O. No. 603, dated June 6

1867, notifying the circles of medical superintendence attached to the British and Indian medical services and the stations comprising them, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to notify that the station of Dera Ismail Khan, at present in the Peshawur Circle, is, as respects the British medical service only, transferred to the Lahore Circle.

SERVICES OF MAJOR-GENERAL PATON.

Head Quarters, Simla, May 18.—Major gen. Paton, being about to lay down the office of quartermaster general, the C. in C. in India begs to return his best thanks for the admirable manner in which he has directed his department during the last five years.

Major gen. Paton had previously served in the department in the several grades since 1845, and he was particularly distinguished in his early career during the wars of Lord Gough, his gallant conduct having been frequently noticed by the general officers under whom he served.

THE SONTAL-PERGUNNAHS.

May 20.—The portion of the Sontal Pergunnahs, now known as the district of Pakour, is hereby declared to be a sub-division of the Rajmehal district, and subject to the jurisdiction of the Assistant-Commissioner of Rajmehal from this date.

POPULAR PROPHECIES.—One of the most curious phenomena of Indian socio-political life is the way in which prophecies are continually brought forward by designing men, as a means of influencing large masses of the people. The mutiny was foretold; famines have been foretold; and, of late years, there have been a prolific crop of prophecies relating to the expected advent of the long-looked for Imam Mehudec, the great deliverer of the Mussulmans, whose appearance will be the signal for their triumph over all their foes, and for the dawn of an era of unexampled glory. In 1862-63 considerable anxiety was manifested in Mahomedan circles as to the probable events of the Mahomedan year 1280. There was a general belief that it would be a fated year, and that it would not pass quietly. It was, however, uneventful, and the wonder-mongers were driven to revise their calculations, and recast their horoscopes. The result of their labours has been a prophecy which is obtaining some credence among the wild men of the Punjab borders, that 1286, the next Mahomedan year, will see the hope of every Mahomedan fulfilled in the advent of the Imam Mehudec. These prophecies are not without a marked unsettling effect on a bigoted and impressionable race, who, notwithstanding numberless disappointments, are sufficiently ignorant and credulous to place implicit faith in each new vision of their seers.—Englishman.

REGULATIONS FOR THE OPEN COMPETITION OF 1869.

N.B.—The Regulations are liable to be altered in future years.

1. On Tuesday, 16th March, 1869, and following days, an examination of candidates will be held in London. 8. The marks obtained by each candidate, in respect of each of the subjects in which he shall have been examined, will be added up, and the names of the candidates who shall have obtained a greater aggregate number of marks than any of the remaining candidates will be set forth in order of merit, and such candidates shall be deemed to be selected candidates for the Civil Service of India, provided they are in other respects duly qualified; and shall be permitted to choose, according to the order in which they stand, as long as a choice remains, the Presidency (and in Bengal, the division of the Presidency) to which they shall be appointed.

11. No candidate will be permitted to proceed to India before he shall have passed the final examination and received a certificate of qualification from the Civil Service Commissioners, or after he shall have attained the age of twenty-four years.

12. The selected candidates who, at the final examination, shall be found to have a competent knowledge of the subjects specified in Regulation 9, shall be adjudged to have passed, and to be entitled to be appointed to the Civil Service of India, provided they shall comply with the regulations in force at the time for the Civil Service of India, and shall be of sound bodily health and good moral character. The Civil Service Commissioners will require such further evidence on these points as they may deem necessary before granting their certificate of qualification.

13. The seniority in the Civil Service of India of the selected candidates shall be determined according to the order in which they stand on the list resulting from the final examination.

14. Applications from persons desirous to be admitted as candidates are to be addressed to the Secretary to the Civil Service Commissioners, London, S.W.

June 20, 1868.

NOTE.—(1.) The Secretary of State for India in Council has authorised the Civil Service Commissioners to state that it is his intention to allow the sum of £100 after the first year of probation, and £200 after the second year to each selected candidate who shall have passed the required examinations to the satisfaction of the Commissioners, and shall have complied with such rules as may be laid down for the guidance of selected candidates.

(2.) All selected candidates will be required, after having passed the second periodical examination, to attend at the India-office for the purpose of entering into an agreement binding themselves, amongst other things, to refund in certain cases the amount of their allowance in the event of their failing to proceed to India. For a candidate under age a surety will be required.

(3.) After passing the final examination each candidate will be required to attend again at the India-office, with the view of entering into covenants and giving a bond for £1,000, jointly with two sureties, for the due fulfilment of the same. The stamps payable by civilians on these documents amount to £3. 10s.

(4.) Candidates rejected at the final examination of 1871 will in no case be allowed to present themselves for re-examination.

* Including, besides the languages prescribed for the several Presidencies, such other languages as may, with the approval of the Commissioners, be taken up as subjects of examination.

Miscellaneous.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Pera left Southampton on Saturday for the East with £15,340 in specie, of which £13,160 was in silver for Shanghai.

ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE.—The following are the names of the successful candidates nominated by the Secretary of State for India, with the number of marks obtained in the recent examination for admission to the Royal Military College, Sandhurst:—J. Temple, 3,812; H. M. Mackenzie, 2,498; E. C. Parker, 2,192; A. A. Pearson, 1,991; D. G. Johnston, 1,846; G. B. Chalon, 1,682; F. Stevenson, 1,609.

MR. RASSAM.—On June 25 Mr. Rassam made his first public appearance since his arrival in England from Abyssinia, at the distribution of prizes at King's College, London, of which he was formerly a student. The Rev. G. F. Maclear, B.D., the head master, amidst great applause, proposed that his attendance should be welcomed. In reply, Mr. Rassam said:—"I am much happier to-day than I was in chains at Magdala. I am much obliged to you for your kindly welcome." The Bishop of London presided at the annual distribution of prizes for the school.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The directors of the Eastern Bengal Railway Company have called an extraordinary meeting, at which resolutions will be proposed to empower the company to create, with the sanction of the Secretary of State in Council of India, debenture stock, to bear interest, guaranteed by the Secretary of State, at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly, and to be issued at such price or prices as may be sanctioned by him, such debenture stock to be created in lieu of borrowing, or in substitution for or for the discharge of the existing bonds of the company; and also to empower the board to raise the sum of £200,000, in addition to such sums as have been already authorised by the shareholders to be raised. The company, it is stated, will thus be enabled to give an opportunity to the holders of their existing debentures to come in and substitute permanent debenture stock for their bonds, at such rates as may be agreed upon between them and the company, and also to raise at favourable rates such additional sums as may be required to meet the expenditure on the current contracts in England and the works in progress in India. The existing bond debt of the company, it is announced, amounts to £610,700, and the borrowing power previously authorised by the shareholders, now remaining unexercised, represents a total of £38,000.

INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.—We understand that five cargoes of stores, consisting of Siemens' iron posts and insulators and of wire, left England last week for Persia. These stores will be transhipped at St. Petersburg into smaller steamers, which will take them through the Neva and the Volga to Astrachan, where they will again be transhipped for the ports of Rescht, Lencoran, and Astara, on the north coast of Persia. From these ports they will be conveyed to the interior on mules. It is expected that these stores will arrive at their destination (about 5,000 miles distant) in the month of October, when the erection of the line will at once be proceeded with, a staff of superintending engineers having already left England for that purpose. The three scientific advisers of the company, namely, General Von Luders, the director general of Russian telegraphs; Colonel Von Chauvin, director general of North German telegraphs; and Mr. W. H. Barlow, C.E., met lately at Berlin in order to decide upon the mode of construction of this international work, the execution of which has been undertaken by Messrs. Siemens Brothers, and is to be finished before the end of next year. The cable in the Black Sea is to have three insulated conductors, which are to be enclosed by a copper sheath to protect it against oxidation and against the attacks of marine insects, which abound in these regions. The Indian Government having decided to add another to their existing lines between Teheran and Kurrachee, in anticipation of the increased traffic to be expected from this new line, we may look forward to very perfect communication between this country and its Eastern possessions, which is so much needed. The Russian and Prussian Governments have formally declared that in case of war the transmission of commercial messages over the new line will not be interrupted.—Standard.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, June 26.—TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA.—Lord WILLIAM HAY called attention to the defects of our present telegraphic communications with India, objecting chiefly to their route lying through inhospitable countries, liable to be interrupted by political complications. He urged on the Government the construction of an alternative line by the Red Sea, which would be under our own control.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE replied that we had already two lines of communication—the Indo-Ottoman line and Siemen's line by Prussia, Russia, and Persia. Both of them were in course of improvement, and very shortly would fully suffice for all our needs. A line entirely under British control he regarded as a mere chimera, and among other objections he pointed out that it would involve a submarine cable carried round by Gibraltar down the Mediterranean. The Government had declined to give any assistance to a Red Sea line, for the principle of an Imperial guarantee was abandoned, and they were unwilling to charge the Indian revenues with the cost of such a project.—Mr. CRAWFORD put forward the desire of the commercial community for independent telegraphic communication on the ground of the frequent tampering with messages by the present lines; and Mr. SEYMOUR supported the Red Sea line.—Sir H. RAWLINSON distrusted both the existing lines. The Turkish line never could be made efficient, and the line by Prussia and Russia would fail us in time of war or political complications. He was in favour of a line by Suez to Bombay, though he allowed that this project was not free from complications, either political or financial.—After a few remarks from Mr. GRAHAM, the subject dropped.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, June 29.—THE INDIAN MUTINY MEDAL.—In reply to Mr. ADAMS, Sir S. NORTHCOTE said that he had addressed a despatch to the Governor-general of India, directing that, in order to dispose of the claims of those engaged in suppressing the rebellion, a medal should be granted to all persons who were under fire. This will include police as well as troops.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.—Mr. DISRAELI gave notice that on Thursday next he will move that the thanks of the House be given to her Majesty's forces engaged in the Abyssinian expedition.

IMPORTANT HISTORICAL WORKS.

Just published, in Two thick Volumes, demy 8vo., price £1. 12s.,

LIVES OF THE ENGLISH CARDINALS, from NICHOLAS BREAKSPEAR (Pope Adrian IV.) to THOMAS WOLSEY, Cardinal Legate. Including Historical Notices of the Papal Court. By FOLKESTONE WILLIAMS, Author of "Court and Times of James I.," "Court and Times of Charles I.," "Memoirs of Sophia Dorothea," &c.

Scarcely one adequate biography exists in print of "the Princes of the Church" of English birth; and when they are named collectively by their own countrymen, or foreign writers, they are briefly catalogued—frequently with doubtful incidents and questionable dates; nevertheless, the majority attained the highest honours, spiritual and temporal, and were engaged in some of the most important transactions in European history. It has, therefore, been considered that an acceptable service might be rendered to students by collecting the trustworthy details of Bale, Pits, Leland, Godwin, Tanner, Dugdale, and similar explorers in the same field of inquiry, adding such notices as may be gathered from the annals of the popes and cardinals, —Baronius, Cicconius, Aubrey, Spondanus, &c.; from the numerous monkish chroniclers, from Hemingford to Joscelin de Brakelonde, as well as from contemporary correspondence; and combining with them new facts from the researches of modern historians, such as Paulli, Neander, Dollinger, Rank, Cardella, Sismondi, Guizot, Lingard, Milman, Brewer, Giles, &c., &c.

Whilst tracing the development of the papal system, care has been taken to exhibit its influence upon society, especially at Rome, Avignon, or wherever the Pontifical Court resided. As members of what may be called the Privy Council of the Pope, each of the English cardinals who chose to remain at the seat of government assisted in its administration. Many were employed as diplomatists, or took a prominent part in the great councils, called from time to time to remedy evils then afflicting the Holy See; almost all were members of the hierarchy, in one or other of the principal branches of the Roman Apostolic Church, and not a few possessed almost unlimited authority at home in secular employments.

HISTORY OF CIVILISATION IN THE FIFTH CENTURY. Translated, by permission, from the French of A. FREDERIC OZANAM, late Professor of Foreign Literature to the Faculty of Letters at Paris. By ASHLEY C. GLYN, B.A., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

"Mr. Glyn's translation from Ozanam deserves high praise, and will, we hope, be cordially welcomed."—The Month.

"M. Ozanam's work, when not warped by ecclesiastical assumptions, is a valuable repository of facts and observations, relating to a period of deep historic interest."—Pa. Mail Gazette.

"Every ray is collected, as it were, by a lens, and thrown upon the Sacred text. The work is so interesting, that it is no easy matter to lay it down. The translation is as easy to read as if it were an original book."—Weekly Register.

"This book constitutes a very valuable addition to English Catholic literature."—Dublin Review.
"This book abounds in wise and interesting teachings."—Examiner.

"Mr. Thornton is master of a style of great perspicuity and vigour, always interesting, and frequently rising into eloquence. His power of painting character and of bringing before the eye of the reader the events which he relates, is remarkable; and if the knowledge of India can be made popular, we should say his is the pen to effect it."—Times.

"The writer evinces diligence and research into original authorities; his style is easy, and the intrinsic interest of the important events of Indian history is thus increased by a popular and amusing narrative."—Edinburgh Evening Courant.

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA from the Appointment of Lord Hardinge to the Death of Lord Canning. By LIONEL JAMES TROTTER, late 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The First Volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment, in 1844, to the retirement of the Marquis Dalhousie, in 1856.

The Second Volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India, in 1856, and closes with his Lordship's death, in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

In One Vol., 8vo., pp. 1015, with Map, price £1. 1s.,

A GAZETTEER OF INDIA, Compiled chiefly from the Records at the India Office. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq.

The chief objects in view in compiling this Gazetteer are :—
1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages, with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practicable brevity all that is known respecting them; and,
2nd. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these are added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which cannot otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The work, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India.

A SPECIFIC for the CURE of RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CONTUSIONS, WEAKNESS of the JOINTS, CHILBLAINS, &c. It is also an excellent remedy as a stimulating application to the surface of the chest and back in bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, pulmonary consumption, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial effect, and in all cases where counter irritation is desirable, it will be found invaluable.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.

Prepared from the receipt of an eminent Physician, and experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal coughs, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and vocalists they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation of opium, and of an agreeable taste, they are applicable to all.

In bottles of one uniform size.

Taken as an adjunct with WILKINSON'S SARSAPARILLA with the greatest success.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN.

No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. . . . It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB'S residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. BAKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, June 9; Agra, June 6; Calcutta and Madras, June 4.

It was expected that the last of the Indian regiments would leave Annesley Bay for Bombay before the middle of June. Some of the troops from Abyssinia had already reached Bombay, namely, 124 men of the 5-25 Battery R.A., a wing of the 45th Foot, and some officers with a few hundred camp followers. Other troops were hourly expected. So was the monsoon, which had begun throwing out its signals in the shape of thunder and lightning and some heavy rain. After all it seems that the two steam transports for which Sir R. Napier had telegraphed from Zoolla were found unfit to go, and he has managed without them.

THE Times of India strings together a number of reforms already contemplated or in course of execution. Among the latter is one which, according to the Indian Daily News, will shortly appear in the Gazette of India. It concerns the future arrangements of the Subordinate Medical Department, which will henceforth consist of apothecaries and hospital assistants, the former class to draw pay ranging from Rs. 50 to Rs. 400 a month, the latter drawing from Rs. 16 up to Rs. 30. The hospital stewards, forming a separate service, will consist henceforth of natives and Eurasians only, drawing from Rs. 20 to Rs. 45 a month. All members of the Subordinate Medical Department must pass College, and a junior apothecary may, under certain conditions, qualify himself for a sub-assistant-surgeon. The seniors in the Department are to rank as warrant officers.

AMONG measures still in embryo are a large extension of the telegraph lines and a cheapening of telegraph rates, a reform which will remain incomplete without the introduction of vernacular messages for the benefit of the millions. It is also proposed to improve the postal service by increasing the number and speed of through express trains, revising the system which allows up-country postmasters to choose their own time for making up their bags, and wielding a stricter supervision over the letter-carriers, some of whom are apt to make away with letters whose destination is hard to find. Another project, the introduction of a gold currency, is said to be undergoing careful scrutiny at the hands of Sir R. Temple, who is expected to carry out the conclusions of the Currency Commission which reported two years ago. On the main issue indeed, the making gold a legal tender, there seems to be a general agreement in India, along with much difference of opinion as to the means of applying the accepted principle. The Calcutta papers all protest against any seigniorage on silver as an unfair tax on trade and a needless method of establishing the rival currency. Many people again, says the Times of India, are frightened by Mr. Massey's prophecy that the making a legal tender of gold must, sooner or later, end in establishing the more precious metal as the ruling standard. What if it should? argues that journal. "Why inconvenience the whole trade and economy of the country because in 1950 another important change may be needed in the same direction?" There is too much pedantry about the whole question; but once in the hands of the new Finance Minister, the question ought soon to reach some practical conclusion. India, like other civilised countries, wants a gold coinage. Let her have it without needless delay, under conditions fair to herself and likely to encourage the import of gold from Australia in exchange for her own products.

THE Commission of Inquiry into the old Bank of Bombay was to begin sitting on the 10th of June. Its time at first would naturally be taken up with examining the mass of documents laid before it. Notices have already been served on many important witnesses, while others, it is said, are on their way from England. One gentleman however who had most to do with the changes that brought about the recent failure is still, it seems, "unrecognised by the Commissioners." There is some complaint too against the home committee, who, amidst many services rendered to the cause, had forgotten to plead for those shareholders who had been driven to sell out at a ruinous loss. The continued intrusion of the Bengal Bank's Agency is also a standing grievance with the supporters of the new Bank of Bombay. Mr. Ayrton is deservedly taken to task for declaring that "the constitution of the new bank is precisely the same as the old," and that the new bank "discounts bills without question, and gives cash credit without any provision for collateral security."

MR. F. D. CHAUNTRELL, by-the-way, has been appointed secretary to the Bombay Bank Commission. He is one of the acting police magistrates in Bombay.

THE deposed Nawab of Tonk has sent a vakeel home to plead his cause in this country. After the strict inquiry into his case and the solemn award thereon, it is rather startling to read in the Mofussilite an elaborate vindication of the interesting innocent. The whole story of the dark plot against the Thakoor of Lawa is declared by that journal to be false, a mere concoction of native cunning. The Nawab was a man of advanced Western ideas, eager to improve his country after the enlightened British fashion. But money was needed for that end. He levied a new tax. The Thakoor of Lawa refused to pay it, and defied him to come and take his share of it. After a while the Nawab invited the rebellious Rajpoot to a friendly conference. The latter accordingly went to Tonk with his uncle and a large retinue. Disappointed one day about seeing the Nawab's Vizier, who was ill, the uncle behaved insolently to the Vizier's representative, and the same night tried with his followers to force an entrance into the Vizier's house. In the fight which ensued between the defenders and the assailants this uncle, Rewunt Singh, and ten of his followers were slain. The rest were pursued up to the walls of Lawa. The whole thing, in fact, was a deep-laid plot of the Thakoor to murder the Vizier, if not to secure the dethronement of the Nawab himself. Everyone in Tonk is aware of this. But Hindu intrigue carried the day. Without having even seen the Political Agent's report, the luckless prince was deposed for aiding in the assassination of the Thakoor's uncle. This is a very pretty story as it stands; but it has at any rate a strong look of an elaborate after-thought. It smells a little too much of the lamp, we fear.

It is not often that bishops deign to write to the papers, or to keep their temper when they do write. The Bishop of Calcutta has done both things. In a letter to the Delhi Gazette he owns himself thankful always for just criticism, and tries to explain the difficulty under which he labours of "supplying chaplains to various important stations." The blame of the spiritual scarcity at Peshawur rests not with him, he says, but with the home authorities, who in spite of his repeated complaints and representations had failed to keep him sufficiently supplied with chaplains. He had been expecting one to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Williams's transfer to Abbotabad. As the one promised had not yet arrived, he would at once look out for another; "but I wish to observe," he adds, "that the supply of chaplains is beyond my control. I can only expostulate and entreat, which I have not been backward in doing." He regrets to throw any additional work for never so short a time "on the excellent missionaries in Peshawur," but would remark that something has been done for the country beyond the Indus by appointing the Rev. A. Horsburgh to Dera Ismail Khan. Peshawur is a large station, largely occupied by European troops. How is it that chaplains are so unaccountably scarce there?

THE Bombay Association have had their answer from Sir S. Northcote touching the admission of natives to the Covenanted Service. He refers them to clause XI. of his India Bill, which provides, as we know, for the employment of natives in the higher ranks of the Civil Service at the discretion of the Indian Government. That clause will lay, he thinks, "the foundation for a further advance" in the direction so much desired.

The further details of the attempt to assassinate the surgeon of the 5th P.I. at Bunnoo throw no light on the murderer's motives. The murderer himself had not been caught. Dr. Mackertich was badly wounded with sword-cuts in three places, but the last accounts represented him as doing well.

MOVED by an urgent appeal from the Bengal Governor, the Government of India has pressed on the Indian Minister the need of revising the salaries of the lower officials attached to the courts of the Mofussil Judges, Magistrates and Collectors, and of all uncovenanted judicial officers. These officers are mostly ill-paid, and no revision of their salaries has for a long time taken place, although the clerks and assistants in most public offices and departments have been amply cared for in these respects. The Lieutenant-governor would also place the Sheristadars of the principal Sudder Ameens on an equal footing with those of the magistrates and collectors. These improvements, says the Viceroy, must be extended to other presidencies, and that will cost money. But the case is urgent, and he has pleaded his best for it with the Home Government.

IN Madras the South-West Monsoon had already broken on the Western Coast, and favoured the whole Presidency with refreshing showers, which we in England might well envy it just now. The face of the country there is already brightening up under the welcome moisture, and the change in the weather promises to wash away the last forebodings of famine from the minds of the Revenue Board, whose extreme fussiness at the last moment seems to have greatly amused the European community. Perhaps the severe wiggling dealt out to the Bengal Board last year frightened them out of their cooler judgment.

THE Indus Valley Railway is already emerging from the land of mere dreams. A Government Committee has begun sitting at Kurrachee to decide by which bank of the Indus the new line shall run. There is much no doubt to say for both sides, but the weight of advantage seems to rest with the right bank as far as Sukkur. It may cost a trifle more in the making, but it is certain to command a wider and more constant traffic through the adjacence of towns like Shikarpore and Sukkur, and of a military station like Jacobabad. A bridge at Sukkur would also be much more feasible than one at Kotree.

AFFAIRS in Afghanistan and Bokhara seem to have made no particular progress since our former accounts. It is said that the Russians have acknowledged the late Ameer's nephew as his successor in the Khanate of Bokhara, and that Abdulrahman Khan was once more wavering in his allegiance to the present Ameer of Kabul. But all this and much more of the same kind is mere gossip, worth exactly what anyone pleases.

WE hear by private telegram from India that the Revised Furlough Rules were published on the 20th of June in the Government Gazette.

SIR R. NAPIER had a warm reception at Paris from the English there, who, headed by old Commodore Lynch, of the Indian Navy, presented him with an appreciative address, and wanted him to dine with them, had time allowed him. Sir Robert's answer claimed for his soldiers the chief credit of his success, and dwelt on the bridge of 400 miles, built from Zoolla to Magdala, as a proof that British soldiers could work as well as fight. At Dover the next morning the conquering hero had to stand another fire of fervent oratory, from the Mayor, which he met with another simply graceful speech, in which he introduced a neat reference to the 4th Foot, formerly quartered at Dover. In the evening of the same day, Thursday, the thanks of both Houses were voted to the gallant general and all his troops. Some of the speeches were happy, others fulsome or merely tedious. Mr. Disraeli made some good points, the effect of which was weakened by that strange taste which tempted him to talk of planting "the standard of St. George on the mountains of Rasselas," as if Abyssinia in that story were anything but a name. Mr. Gladstone paid a just tribute to the Government which had chosen so good a general, and left him unhampered; his remarks having special reference to Sir S. Northcote. In the other House Lord Malmesbury went through the whole campaign in his own dull fashion; Earl Russell spoke more briefly with somewhat better effect, and Lord Ellenborough praised all concerned in a style suggestive of his Eastern reminiscences. The best speech perhaps in the Upper House was that of the Duke of Cambridge, who drew from the late enterprise two morals: avoid divided counsels, and always have plenty of transport.

SIR R. NAPIER dined that night at Windsor, her Majesty honouring herself in the honour thus shown to so worthy a servant. On Wednesday he appeared at the Crystal Palace; and on Tuesday, the 21st instant, he and Lady Napier are to dine with the Lord Mayor at the Guildhall.

WE are glad to see that Sir Alexander Grant has been elected Principal of the Edinburgh University, after a close struggle with Sir James Simpson.

MAJOR CHESNEY'S "Indian Polity" is much too important a work to be dismissed in a sentence or even in a paragraph. In our next issue we hope to notice it at such length as our limited space allows.

“EST MODUS IN REBUS.”

THE Abyssinian heroes are already reaping their full meed of popular applause. Parliament, Press, and People have been vying with each other in the heartiness of the welcome offered to all who shared with Sir Robert Napier the trials and the glories of a campaign remarkable for bloodless victories and complete results. The Queen herself paid fitting homage to about the most successful and one of the very ablest of her commanders, by inviting him to eat at Windsor his first dinner on British ground after an absence of many years. In the House of Commons he and his army would have been thanked by acclamation, had the forms of the House allowed Mr. Gladstone so to carry out his heart's desire. The Prime Minister himself poured out the riches of his somewhat over-jewelled rhetoric on the heroes who had planted “the standard of St. George upon the mountains of Rasselas.” In the Upper House Lord Malmesbury likened the conqueror of Magdala to Cæsar, with the inevitable tag about “Veni, vidi, vici.” Other speakers praised his strategy, his modest bearing, the wonderful discipline he maintained among his soldiers, and the excellent conduct of all who served under him. There is hardly a journal which has begrudged him and his soldiers the very highest praise for every conceivable virtue; and in many cases, no doubt, that praise has not been the less sincere for the contrast between the disasters prophesied and the successes achieved. They on the other hand who refused to forebode evil have naturally been led to crow all the louder over the swift fulfilment of more than their boldest hopes. Sir Robert and his heroes are everywhere the lions of the hour. He himself has already been caught by the managers of the Crystal Palace, as a show to the multitude at a shilling a head in the same building where poor Theodore's horse may be seen on payment of sixpence more. The beast at this rate is worth a good deal more than the man; but we must allow for managerial exigencies and the need of making a popular hero visible to the many at a popular price. It is not every one who will pay extra to see the horse, whereas they can all stare at the successful soldier for nothing, as a mere part of the day's programme.

Nothing of course succeeds like success, and Sir Robert did all he could to command it. All honour to him and his much-enduring followers for showing us once more how Fortune favours the brave, and how quickly English soldiers can build —as their leader phrased it the other day—a bridge four hundred miles long! May he and they survive the perilous sequel of such a feat, in the shape, namely, of endless banquets and such-like tokens of a nation's gratitude! Six months' batta for the troops, promotion for some of the officers and men, and a peerage, if you like, for their leader, will be no more than a fair return for their distinguished services. To Sir R. Napier the nation owes much already for former achievements which have hitherto been but scantily repaid. It would be well however if our praise and admiration could but keep themselves within due bounds. There is no need of accepting the Pall Mall Gazette's rather unfair comparison between the size and swiftness of the French preparations last year for a descent on Italy, and our smaller and slower preparations for the march to Magdala. The two cases cannot for many reasons be compared. But when one critic says that nothing like the march to Magdala has been done since the days of Hannibal, and another talks of the march as the greatest achievement of modern times, and a third goes back to Cæsar for Sir R. Napier's parallel, one feels a little bewildered about historical facts. To take only the events of the last ten or twelve years, our Abyssinian triumphs can hardly be placed alongside Sherman's march from Nashville to Atlanta in the face of a powerful foe, or of Sir Hugh Rose's campaign in Central India, or of that marvellous siege of Delhi, which even now reads like a wild dream. We are very proud of Sir R. Napier, of the men he led to victory, and of the Indian departments which organised the late campaign. But it is well to keep some sense of proportion in our praises, to have some little regard for rhetorical perspective, and not to spend all our finest phrases on an enterprise in which Nature was our worst foe, and Fortune, next to Science, among our best friends.

THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.—III.

HAVING seen what the members of his Council and one or two other Anglo-Indians of mark had to say on the vexed questions raised by his own memorandum, Sir S. Northcote proceeds to take the opinion of the statesmen who compose the Supreme Government. In his despatch of the 16th January he invites the Governor-general in Council to consider in detail certain questions founded on suggestions which have either occurred to himself or been urged upon him by “persons whose authority is entitled to respect.” We need not go through the suggestions which virtually reproduce the pith of the foregoing papers. As for the questions, they differ little in effect from those laid before the Special Committee. Shall Bengal be placed on the same administrative footing as Madras and Bombay? Or should things remain as they are between the Supreme and the local Government? Or would it be better to unite the two governments—and by what process? Or would you restore the old relations between them by turning the Lieutenant-governor into a Deputy-governor with a seat in the Supreme Council? And ought we in that event to abolish his Legislative Council, dividing its duties between him and the general Legislature? How about giving the Viceroy “a more direct share” in the government of Bengal and the other presidencies? And if the Viceroy went away from Bengal, might he not take with him one or two members of his Council for administrative purposes?

Sir S. Northcote also asks for advice touching “summary powers of legislation for certain portions of India,” touching the need of a formal inquiry into the question of removing the seat of government, the best way of strengthening the Bengal executive, and the wisdom of abolishing the Board of Revenue as now existing.

In answering these questions the Governor-general leads the way with a minute summing up his own conclusions. Bengal needs no Council like that of Madras, but if one were given her, it should be composed of the two chief secretaries, who would still retain their old executive powers. The existing relations between the two Governments should be preserved. There is no good in maintaining a separate legislature for Bengal, since “it does not possess the same weight as the other local legislatures." The Lieutenant-governor should have the same powers of summary legislation as the Lieutenant-governors of the Punjab and other provinces. The Viceroy ought to have full power of interfering at need "in the way of supervision and control." During absence from Calcutta for a short period, he might appoint a President in Council to carry on the government, reserving for himself the right of independent action by summoning one or two members to his side on special occasions. If absent for a longer period, he should always take his Council with him. Summary powers of legislation might also be given to all provinces lacking a local legislature of their own. Assam, Cachar, and certain adjacent districts might be placed under a separate Chief Commissioner, but Orissa should still remain a part of Bengal. The Viceroy objects to a commission on the best seat of government for India. No new information could be gained thereby; opinion is largely in favour of Calcutta; and there is "obviously" no other place where the Government could stay for so large a part of each year. The Bengal Secretariat should be strengthened, a financial commissioner substituted for the Revenue Board, Sind should continue under Bombay, and British Burmah under the Governor-general.

The grounds for these conclusions were given by Sir J. Lawrence in an earlier memorandum, upholding the advantages of personal government "by a single head, without a Council" for many parts of India, including Bengal. Even in Governments that have Councils most of the progress made is due to the personal influence of men like Munro, Malcolm, and Elphinstone. Counsel within limits is useful to every ruler; but he himself found he could work much better in the Punjab with subordinate agents than with regular colleagues, and the same experience holds good of the North-West Provinces, in spite of the events of 1857, which were too rapid for the preventive means at hand. Orissa has nothing to do with that question, for with a different system things might have turned out just as bad, a Council and a Revenue Board being virtually one thing under different names, and the Lieutenant-governor having actually visited Orissa at the right moment for averting disaster. In the North-West famines have always been met with the noblest energy and forecast. Lieutenant-governors have almost always been the best men available for the work, and have never shown a tendency to undo the policy of their predecessors. Some change of policy moreover is sometimes good. A Lieutenant-governor fit for his post is quite "strong enough to rule alone;" and fit men may always be found in the future as in the past. The relief which a Council gives in one direction is made up by the added burdens in another. Besides, "Madras and Bombay have separate armies and services, whereas Bengal has not;" they are distant from the Supreme Government, while Bengal is under its eye. A governor from England might need a Council, but a ruler of Indian experience and knowledge works best without one, and such an officer is best suited for the work.

The conditions of the three Presidencies are quite distinct, continues the Viceroy. Madras and Bombay are far from Calcutta, are nearer England, have long been all but independent of Bengal. Their Governors correspond direct with the Indian Minister. In Bengal things are every way different, and how could you have two governments corresponding directly with the India-office from one same capital? The Indian Government, "being in Bengal and in Calcutta, is and must inevitably be more responsible for Bengal" than for the other Presidencies. But the means of discharging that responsibility would be diminished by making Bengal a full Government. Is the Viceroy to be "fully and really Governor-general for Northern and Central India, and not fully and really Governor-general for the lower provinces or Bengal proper?"

Sir John further denies that the viceregal policy towards Madras and Bombay is "tinged with Bengal influences." Only on financial questions does the Supreme Government interfere with the local Governments, and even so the latter have had "all and sometimes more than their share" of the common revenue.

If however it be determined that Bengal should have a full

Government of her own, the Viceroy hopes that something will be done towards bringing the several Presidencies into closer dependence than heretofore on the Supreme Government in all matters of the first importance. The views of the latter on such points should at any rate be submitted to the India-office before the measures of the local Governments have been sanctioned by the powers at home. As for separating Calcutta from Bengal, that is utterly out of the question. It would be "tearing the heart out of the body politic," in order to overburden the Indian Government with local work "foreign to its proper duties."

The rest of this weighty if rather onesided memorandum deals with the question of the future seat of Government for the whole empire. Assuming that you cannot transfer the Government to any but "a first-class city and station," Sir J. Lawrence points out the objections to the North-West as being too far from the sea-board, to Poona as lying much too far from the North-West, and to the presidency capitals, because they have never been so long and closely connected as Bengal with the central Government. Calcutta, moreover, has the largest European community in India, is the chief city of the richest and most populous of Indian provinces, the great fiscal reservoir of our Indian Empire, surrounded by the most peaceful and docile of Indian populations, and linked to the North-West by the best possible means of communication. For half the year it is not unhealthy. But the Supreme Government should not be tied down there for the whole year. Such a rule holds nowhere else. In no other country do the heads of the Government remain all the year round in one place, and in India every Viceroy has been absent from Calcutta for a half or at least a third of his time. In order to learn his duties, to understand the country and people under his charge, the Viceroy is bound to "move about the interior of India." In moments of urgency he may act alone; but in ordinary times he ought to be accompanied by his Council. Nor have such movements ever added to the ordinary expenses of the State, which include of course the yearly allowances for travelling and State Durbars.

Sir W. Mansfield follows with a minute which disentangles at least one knot in the general question. He approves of a separate Governor and Council for Bengal, on condition that the local governments are forbidden to correspond direct with the Secretary for India. The Viceroy should be "the sole authority responsible to the Secretary of State," instead of being hampered as now and set at nought by the quasi-independence of the local governments. Sir W. Mansfield holds that government by council is safer and more beneficial than government by one man, however able. In view of the European settlements in Bengal, Assam, Behar, he would maintain a legislative council for Bengal, as a safety-valve for the expression of opinion. As for the Supreme Council, it should always move with the Governor-general, who ought to go wherever the interests of the moment may call him. Legislative councils might be given to the North-West Provinces also and the Punjab. The presence at any time of two governors in one capital would in no way affect the relative importance or powers of either, any more than the presence of the Commander-in-Chief affects the officer commanding the Presidency division. Outlying provinces should remain under the governments to which they have been accustomed. Sir William further holds, from his own experience in Bombay, that the presence of a council "at Sir C. Beadon's elbow" would have averted the Orissa calamity, and that the success of one able ruler without a council is no warrant for the success in like circumstances of rulers less able, as the majority of governors are certain to be.

Sir William Muir agrees with the Viceroy in preferring a governor without a council to a governor with a council, unless he be chosen from persons unacquainted with India. He is also for maintaining the present relations between the Supreme and the Local Government, and against associating the Lieutenant-governor with the Viceroy's Executive Council. But he differs from the Viceroy in desiring to retain the Legislative Council for Bengal, and would extend the principle to the Punjab and the North-West. Like Sir J. Lawrence, he is strong against moving the seat of government from Calcutta, would transfer Assam from the Lieutenant-governor to the Viceroy, would cut down the Revenue Board to one member, and let the Governor-general take his Council with him on his travels. These last should lead the Viceroy from time to time out of the beaten track. And, finally, Sir W. Muir holds with Sir W. Mansfield that if Bengal be made a full government, there should be no direct correspondence with the Secretary of State. That practice, as now pursued in Madras and Bombay, weakens the hands of the Viceroy, embitters his relations with the Local Governments, and tends to make the Secretary of State virtual Governor-general of India.

Sir Henry Durand, like the rest of his colleagues, objects to fixing the Supreme Government down to Calcutta all the year round. During the late war in Abyssinia it ought to have placed itself "at or near Bombay." At other times its presence might be needed at Madras or in the Punjab. Under any circumstances it should not be transferred yearly, as a matter of course, to Simlah, which is out of the way of everything, and takes a month to reach. Instead of making Bengal into a full Government, Madras and Bombay should rather be reduced to Lieutenant-governorships. Sir Henry would retain the Legislative Council of Bengal, keep the Lieutenant-governor out of the Viceroy's Executive Council, empower the Viceroy to "take up any local administration whatever," and let the Supreme Council always travel with the Governor-general. He is not for granting any Government summary powers of legislation, sees no need to separate Orissa or Assam from Bengal, would transfer Sind to the Punjab, and is doubtful about abolishing the Board of Revenue. As for the power of direct correspondence between Madras, Bombay, and the India-office, it is not that which needs reforming, but the practice of the Supreme Government. If the latter passed two years out of five in Bombay and Madras, as it has power to do, "we should hear little of its loss of weight and influence" with those presidencies, even though all the subordinate Governments were filled up from England. And lastly, Sir Henry would insist on the making of some attempt to remedy the one great evil of the permanent settlement in Bengal; namely, the absence of personal intercourse between the mass of the people and the few European officials, who know nothing officially below the zemindars. To remove this isolation is "a grave, large, and complicated question."

Mr. Maine, having returned to India, adds another contribution to the common debate, in which he especially dwells on the wisdom of restoring to the Executive those summary powers of legislation for the outlying and less advanced provinces, of which it was deprived in 1861. Nothing is more dangerous, he thinks, than to refer to the Supreme Legislature every new law needed for "the wilder and less civilised portions of India." He differs from the Viceroy in offering a decided negative to the proposed abolition of the Bengal Legislative Council, which does all its work reasonably, and much of it "exceedingly well." The transfer of its business to the Supreme Council would break the latter down altogether, besides filling it half full with Bengal civilians and natives, too thoroughly leavened with European ideas to understand the wants of other parts of India. Of summary legislation for a province like Bengal, with its powerful class consisting of Europeans and natives of European culture, Mr. Maine will not hear a word. The local councils should be multiplied, not diminished. He ends by repeating his objections to the plan of fixing the Supreme Government in Calcutta all the year round.

Mr. G. N. Taylor has long been of opinion that the best way to strengthen the Government of Bengal is to alter it on the model of Madras. Neither Munro nor Malcolm could have done so well as they did but for the aid of an executive council. Mr. Taylor would abolish the Revenue Board or else convert it into one of four commissioners for the four large divisions of Bengal, to take the place of the present commissioners. The new Government should be allowed to correspond direct with the Indian Minister, under limitations carefully prescribed. The Bengal Legislative Council ought not to be abolished, nor should powers of summary legislation be granted to the older provinces. Calcutta might remain the head-quarters of the Supreme Government for three or four months in the year, and the Council might meet wherever the Viceroy happened to be. If a change of head-quarters be needed, "we must inevitably move westward" to Poonah or Bombay. With a full Government for Bengal, no change should be made in Assam; but Behar might be transferred to the North-West.

Mr. Massey on the other hand would leave the Government of Bengal as it is, for fear of impairing the power of the Central Government. There is no need either to give the Lieutenant-governor more work by placing him in the Viceroy's Council, or to do away with the local Legislature, which mainly transacts local business. The Viceroy should have some "exceptional" power of legislating summarily, in very urgent cases, for the outlying provinces. With regard to the future seat of Government, Mr. Massey sides with Mr. Maine in deeming Calcutta unfit for a permanent head-quarters on account of the general dislike to it and of its positive unhealthiness. He can see no weighty reasons for staying there which would not have applied to the retaining of the English law courts at Westminster. Like Mr. Taylor, he is clearly for moving towards Bombay.

In a second, or rather third minute, Mr. Maine reasserts his former conclusions, supported by fresh arguments in favour of giving Bengal a full Government. Such a concession would still leave the Viceroy a direct control over several large provinces like the Punjab, Burmah, Oudh, besides the powers he wields over the native States and the minor Governments, not to speak of all that is implied in his control of the public works, the finances, the vast European and native army, and the whole foreign policy of British India. Again, with regard to Calcutta, Mr. Maine warmly insists that nothing but a most transparent fiction has kept alive the theory of its being the only capital of British India, so many years after that theory ought to have been exploded by proven facts. For the last thirty-five years Simlah has been quite as much of a capital as Calcutta, if not more. Of the drawbacks urged by Sir H. Durand against Simlah, nearly all are in course of removal, and one or two, such as the time spent in travelling to and fro, are drawbacks only in appearance. And at any rate the healthier the climates the greater are the chances of getting the work well done, and of securing a supply of fit men to do it. "There is no economy which a Government can practise like the economy of its servants' health and nerve." Calcutta is the right capital for Bengal, but satisfies no fair test of a capital for all India. The establishment of a standing camp every cold season near each of the great native cities in turn is the plan which Mr. Maine once more brings forward as the most suitable.

Mr. Grey's elaborate minute, with the final comments of the Governor-general and two or three of his colleagues, demands separate notice. For that and for a few remarks of our own on the whole question we must beg our readers to wait one more week.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

HOW THEY MANAGE IN THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

The Indian Daily News maintains that the present way of making contracts favours that species of rascality which we have often condemned in connection with the contract system. It is that which allows powdered chalk to be supplied as arrowroot to military hospitals in time of war, and on which (the contract, not the arrowroot) "the forty," as our friends of Bombay call them—we presume they are the lineal descendants of the "forty thieves"—get fat. It is this which enables men in office to give hints, and men out of office to take them, by which either a contractor is ruined or the Government cheated. We will suppose a building in course of erection; the plans have been made by our skilful engineers or wonderful architects; quantities have been estimated to a brick and a lath, and the building is to be completed within a given time. Now give the whole to a respectable firm, and the thing will be done. But no; there is a better method than that. And not to make the case too pointed by a reference to existing buildings, we will suppose his Excellency resolved to have a new Government house. A plan is drawn, quantities worked out, and a close approximation of the cost. The bricks are of course supplied from Acra, the lime from somewhere, and the work goes on merrily. In the meantime some timber merchant, who has a friend in the office, receives a hint that by-and-by there will be certain beams required, and they are procured to be in readiness within a given time. In due course, that is, when the timber is required, an advertisement is stuck in a corner to this effect:—"Tenders are invited for the supply of timber for the Palace in course of erection for his Excellency the Viceroy. Forms of tender, &c., may be had at the office of the undersigned," &c., &c. It is pretty well known that no such timber is in the market, and it is one of the terms of tendering that it must be delivered on a certain date, by which it is impossible to procure it from the timber districts. But somebody knows where the timber is, and asks and obtains his own price for it. And this is doing work cheaply by split contracts. Had the whole contract been given to Messrs. Brick, Mortar, and Co., they would doubtless have ordered the timber from Burmah when they began the foundations, and it would be had when wanted at a fair price. Timber is, of course, only one of the many materials used in building, and the same dodges may be practised, and doubtless are practised with other things. And what chance is there of a satisfactory result in divided contracts where each part of the work or the material is supplied without respect to the result of the whole? This point the committee touch upon in a single paragraph, though more might be said upon it. Possibly it is as difficult to build a palace, a high court, or a post-office with soorkey for mortar, as it is to build up a sickly constitution in Abyssinia with chalk for arrowroot. Nevertheless, the "forty" thrive; and Sir Richard Temple will have to contend with the Laocoon of the P. W. D. and others of the tribe. But he will assuredly have the support of public opinion, and such information as a body so practical as the Trades Association can lay before him.

THE BOMBAY BANK COMMISSION.

The Madras Times cannot deny that the shareholders have the strongest moral claim to compensation. Sir Stafford Northcote has indeed admitted in Parliament that a case might be made out for compensation, though he thinks it will be very difficult to establish such a case. Our own belief is that, when the revelations of the Commission shall once be laid open, public opinion will become too strong on that point to be overborne. We do not anticipate that the shareholders will have to try conclusions with the Government at law. The scandal will be so overwhelming that there will be only one way of dealing with it—payment; though its lesson will remain indelible for ever. It is said indeed that there are no funds out of which any compensation can be paid; for that it would be hard to throw upon the public revenues the burden of making good the misconduct of the directors, however gross, and however conclusively established—in other words, that the ryot should not be called upon to pay for either "arch speculators," or rather peculators. Sir Stafford Northcote has already taken this ground. Here the Governments of Bombay and India based their non-liability to pay the shareholders' capital on the ground of joint partnership, as we have already explained. Sir Stafford Northcote, in his reply to the home shareholders, perhaps incautiously, we will not say abandoned this position, but did not rely upon it. He might well have fought that issue out first, and have fallen back on the want of funds, if worsted. But he chose at once to reply, that he did not see how the public revenues of India could be made responsible for the shareholders' capital. To this the shareholders have replied in a fashion that appears to us unanswerable. They show that this is the invariable course, and cite various instances both in English and Indian history in which it has been pursued; we need only name the case of Mr. Ricketts in Madras, and Sir Thomas Turton in Calcutta, both of whose defalcations were made good to the sufferers out of the public revenues by legislative enactments. On the whole, we are inclined to think that the prospects of the shareholders are at present in better plight than we ever expected to see them; and when we remember how many helpless and entirely innocent parties—widows, orphans, trustees, time-expired civilians and military men, and how many charities, native as well as European, have suffered by misconduct so gross as to be still barely credible, we confess we feel a satisfaction in the thought. One word of caution we would still ask to be permitted to offer. We fear it is too much to expect of our apathetic and apparently indifferent friends in Bombay that they should constitute any vigilance committee to watch the Commission; but we would earnestly suggest that some one thoroughly and practically acquainted with banking should be employed to assist the labours of the Commission. We have no doubt as to the abilities of the Commission and its secretary, but we believe that more good often comes out of an ounce of practical technical knowledge than a whole cart-load of talent. One of the foremost London actuaries, whose whole life has been dedicated to ferreting out fraudulent bankruptcies, would be the best agent for unravelling the bank's transactions; but if this is too much, there is a man on the spot fitted beyond all others in Bombay for this duty—Mr. Stuart, the official liquidator of the old bank. Independent of his long training as a banker, every transaction of the old bank during the last eventful years of his life, must be at his fingers' ends, and he is one; unconnected with the events themselves, in whom every one places implicit confidence.

EMPLOYMENT OF NATIVES IN THE ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT.

The Madras Times points out that while the natives of India make much clamour about the great difficulty they find in getting into the Covenanted Civil Service, and the impossibility of entering the Army Medical Department, there is, they quite forget, a sphere of employment open to them from which they voluntarily exclude themselves. The Government of India has for some years held out appointments as assistant engineers on the Public Works Establishments to any natives who qualified themselves for such a position. Civil Engineering Colleges were provided to train candidates, the examination was local, no distant voyage or deterring risk was involved, and those who obtained admission to the service could rise on exactly the same terms as other engineers. With all this, out of the great number of Government engineers in India hardly any are natives. It appears singular that a very fairly paid profession should go a-begging. In our own Presidency the higher education has not been so widely spread as on the Bengal side, which might partially account for it; but, viewing India as a whole, it is matter for reflection that facilities of this kind for serving Government in places of responsibility are not taken advantage of. At present the public works of India are conducted, almost exclusively, by European agency down to the overseers. The people at large take little or no interest in them, though of such vital consequence to their well-being and support, and no prominent part in their management. The salary of an assistant engineer on first starting is two hundred rupees a month, and thenceforward promotion is according to seniority and merit combined. The requirements are activity, diligence, and a fair amount of professional knowledge. Natives might easily expect to rise to the position of executive engineer on seven or eight hundred rupees a month, as one actually has in Bombay. There is nothing to prevent their aspiring higher if competent. Some explanation is due from educated natives of their throwing to one side these advantages. The grievance of having no outlet in the revenue and judicial line worthy of their genius and social standing may be valid; but it weakens their claim to a hearing considerably when one of the liberal professions closely allied to the Civil Service in vain throws its doors wide open. Natives of an inferior class enter the lower ranks of the department very freely, but their scanty training makes them more inclined to follow the course of routine right away to pension than to learn more and rise further. The averseness to the engineering profession exhibited by natives seems greatly due to his preference of an easy sedentary life, and is worthy of attention by educationists. There must be a grand defect somewhere in the school system of India if to fill the more active pursuits the training can only produce students quite incapable from constitutional feebleness of applying the knowledge that has been imbibed into the head. We say nothing of the very natural love of kindred not being tempered by a sense of public duty. That is a lesson not to be acquired from text books. The service is also perhaps rendered unpopular by the very equality with Europeans that is striven to be maintained, and which if it were real would be all the more grateful to educated natives not over assured.

A GOLD CURRENCY.

The Friend of India holds that if we look to Australia for our gold we must offer some inducement to her to send it to us instead of to England. If silver shows a more profitable remittance by 2 per cent., Australian gold, which can be laid down in England as cheap as it can be in India, will go to England for the purchase of silver to pay India, and this state of affairs lasts until such time as bills in India on England being cheap a certain amount of gold comes here for investment in this manner. But here crops out the inevitable effect of supply and demand. Thus, if too much gold comes in from Australia, the market for gold falls, while at the same time the increased demand for bills causes them to harden, so that little or no profit may accrue to the importers of gold. Now we want as much gold as Australia can give us, and to get this we must upset the foregoing aphorism of supply and demand. We must give them a market which shall never fall, however much they may send on account of England, and the plan we would propose is simply this. Do away with the seigniorage on gold say one per cent.; and whereas at the present time the Indian gold standard is 11-12ths fine and 1-12th alloy, make it 10-11ths fine and 1-11th alloy; this would yield something over $\frac{3}{4}$ per cent., or exactly $\frac{76}{100}$, the Indian sovereign then standing at 109 grains fine and 11 grains alloy as opposed to 110 grains fine and 10 grains alloy. If then the mint were always open to coin such pieces, and the Government make the same a legal tender for 10 rupees, it follows that Australia would have a market for her gold guaranteed not to fall below a certain point; and, moreover, she could afford to give more for bills on London, and reduce her risks by 1½ per cent. Further, it is by no means improbable that were the reform in our standard of value advocated above brought into force, a considerable portion of the gold now lying unproductive in the country would immediately come forward for coinage, which would shorten the time which must elapse ere we can emerge from a double to a gold standard. It may be urged, as stated above that it is tampering with the relative values of the two metals which might lead to disaster; but as asserted above coins of 11-12ths fine do not remain in circulation, and it would be folly for the Government to pass a law which past experience has taught us would simply be non-operative. Colonel Smith seems to dread any scheme such as we have sketched out, fearing that in such a case silver would go out of the country. Perhaps to a certain extent such an occurrence might be a blessing rather than the contrary, since we do not desire to increase our circulating medium, but merely to substitute gold for a certain portion of it; but Colonel Smith forgets that he has previously asserted "that the imports of bullion into India greatly exceed the exports;" and that China pays for all the opium in silver, by the action of exchange either giving us Bills on England which take the place of bullion, or sending us silver by which we recoup ourselves for any that might have gone out. Moreover, it is to be anticipated that India being out of the market as a purchaser of silver, the price would recede so far as to counteract any trifling difference there might be in the rating of the two metals. In conclusion we are free to admit that the above proposal would create considerable difficulty in the rating either of the English or Australian sovereign, so as to give them a concurrent circulation with our own gold coins; but we look upon the idea of ever floating them and keeping them in circulation at ten rupees, whatever legal enactments may come into operation, as visionary in the extreme; nor can we understand why in a matter which essentially concerns India a foreign coin should be forced on us as a standard of value.

The Indian Daily News deems the introduction of a gold coinage advisable on the following grounds:—1. The measure is necessary to prevent the early collapse of our export trade. The annual flow of silver into this country has hitherto had the effect of sustaining the price of that metal in Europe in the face of its practical demonetisation in several continental countries and in America. Should that flow become increased, or continue of its normal volume, that is, as great as say in 1864, the inevitable effect will be that silver will become dearer in Europe and America, while becoming, in inverse degree, cheaper here. A consequence sure to follow will be that the mercantile communities of Europe will eventually find it unprofitable to pay in silver for the commodities they import from India, and will have to resort to other tropical countries where the purchasing power of the metal has not depreciated, and which will receive gold in exchange for produce; in which case the foreign trade of this country will have, in a large degree, collapsed. 2. That notwithstanding the immense quantity of silver stored or hoarded in this country, its aggregate is probably very inadequate to what the subsidiary currency and requirements of India will demand at a by-no-means distant date; such is the rapid progress in development this country is making under British Government and care. 3. That though a vast deal more silver may be imported, the excess over and above Indian currency and arts' requirements will not return to Europe, but will eventually pass hence into Central or interior Asia, to open up the countries of those regions to trade and commerce, the indices of civilisation; and this rush of silver over the Himalayas is likely to have become so great at some, even now approaching, period, that if a gold currency shall not have been previously established in India great metallic currency inadequacy and commercial disruption may result from the flow westward, northward and eastward of silver. Hence too—corollary-wise—silver should only be very, very gradually, if at all, demonetised in this country. Such are the principal grounds on which the introduction of gold, as legal tender, may be advocated. To effect such introduction without loss and injustice to large sections of the community will, however, require grave and anything but cursory consideration. For the present, our limits will not permit of our saying more than that whatever plan may be adopted it can hardly be that advocated by the two Mint Masters who have just written on the subject. These gentlemen, to ensure the currency of gold, would impose a seignorage of four or more per cent. on all silver sent to the mint for coinage! This absurd proposition requires few words to dispose of it. A seignorage is hardly defensible on any grounds; it is in essence a tax on industry, a tax on the labour which raises gold and silver from the bowels of the earth, and though India has not yet been discovered to be a gold or silver producing country, she is about the last country in the world which should impose a heavy seignorage, or any seignorage at all on her imports of the precious metals, dependent as her export trade is in such large degree on those imports. In her case the seignorage on silver of four per cent. proposed by Colonels Ballard and Smith would simply stagnate the export trade of the country. It would make the importation of silver less profitable by its amount, that is by four per cent., and would consequently diminish the amount imported, so reducing the demand for produce in India, and lowering prices. In a word, it would be precisely as if an additional export duty of four per cent. were levied on all Indian produce exported to silver-sending countries.

THE BHAMO EXPEDITION.

The Friend of India is in possession of full particulars respecting the explorers' route up to 28th April, when they were encamped at Ponsee, a point on the Kakhyen mountains only fifty miles from Bhamo and ten from the Shan town of Manwyne. The party had been delayed there since the 6th March by imperative and unavoidable circumstances. From Ponsee a slight descent of five miles leads to the plains, or rather plateau, which is continued as far as the Chinese frontier. The day after Captain Sladen's arrival at Ponsee all the mulemen, who had been supplied by the Kakhyen Tsaubwas, deserted in a body with their animals. These men had received instructions from several chiefs in the Shan States not to give further assistance, under pain of death. The Shan chiefs acted in this matter under the commands of a Chinese robber chieftain, by name Leesetahy, who held a fortified position at a place called Manphoo, on the high road from Ponsee to the frontier city of Momein. This Leesetahy had been able for some years past to hold his own as a dacoit leader against all the opposition which the Chinese or Panthay Governments could bring against him. At times he has succeeded in calling to his standard as many as 5,000 adventurers, and their sole means of livelihood has been plunder and dacoity. His position at Manphoo was formidable as a stronghold or place of retreat, because situated on the summit of a range of mountains, to which access was more or less impracticable to an attacking party.

But though this Leesetahy was deemed an outlaw on the frontier of China, it was well known that he had relatives in Burmese territory, and that this connection placed him somewhat under the influence of certain Chinese traders at Bhamo, who viewed the present expedition as one destined to ruin their own petty interests. Leesetahy was communicated with by three Chinamen under the advice of Burmese officials; and was we learn made a tool of by them for the purpose of opposing Captain Sladen's progress through the Shan States. After the explorers became aware, however, of the infamous conduct of the Burmese officials, Captain Sladen was induced to try and counteract its effects by entering into communication with the chiefs at Momein, and obtaining their co-operation and assistance.

It was no easy matter to get letters conveyed to Momein, for all Residents at Bhamo were under strict orders neither to assist nor hold intercourse of any kind with the members of the exploring party. Captain Sladen at last succeeded in securing the services of three Kakhyens; and, favoured by time or accident, arranged that these men should be despatched as messengers. Replies from Momein were received a few days after the arrival of the explorers at Ponsee, and Captain Sladen was assured by the chiefs of Panthay on the Yunnan frontier of hearty co-operation, and told to be of good cheer. They, however, recommended that if he had not a force sufficiently powerful to guarantee his travelling in safety, he had better remain where he was until further advice. Subsequent letters were received to the effect that the Panthay Government had determined on sending out a large force to attack Leesetahy and drive him out of the field. At the same time the Shan Tsaubwas of Sanda and Moulah were addressed by the Panthay authorities, and ordered to give full assistance when required. Captain Sladen had already written, and sent valuable presents to these Tsaubwas chiefs when he first arrived at Ponsee, and heard of their opposition to his advance. The presents were at that time returned, and he was informed that they could not be received until all the chiefs of the States had been consulted, and had agreed to give the expedition free transit through their respective territories. When they saw, however, that the English party were in friendly communication with the Panthay Government at Momein, and had been themselves ordered to furnish assistance to the expedition, their tone altered, and the explorers were informed that active opposition would no longer be offered them.

The Panthay chiefs were true to their word, and a force was sent to besiege Manphoo, which was captured on the 19th instant. The garrison had been starved into surrender, but Leesetahy escaped. The Panthay General Lasakon then sent an escort as far as Sanda, to meet the expedition; and the members only await carriage for baggage and presents to enable them to proceed. Burmese influence and intrigue, however, have followed them so perseveringly that we learn that even then the carriage was unprocureable. The Kakhyens are, it is said, so fond of the explorers and their money that they will not bestir themselves to provide the means by which the English might be enabled to leave them.

The S. W. monsoon had commenced, and provisions were so reduced that Captain Sladen found it necessary to effect a diminution in the strength of his party. Nothing could be done during a monsoon in the way of surveying; and Captain Williams returned to Rangoon, with a Mr. Stewart, the mercantile representative of the Rangoon Chamber of Commerce. Dr. Anderson, however, remained, together with Captain Bowers. The discomforts and inconvenience of travelling in the face of a S. W. monsoon, or the more trivial consideration of overstaying by a couple or three months the period finally allowed for the completion of its object were not taken into account in estimating the great importance of opening out Yunnan to British commercial enterprise. The prize is now within their reach.

The active co-operation of the rulers of Yunnan has, hitherto, been viewed as a contingency too good, or too remote for realisation. Everything now depends upon the party reaching Momein. It is gratifying to know that so far Captain Sladen's diplomacy with the Momein chiefs has completely upset the intrigues of the Burmese and Chinese villains residing at Bhamo. It will be seen from the foregoing details that however anxious the King of Burmah may have been to fulfil the promises of assistance which he had made to Captain Sladen, the Burmese officials have done their best to stop the progress of the expedition.

STATION TALK.

PESHAWUR, May 25.—It has been reported at Peshawur that the Swatis, on hearing that the British Government had stopped all communications between their country and its subjects, and on being told, further, that British troops had left Peshawur for Unsoobjie, went in hundreds to their living saint, the Akhoond Sahib, and offered their services to him. They are coming in hundreds from all the surrounding districts to Swat in the hope that the Akhoond might make use of them by ordering a jehad or crusade against the English. The Akhoond has, however, suppressed their rude passion and fanatical tone for war, telling them that unless the English first make encroachments on his territory, or otherwise give him cause for molestation, he considers it imprudent to adopt any hostile offensive measure. This shows how the news of a simple shutting up both countries has been received at Swat and Boonair. No wonder if the Swatis, at the present moment of their fanaticism, make a sudden raid on our territory with some loss to our subjects and a certain trouble to ourselves. Cholera has appeared at Peshawur in its most virulent form since last year. The first case of cholera, which resulted in an instantaneous death, occurred this season on the 19th instant, whereby a youthful native dealer in horses met a melancholy and quite unexpected death.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

ITEM FROM CHITTAGONG.—We regret to hear that Mr. A. W. Russell, Judge of Chittagong, died of cholera on the 23rd of May.

THE NEW FURLOUGH RULES.—The new furlough rules are printed and in the hands of the members of Council. Perhaps their next sitting may put an end to our present suspense.—Pioneer, June 3.

NATIVE JUDGE OF THE HIGH COURT.—Baboo Dwarkanath Mitter, a pleader of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William, in Bengal, is appointed a judge of the said High Court.

MAJOR-GENERAL J. FORDYCE, commanding the Presidency Division, returned on June 2 to Calcutta from his tour of inspection at Darjeeling, accompanied by his aide-de-camp, Captain Fergus Graham.

COLONEL C. HERBERT.—The Gazette announces the appointment of Colonel C. Herbert to officiate as political agent in Turkish Arabia, during the absence of Sir A. Kemball on furlough. The report, therefore, of the latter's retirement was rather premature.

A NEW CANAL IN THE PUNJAB.—The construction of a canal from Pind Dadan Khan, proposed by Mr. Prinsep, for the conveyance of salt from these districts to Lahore, has been sanctioned by Government.

COMMISSION OF INQUIRY AT SAMNUGUR.—A Commission, consisting of Colonel Hyde and Majors Trevor and Hovenden, is investigating the causes and results of the late railway accident at Samnugur.

NATIVE SUPERSTITION.—The natives in some of the districts of the North-West Provinces are apprehensive of famine, their fear arising from the circumstance that the bamboo has flowered, which Hindoo superstition interprets as a presage of coming famine.

RETIREMENTS.—His Excellency the Governor-General has accepted the resignation of the Hon. Henry Crooke (consequent on his departure from India) of his seat in the Council of the Governor-general for making Laws and Regulations.

LITERARY.—Mr. A. Gough, a graduate of Oxford, and a pupil of Monier Williams, has been appointed Anglo-Sanskrit Professor in the Benares College on a salary of Rs. 500 a month, rising within two years to a maximum of Rs. 700.

LICENCES TO SOLEMNISE MARRIAGES have been granted to Mr. J. Caldwell, Presbyterian minister, Roorkee, and to the Rev. W. M. Blake, of the London Mission at Benares. These licences empower the granting of certificates of marriages between native Christians in the North-Western Provinces.

PENSION.—Honorary Lieutenant George Faichnic, Assistant-Commissary of Ordnance, having been declared by a medical committee to be unfit for further active service, is transferred to the Pension Establishment, with permission to reside and draw his stipend in India.

THE CAWNPORE SUTTEE.—In the Cawnpore suttee case fourteen persons have been sentenced to transportation for life, thirty to transportation for ten years, and eleven to imprisonment for five years. This is carrying out the law with a vengeance.

COLONEL BUTLER.—The almost sudden death of Colonel Butler, of H.M.'s 36th regiment, occurred a few days ago at Peshawur. The cause is supposed to have been disease of the heart. He has left behind a wife and a large family to lament his loss.—Delhi Gazette, May 30.

WRONGS IN THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—We are glad to learn from the Pioneer that there is a speedy prospect of the wrongs of the subordinate Medical Department being redressed. The extra cost entailed upon Government by the contemplated measures of reform is estimated at about Rs. 1,06,000.

LEGAL.—The Governor-general in Council has accepted Mr. H. A. Eglinton's resignation of the office of officiating standing counsel to Government from June 1. Mr. H. C. Marindin is appointed to officiate as standing counsel to Government during the absence on leave of Mr. Graham.

THE RUSSIANS IN BOKHARA.—The Englishman has news from the Frontier to the effect that the Russians have given the title of Ameer to the nephew of their late foe, the Ameer of Bokhara, but the new chief will not exercise the functions of ruler. It is also said that they are engaged in concerting measures for punishing Sultan Murad and Eshan Ouralk, the allies of the late Ameer.

THE CALCUTTA MURDER.—Government has sanctioned a reward of Rs. 1,000 to any one who shall adduce evidence leading to the conviction of the murderer of the woman Rose Brown on the 31st March. There seems no probability that the police will succeed in finding out the murderer in this case any more than the Ebra-street murderer.

BROILS BETWEEN NATIVE PRINCES.—A dispute has arisen between the Jeypore and Bickaneer Durbars. It seems that certain Rajpoots from Jeypore fled to Bickaneer, in consequence of the attempt of the Rajah to introduce the worship of Shiva. Angered by this emigration, the Rajah of Jeypore has accused the exiles of collecting men with the view of making inroads into Jeypore.

FAREWELL DINNER TO A CALCUTTA BARRISTER.—On 30th May a farewell dinner was given at the Town Hall to Mr. Eglinton by the members of the Calcutta Bar. There was a very full attendance. The Advocate-general was in the chair, and proposed Mr. Eglinton's health, to which Mr. Eglinton replied in a short speech. We do not remember any dinner given by the bar which went off better than the above.

RETIREMENT FROM THE MEDICAL SERVICE.—Surgeon-major J. Hilliard, in Europe, having attained the age of fifty-six, has been required to appear before a board. The board being unable to grant him the certificate of competency required by the regulations, he has been allowed by the Secretary of State for India to retire from March 27, 1868, on the rate of pension next above that to which his service entitles him.

PAYMASTERSHIP 38TH FOOT.—A regimental order, dated March 24 last, appoints the following officers to form a committee of paymastership:—Captain C. W. S. Gaynor, president; Captain W. W. Sherlock and Captain W. H. R. Skey members, nominating Quartermaster M. Slattery to act as paymaster, upon the responsibility of the committee, in addition to his other duties, in the room of Paymaster C. D. Manning, proceeded on sick leave.

DISTURBANCES IN MEYWAR.—According to the Englishman the Bheels of Bhokala in Meywar are said to be troublesome. They have of late kept the borders in a state of perpetual alarm. The Durbar, acting under the orders of the Political Agent, has sent a body of troops to protect the villages most exposed to their depredations. These Bheel outbreaks, our contemporary thinks, will only cease to be chronic when the robbers shall cease to find refuge in one State from the consequences of ill-deeds committed in another.

A LIKELY PROJECT.—We have it on most unexceptional authority that a scheme is now being elaborated at the Government Headquarters, Simla, by which it is contemplated to form the Central Provinces into a Lieutenant governorship by the addition of a part of the Southern Mahratta country, and making the Berars a dependency of this Government. When this plan is matured Sir Richard Temple will, it is thought, again take up the reins of Government here as Lieutenant governor.—Pioneer.

MILITARY MANNERS.—An action brought by Howard Brothers against an officer of the 60th Rifles was lately decided in the Calcutta Small Cause Court in favour of the plaintiffs. The defendant had granted a promissory note on demand for money due by him for the carriage of certain parcels. This he afterwards destroyed on presentation, alleging in defence that the plaintiffs had sent it in an open cover. Among the papers presented in Court by the plaintiffs was the following cavalier epistle, signed by the gentleman in question. "I promise to pay on demand fifty-seven good hard kicks, well applied on such part of the person as shall be considered most fit and proper in consideration of false, insolent, and defamatory matter expressed in one or more letters.—The kicks and the rupees can be received at the same time, or the kicks may be paid at once, and the rupees on or after the 25th proximo."

THE WEATHER IN CALCUTTA.—If the returns published by the Government Meteorological Department are correct, we have this year had a most exceptionally cool season, more especially during the last ten days, when the thermometer has reached a maximum of 95 against 106 during the same period last year. We have also had 11·66 inches of rain since the commencement of the year against 5·67 inches during the corresponding period of 1867.

A FRIEND TO THE NATIVES.—Sir Donald Macleod seems resolved to win the honour of the lead in the race—if race there be—to secure for the natives of the soil a due share of administrative position and employment. We learn that he has just forwarded for the consideration and approval of the Government of India a scheme for the abolition of the grade of Extra Assistant Commissioner in the Punjab, and the doubling of the number of Assistant Commissioners, so as to make vacancies for a number of qualified natives in the latter superior grade. The scheme is likely to be circulated for the opinion of the other Governments.—Times of India.

ARRIVALS FROM ENGLAND.—The undermentioned officers have reported their return from England:—Capt. Henry Macdonald, of the Bengal Staff Corps, date of arrival in the Bengal Presidency, May 16. Mr. C. H. Reynolds, appointed by the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India to be an Assistant Superintendent of the 4th grade in the Telegraph Department, reported his arrival in India May 13. Mr. W. A. Bell, appointed by the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India as an Assistant Superintendent of the 4th grade in the Telegraph Department, reported his arrival at Calcutta May 17.

THE PILGRIMAGE TO MECCA.—Reports have been received from the Consular Agent at Djedda that the great pilgrimage to Mecca has passed off in a most quiet and satisfactory manner. The members of the Sanitary Commission at Mecca report that the health of the pilgrims has been excellent, although the numbers are said to have been considerably larger than those of last year. It is estimated that 85,000 persons visited the shrines. Fortunately the weather during the period of the greatest assemblage was comparatively cool, the thermometer ranging from 16 to 20 Reaumur. Up to the middle of April a very large number of pilgrims has reached Djedda on their return from Mecca.

THE SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT OF GOVERNMENT.—Mr. Mark Fryar, appointed by the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India as Mining Geologist, in connection with the Geological Survey of India, joined his appointment on May 1; Dr. F. Stoliczka received charge of the office of curator of the Indian Museum from Dr. J. P. Colles on May 1. The Governor-general in Council sanctions the following promotions in the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India to fill existing vacancies: Lieut. H. R. Thuillier, R.E.; Capt. C. T. Haig, R.E.; Lieut. J. Herschell, R.E., and Mr. C. Lane, surveyors of the third grade, to be surveyors of the second grade, with effect from October 1, 1867.

THE CUTTACK TRIBUTARY MEHALS.—About two months ago the Englishman drew attention to a disturbance in the Cuttack Tributary Mehals, which has since grown into the proportions of a tiny war. Mr. Ravenshaw, attended by a few policemen, went to Keonjhar, one of the Cuttack Tributary States, to instal a new Rajah, but was opposed by the Ranees of the deceased chief. This lady brought forward a new heir, and her tribesmen assumed so hostile an attitude that the Commissioner sent for an escort of one hundred police. This force has not, however, proved sufficient to awe the Ranees into obedience. Her contumacy, in fact, has necessitated the collection of some five or six hundred police. This force is being moved into the Mehal from all parts of the country.

THE TOBACCO DUTIES.—The following notification has appeared (May 28):—"India Office, London, 31st March, 1868. To his Excellency the Right Honourable the Governor-general of India in Council. Sir,—I have had under my consideration in Council the despatch from your Excellency in Council, numbered 5, Separate Revenue, and dated the 1st ultimo, in which, in continuation of your despatch No. 19 of last year, you forward your observations on the question of imposing a tax on tobacco. 2. The question is very ably put in Mr. Strachey's minute, and he shows strong reasons against the imposition of a tax on tobacco. I approve, therefore, your decision not to adopt such an impost.—I have, &c., (signed) Stafford H. Northcote, G. H. M. Batten, Under Secretary to the Government of India."

ACCIDENT TO MR. FERGUSON AT CHUMBA.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette mentions a serious accident which occurred on the evening of May 22 to Mr. Ferguson, the missionary at Chumba, whilst on his way in to Dalhousie. Mr. Ferguson was walking along the new road which is in course of construction between Chumba and this place, when in crossing one of the unfinished parts his foot slipped, and he was precipitated about one hundred feet into the khud below, breaking two of his ribs, besides sustaining other damage. He was found in this state shortly after the accident took place by Colonel Reid, who happened to be encamped near the spot, and immediately conveyed to Mrs. Prinsep's house, which is the first house met with on coming into Dalhousie. Here we may be sure the sufferer will meet with every attention and aid his case may require, but it is reported his injuries are very severe, and that he lies in a precarious state.

POLITICAL APPOINTMENTS.—His Excellency the Viceroy has appointed Mr. C. B. Saunders, C.B., to be resident at the Court of Hyderabad from May 29, 1868; Lieut.-col. C. Herbert, Superintendent of Political Pensions and Agent to the Governor-general, with the ex-King of Oudh, to officiate as Political Agent in Turkish Arabia, vice Lieut.-col. Sir A. Kemball, K.C.S.I., C.B., proceeding on furlough.

THE "SAL" FORESTS OF OUDE.—We have received the report of the administration of the two hundred and ninety-five miles of sal forest of the province of Oude. In a pecuniary sense the year's operations have been eminently satisfactory, resulting in a net surplus of Rs. 1,41,674, making the total surplus since October, 1861, Rs. 1,95,000. As far as felling operations are concerned however, the year has been one of inactivity, which, as a considerable proportion of the forests are stocked with mature trees, is in every respect very unsatisfactory. As the Government of India remarks, no useful object can be gained by leaving these forests in their present state. A fair portion should be cut, and an equivalent portion replanted with fresh trees every year. This is the only way in which the most can be made of the supply of wood, or rather of the power of the soil to furnish that supply. The Government have at the same time directed that no fresh timber should be felled except by the agency of the forest department. The value of the stock in hand at the end of the year, including 646 logs, was Rs. 17,641.—Englishman, May 26.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers have obtained leave of absence to Sanataria for the season:—Lieutenant Davidson, 88th Foot, to Murree, from 15th May to 31st July; Lieutenant-Colonel Richardson, C.B. (Commandant 6th Bengal Cavalry), to Nynce Tal, from the 14th June to the 14th October, on private affairs, in extension of privilege leave; Major Hunter, Assistant Quartermaster-General, Lahore Division, to Mussoorie, from the 16th April to the 16th October, on medical certificate; Surgeon W. Peskett (38th Native Infantry), in medical charge of the 17th Native Infantry, to Nynce Tal, from the 4th May to the 3rd November, on medical certificate; this cancels leave granted previously; Staff Assistant-Surgeon J. W. Jones (attached to the 85th Foot), to Dalhousie, from the 1st May to the 31st August, on medical certificate; Paymaster C. Loder, 20th Hussars, to Murree, from the 15th April to the 15th October, on private affairs; Captain Whiteside, 11th Foot, to the Neilgherry Hills, from the 27th March to the 26th July, on private affairs, in extension of privilege leave; Lieutenant P. Kirk, Instructor of Musketry, 77th Foot, to Murree and Cashmere, from the 1st June to the 31st August.

THE Pioneer presents us with a jeu d'esprit in the shape of a parody on the "Lotus Eaters," which treats of the retirement of the late Finance Minister and the appointment of Sir Richard Temple. We cannot refrain from quoting the first and last stanzas:—

Courage, we say, and wave a cheering hand;
This mounting fame will bear thee Homeward soon,
Or South, it may be—Governor of that land,
In which it seemeth always afternoon:
All round the coast a languid air doth swoon,
Teaching brave workmen to sit down and dream;
Madras, they say, rewards the men who moon
At dance or promenade, and Fortune's beam
In ladies' eyes to smile and fade and smile doth seem.

The Press toiled on and strove those ways to brand
That brought the name Benighted to that shore;
And sweet it was to rail at high command,
At job and Ritual; but evermore
Most weary seemed the task, weary the bore
Of rating men who laugh when zealots foam:
Then several said, "We want this sort no more,"
And, sick at heart, they cried—"Our Island Home Sends us no men of might—Sir Richard Temple come!"

PAY OF SHERISTADARS.—At the instance of the district judges the Chief Justice of the High Court has recommended to the Government of Bengal that in future candidates for the offices of sheristadars should be good English scholars, so as to be able to exercise a proper supervision and control over both the English and vernacular departments attached to the judges' courts in the Mofussil, and that their salaries may be fixed at Rs. 250 per mensem, with a view to secure the services of able and efficient men. Sir Barnes Peacock is also said to have proposed that the number of clerks of the judges' courts should be reduced and made uniform in all districts, and that from the savings to be effected by this reduction an increase should be given to the pay of those clerks and assistants whose services are to be retained. It appears that in the 24-Pergunnahs, which is one of the largest zillahs in Bengal, there are some half-dozen assistants in the English department in the Judges' Court, while in Rajshyhe the number is nearly double, if not more. The Government of India has acceded to the recommendation of the Chief Justice. With reference however to the subject of increasing the pay of the sheristadars, the Governor-general in Council appears to be of opinion that the local Government should wait till the scheme for revising the salaries of the ministerial officers attached to the courts of all judicial officers in the Mofussil, which has recently been submitted to the Home Government, is sanctioned by the Secretary of State.—Indian Daily News.

AN EPISCOPAL VISIT TO PALUMPORE.—The Bishop of Calcutta has been visiting the Kangra Valley, and, accompanied by Mr. T. D. Forsyth and Mr. Coldstream, paid a visit to the new station at Palumpore. His lordship is said to have been greatly struck with the beauty of the scenery surrounding the Holta plantations. Palumpore has become extremely popular with all English tourists, and there seems a probability that it will at no distant date become the chief station of the Kangra Valley.

A BISHOP WRITING TO THE PAPERS.—"Writing to the papers" is now not even beneath the dignity of a dignitary of the church, for we find his Lordship, the Bishop of Calcutta, addressing the editor of the Delhi Gazette, and explaining his difficulty in supplying chaplains to various important stations, in reply to a letter by a correspondent of that paper, protesting against there being no chaplains at Peshawur. He says that by the operation of the twenty-five years' service six chaplains had been suddenly withdrawn from his diocese, and that notwithstanding pressing representations from himself and the archdeacon sufficient provision to meet the emergency had not been made at home; also, that even before then they had been making repeated complaints of the number of vacancies in the service. He regrets very much that the important station of Peshawur should be left vacant, and has arranged for the first chaplain who arrives being sent on to that station. He wishes, however, to "observe that the supply of chaplains is beyond his control, and that he can only expostulate and entreat, which he had not been backward in doing."

MURDER AT JUBBULPORE.—A shocking tragedy occurred on May 30 in the lines of the 13th N.I. at Jubbulpore. It appears a subadar, whilst overlooking his men when on fatigue duty in their lines, used some offensive language to one of the sepoys who was not doing his duty in as willing a manner as the other men. The subadar's language offended the sepoy, it seems, for at night he was seen walking up and down near the subadar's hut, which appears did not seem to have attracted much notice then, but it has since been discovered he carried in his sleeve a long knife, with which no doubt he intended to despatch the subadar, but finding no opportunity he retired to his own hut. Next morning, however, after being dismissed parade, he returned to his house, carrying his musket with him, and there loaded it with ball cartridge, and then made his way to the subadar's quarters, in front of which the subadar was standing, when the sepoy came up and deliberately shot the subadar dead. The murderer was seized, and a court of inquiry is at once to assemble to investigate this shocking occurrence, but there can be little doubt as to its finding. There are rumours that the sepoy intended to commit another murder had he not been arrested.—Delhi Gazette, June 4.

RAM SING AND HIS NEW RELIGION.—The Lahore Chronicle states that Ram Sing, the leader of the new sect of Sikh Puritans, has succeeded in making a few converts among Mahomedans; this being, as our contemporary believes, the first instance in the history of India of the conversion of followers of Islam to any form of Hinduism. Ram Sing's organisation savours rather much of the secular element to warrant implicit confidence being placed in it. His confidential friends and advisers are denominated Wazeers and Moosahibs; and he has, moreover, appointed "Subahs" to different portions of the province, whose jurisdiction, powers and privileges are defined in matters secular as well as religious, in so far as the members of the sect are concerned. As regards the supposed political designs of Ram Sing and his followers, our contemporary thinks they may safely be held to be innocent so long as peace is preserved in British India and the N.W. frontier. Ram Sing, moreover, is an old man, and must soon be gathered to his fathers; and on his death, unless he settles the spiritual succession very carefully, the sect is likely to be split up into innumerable subdivisions, equally at variance with each other as with the Hindu and Mahomedan world around them.—Friend of India.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT REPORT FOR 1867.—The reports of accidents on railways throughout India for the year 1867 have this year been furnished to Government with praiseworthy punctuality, and we learn from them that although the mileage opened had increased from 3,408 to 3,732, the number of accidents was exactly the same as in the previous year. Owing, however, to the accidents on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, and the increased carelessness of the railway servants, the number of fatal cases had increased from 139 to 182, or about 30 per cent., and the total of killed and injured from 270 to 390, or 44 per cent. Fatal cases to passengers had increased from three in 1866 to fifteen in 1867, of which no less than twelve resulted from the accidents at Lanowlee, Sookee Nullah, and Amrolee, on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, in which twenty-two passengers were also wounded. Making allowance for those exceptional cases the number of injuries to passengers had but slightly increased during the year, considering that the number of passengers carried exceeded that of the previous year by nearly two millions. Of the 246 injuries to servants of the companies six-sevenths are returned as due to their own misconduct, or want of caution; and as familiarity with the working of the lines begets carelessness, the managers of the different lines should be very strict in insisting upon any servant being punished who in any way neglects his duty. This would, we think, have a more deterrent effect than the suggestion of the Government, that the "making public to the servants the number who suffer yearly might perhaps do something towards prevention." The Government would have done better in insisting upon the bye-laws and regulations being strictly carried out. Madras gives the most satisfactory results of the three Presidencies, Bombay preponderating in injuries to passengers, and Bengal in injuries to servants. The trespassing of cattle on the line had in no case caused injury to human beings, the cow-catchers being generally sufficient to remove the carcasses off the line. As might be expected, the number of cases in which collisions occurred without injury to any one had also increased from the carelessness of pointsmen and drivers. The Punjab and Sind Railways are the only lines on which the number of accidents have not been more numerous in 1867 than in the previous year.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned officers are reported (June 3) to have passed as military surveyors and field engineers agreeably to the provisions of G.O.C.C., July, 13, 1865:—Lieut. Beavan, Staff Corps, Quartermaster 22nd Native Infantry; Ensign O'Callaghan, 1st Battalion 11th Foot; Captain Rogers, Staff Corps, officiating wing officer 15th Native Infantry; and Lieut. Story, General List, Infantry, 1st wing subaltern 2nd Sikh Infantry, higher standard, with great credit. Lieuts. Holmes, 1st Battalion 7th Foot; Trotter, 1st Battalion 11th Foot; Leslie, 103th Foot. The undermentioned officers are reported, by the Board of Examiners at Fort William, to have passed in the tests specified on the 4th June:—High proficiency in Hindoe: Lieut. Wilson, Royal Artillery, Aide-de-Camp to the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal. Higher standard in Hindoostanee: Lieuts. Curtis, General List, Cavalry; Beeston, General List, Infantry; Hemans, Royal Artillery. The undermentioned officers are reported to have passed, according to the lower standard in Hindoostanee, on the 4th June:—Captain Plummer, 1st Battalion 7th Foot; Assistant Surgeon Raye, Medical Department. Lieut. Ross, R.E., Assistant Engineer, 1st grade, attached to Etawah division, Ganges Canal, passed the colloquial examination in Hindoostanee on the 29th April. Dubus, Assistant Engineer, attached to Etawah division, Ganges Canal, passed colloquial examination in Hindoostanee on 29th April.

FURLOUGHS.—The following officers obtained furloughs to Europe on medical certificate at the beginning of June: Lieut. White, for twelve months, from date of departure, to England, for the purpose of undergoing a course of musketry instruction at Hythe; Lieut. Henderson, from date of embarkation; Captain Marsh, 82nd Foot, overland, from date of embarkation; Lieut. (Local Captain) Ryan, overland, from date of embarkation; Captain Mulock, 95th Foot, overland, from date of embarkation; Captain Parkinson, overland, from date of embarkation. The undermentioned officers have reported their departures on the dates specified opposite to their names:—Colonel Thuillier, of the Royal Artillery, Surveyor General of India, Mongolia, May 11; Mr. Carpenter, Bengal Civil Service, by steamship Columbian, May 2; Mr. Campbell, Bengal Civil Service, from Bombay, May 2, per steamship Columbian; Mr. Millett, Bengal Civil Service, from India per steamship Nubia, which vessel was left by the pilot at sea on the 1st April; Mr. Graham, Standing Counsel to the Government of India, has been granted by the Secretary of State for India an extension of leave, on medical certificate, for six months. The following officers reported their departure from India on board steamer Simla, which was left at sea by the pilot on the 15th April:—Mr. Cockburn, c.s., Mr. Halliday, Mr. Osborne, Assist. Sub-Deputy Opium Agent, Ghazee-pore, for sixteen days from May 28, preparatory to proceeding to Europe on medical leave.

THE MAGISTRACY.—The following officers are vested with the powers of a magistrate and deputy collector in the districts mentioned from June 6, viz.:—Mr. J. F. Stevens, Gya; Mr. A. Manson, Pooree; Mr. W. B. Oldham, Nuddea; Mr. G. J. B. T. Dalton, Lohardugga. The following officers are vested with the powers of a subordinate magistrate, first class, and deputy collector:—Mr. H. W. Gordon, Patna; Mr. H. Mosley, Shahabad; Mr. H. Luttman-Johnson, Nuddea; Mr. A. P. MacDonnell, Monghyr; Mr. C. H. Vowell, Jessore; Mr. W. B. Power, Beerbhoom; Mr. D. W. M. Testro, Dinagepore. The following officers are vested with the powers of subordinate magistrate, first class, and Moonsiff:—Lieut. E. N. De La Touche, Assam; Mr. W. N. Campbell, Lohardugga; Mr. C. W. Haws, Lohardugga. The following deputy magistrates and deputy collectors are vested with the powers of a subordinate magistrate, first class:—Mr. W. G. Black, Purneah; Mr. J. White, Pooree. The following officers in Assam are vested with powers under Section 1, Act X. of 1854, to receive and try cases without reference by the District magistrate, viz.:—Lieutenant J. Butler, Assistant Commissioner of Kamroop; Lieutenant M. O. Boyd, Assistant Commissioner of Kamroop; Lieutenant H. J. Peet, Assistant Commissioner of Seebasaur; Lieutenant L. Blathwayt, Assistant Commissioner of Golaghat; Mr. J. F. Campbell, Extra Assistant Commissioner, Luckimpore. The following officers in Assam are vested with powers to try cases under Act XIII. of 1859: Lieutenant L. Blathwayt, Assistant Commissioner of Golaghat; Lieutenant H. J. Peet, Assistant Commissioner of Seebasaur.

THE ATTEMPT ON THE LIFE OF DR. MACKERTICH.—It was only on the 28th May that an official telegram from the Government of the Punjab made known at Simla that an attempt had been made to assassinate Dr. Mackertich, of the 5th Punjab Cavalry at Bunnoo, though, all the circumstances taken into consideration, it is almost certain the crime must have been committed more than a week previously. Up to the 30th ult. full details had not reached the Supreme Government, and probably would not for another day or two, as they would have to be sent by post. From private sources we however learn that Dr. Mackertich, who is an Armenian gentleman, holding the rank of Assistant Surgeon in the army, and in medical charge of the 5th Punjab Corps, was attacked in the dark of the early morning, while in all probability asleep in his cot in the verandah of his house at Bunnoo. The wounds he received are sword cuts or thrusts, and of a very severe character, one of them, in the region of the liver, at first threatening fatal consequences. The unfortunate gentleman is, however, out of danger. We believe there is no question as to the would-be assassin or assassins being Hill men, and the supposition at Bunnoo is that they are Wuzerees. It is further thought on the frontier that the murderous outrage was perpetrated in revenge of the death of a Wuzeree whom Dr. Mackertich had some time before shot down in the act of stealing his horse. The mere fact that the Punjab Government did not deem it necessary to telegraph at once, or in full detail, is of itself sufficient to show that the attempted assassination was not regarded either on the frontier or at Lahore as invested with any political significance whatever.—Times of India Correspondent.

ACCIDENT TO AN OPIUM STEAMER.—We regret to announce that the steamer Clan Alpine, belonging to Messrs. Jardine, Skinner and Co., and bound to China, met with a very serious accident whilst going down the river, which has resulted in the instantaneous death of six men, and the severe scalding of twelve others. It appears that when nearing the upper Gaspar light the super-heater of the fire boilers burst. This is the account that has reached us of the accident. Freight with a valuable cargo of opium, the captain proceeded on his way after sending up a messenger to town in a boat with an account of the accident, taking the wounded with him, one of whom has, we learn, since died. The ship, we understand, has no doctor on board. It is to be hoped that the medical officer at the Sand-heads inspected the dead and wounded, and has furnished a report to the authorities here, but we are at a loss to understand why, after such an accident, the vessel should have proceeded on her way without proper medical assistance, or at least landing the wounded where they could have received such assistance. Should further loss of life occur, a great responsibility will rest with the commander or his advisers, and we trust, therefore, that an immediate and searching inquiry will be made into all the circumstances of the case. In the case of a vessel proceeding to sea with an insufficient crew the insurances on the cargo would be vitiated, but we understand that in this instance the owners of the vessel are their own insurers.—Englishman.

A CHARGE OF MURDER.—Captain Coles, the commander of the Eurydice, has been committed for trial on three several charges, namely, an attempt to murder, an abetment of murder, and criminal intimidation. The case, which we have already reported in brief, has excited considerable interest in Calcutta. It seems that the Eurydice left England on the 11th January last, and arrived in Calcutta on the 21st May. The passengers consisted of a German, named Albert Haegert, his wife and child, and a sister named Ulricka. It would appear from the evidence that during the voyage the sister, Ulricka, was seduced by the captain; and on the 24th February the unfortunate girl jumped overboard and was drowned. Mr. Haegert charged Captain Coles with having used force, and thus driven his sister to commit suicide, and threatened to prosecute Coles on the criminal charge immediately after his arrival in Calcutta. The charge was made, but broke down entirely from want of evidence. The present charge arose out of the threats and recriminations which passed between Captain Coles and Mr. Haegert subsequent to the suicide of the girl.—Friend of India.

ALBERT LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.—It is stated that all sums which may have been paid to the Albert Life Assurance Company in this Presidency by way of extra premium for military service in Abyssinia will be returned to the assured on application to the secretary, Mr. C. L. O'Brien. This is a safe arrangement after the close of the campaign.—Madras Times.

TINNEVELLY.—In a telegram, dated 21st May, the collector reports that thunder-showers from the north had been very general lately. The clouds were banking up over the Western Ghats and the south-west monsoon seemed likely to set in early.

THE REDUCTIO AD ABSURDUM OF RED-TAPE.—An amusing instance of official exactness is given by a Coimbatore correspondent of the Trichinopoly Chronicle. A native member of the Uncovenanted Service penned the following lines to his official superior:—"Honored Sir, I humbly beg you will excuse my not attendance office this date, cause I got a boil as per margin." In the margin of the letter a sketch of the boil was drawn out, and the writer went on further to say that "the breadth of paper being short I have planned the boil small, but it is dubble the size."

ARMY HEAD-QUARTERS.—The Commander-in-Chief being about to proceed to Bangalore, Head-quarters will be established at that station on the 4th June. H.E. will leave Bangalore for Madras on or about the 13th June, and his further movements will be notified hereafter. The following officers will accompany the Commander-in-Chief:—The Adjutant-general, Quartermaster-general, Assistant Adjutant-general Royal Artillery, H.E.'s Military Secretary and an Aide-de-Camp, and Inspector-general her Majesty's British Medical Service. Correspondence of an emergent nature to be addressed accordingly to Army Head-quarters.

NORTH ARCOT.—Season report for the week ending May 18.—Season somewhat more promising. Rainfall: Heavy showers in a few localities, as reported by telegraph. Light showers in others. In the most favoured villages agricultural operations have been resumed in consequence. Markets, on the whole, well supplied; prices stationary. Public health generally very good. Pastures still very scarce. Murrain prevalent in parts of Arcot and Poloor talook. Water supply generally deficient; varies very much, according to locality. Parts of Palamanair and Punganoor, where the want was most pressing, are now better off than the rest of the district, owing to the rain having been heavy enough to partially supply the tanks. In very many places the supply is sufficient, and causes no apprehension; in others it is precarious. In some there is an immediate scarcity. These last cases are met successfully by special efforts. Very contradictory reports are received from different sources regarding the same localities; and in some marked instances the scarcity has proved to have been much exaggerated.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT SECUNDERABAD.—A correspondent informs us that an unfortunate affair occurred at Secunderabad on the Queen's birthday, by which one of the regimental barbers lost his life at the hands of a young cornet in the 18th Hussars. A court of inquiry has been held upon the latter, and has acquitted him of all blame, and permitted him to return to his duty. An inquest was held on the body of the barber, and a verdict of "accidental death" found. It was elicited that the cornet had on the morning of the fatal occurrence been practising with his pistol in the compound round his house, and that one of the chambers missed fire. The deceased was standing in the verandah, and was about to shave another officer of the regiment, when the cornet tried the loaded chamber a second time, and it went off, the bullet entering the barber's brain just above the right temple, causing instantaneous death. The cornet has exhibited the utmost possible regret for this melancholy result of his culpable negligence, and has provided for the deceased barber's family. His brother officer seems to have had a narrow escape.—Madras Times.

FURLONGS, &c.—The following furloughs have been granted by the Madras Government:—Major Austin, of the Staff Corps, on furlough for two years, to Europe; Assistant-Surgeon McDiarmid, of the Madras Medical Establishment, furlough to Europe for eighteen months, on medical certificate; Major (Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel) Rutherford, 47th N. I., for four months, from the 4th of June, 1868; Captain Clubley, 47th N. I., Sub-Assistant Commissary General, general leave for one month. The undermentioned officers are permitted to proceed to Europe:—Captain Forth, of the Staff Corps, on medical certificate for twenty months, and to embark from Madras; Lieutenant Trevor, of the Staff Corps, Quarter Master 19th Regiment Native Infantry, on furlough for two years, and to embark from Madras; Surgeon Chipperfield, Acting Physician, General Hospital, on medical certificate for twenty months, and to embark from Madras; Major Austin, of the Staff Corps, on furlough for two years, under the regulations of 1854, and to embark from Madras; Assistant-Surgeon Simon, M.D., R. A., to England, Overland, on medical certificate; Captain Stewart, 18th Hussars, from the 29th of April, 1868, to the 29th of July, 1868, in extension, Mahableschwur, s.c.; Major Penton, 91st Foot, in continuation to the 15th of September, 1868—Chanda.

LIEUT.-COLONEL C. G. WALCOTT.—The Delhi Gazette regrets to hear of the death at Ahmedabad of Lieut.-colonel C. G. Walcott, of the 14th Brigade, Royal Artillery. The deceased officer had seen much service both in the Crimea and during the mutiny campaign in 1857-58.

CAPTAIN MARTIN, R.A.—The Central India Times regrets to have to announce that Captain Martin, of the Royal Artillery, whose mysterious disappearance from the station caused such a sensation a short time ago, and who was brought back from Bombay under escort, died from heat apoplexy almost immediately on his arrival at Kamptee.

CAPTAIN HOLLAND, Deputy Quartermaster General with the Field Force in Abyssinia, has been spoken of in very high terms, in connection with the working of his department during the expedition. Indeed, he is said to have really had the whole work under his own direction, Lieutenant Colonel Phayre, the ostensible head, being mostly engaged in the advanced front. The Viceroy has, we hear, accorded special praise to Captain Holland for his services.—Poona Observer.

THE FREIGHT MARKET.—The Indo-prokash says that one effect of the termination of the Abyssinian expedition has already been visible in Bombay. The freight market, which has been gradually on the decline for some time, has since the capture of Magdala fallen over sixty-four per cent.; and shipmasters and consigners are at their wits' end how to fill the daily increasing ships in the harbour. To merchants and exporters the present is a capital opportunity of saving a considerable amount in freight, and thereby reducing the cost of laying down their goods in Europe.

BANK OF BOMBAY COMMISSION.—It is probable that Mr. George Kellner, of the Financial Department, Calcutta, will be appointed Secretary to the Bombay Bank Commissioners. A better appointment could not be made, as Mr. Kellner is eminently qualified to discharge the arduous duties connected with the office to the satisfaction of the public. Sir Charles Jackson, the President of the Commission, was puisne-judge of Bombay from 1852 to 1855, when he was transferred to Calcutta. He resigned his seat in the High Court of the metropolis in 1863.

THE NEW RESIDENT AT HYDERABAD.—We hear that the appointment of Mr. C. B. Saunders to the post of Resident at Hyderabad has given very general satisfaction in North-Western India. Mr. Saunders' official antecedents well qualify him for the post. He is Judicial Commissioner at Mysore, and was Commissioner of Delhi after the siege. His knowledge of Hyderabad politics and Nizamut affairs cannot be slight, for he served as full Commissioner of the Hyderabad Assigned Districts, including the Raichore Doab.

THE ABYSSINIAN TRANSPORT SERVICE.—A large number of transports are now on their way to Bombay harbour from Annesley Bay with the troops, material and stores of the Expedition. A few of the troops have already arrived, and the main portion of them are daily expected. There is a proposal for sending two of H.M.'s Indian troops-ships (Jumna and Malabar) from Bombay to Annesley Bay to assist in the transport, but there does not appear to be any likelihood of its being acted on; and, taking into account the strength of the hired fleet of transports available for the service, there is no necessity for sending two such expensive ships as the Jumna and Malabar to sea during the monsoon.

FAILURE OF THE PEARL FISHERY.—The Sindian has been inquiring into the causes of the failure of the pearl fisheries in that province, and has been told of two reasons for their deterioration. The first is that a portion of the old shore of Baba Island has silted up, owing to a change in the action of the coast currents; and the spot where the best pearl-producing oyster beds lay is now covered by mounds of sand. The other cause is the deepening of the bar, which has had the effect of scouring the harbour considerably, and washing the young pearl oyster out to sea. The authorities seem to have given up the fisheries in despair, and our contemporary hears that illicit fishery has been allowed to go on for some time. The harbour has been let out on two or three occasions for Rs. 1,000. The pearls, however, are not of much value, seldom realising more than Rs. 15 per tola.

FURLOUGHS.—The following officers have obtained leave to Europe on medical certificate since May last:—Lieut. Abbot, H.M.'s 109th Regiment, Acting Assistant Political Resident at Aden; Mr. Rennie, Assistant Engineer, West Berar Division, for eighteen months; Lieut.-colonel Sir H. Green, C.B. and K.C.S.I., Bombay Staff Corps, for twenty months, on medical certificate. The following officers are allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months on medical certificate:—Lieut. Wood, Staff Corps, Adjutant her Majesty's 29th Regiment N.I.; Lieut. and Brevet Captain Hill, 1st Cavalry, attached to 2nd Regiment Sind Horse; Lieut. Cunningham, Staff Corps, Adjutant and Officiating Quartermaster, her Majesty's 30th Regiment N.I.; Captain Burnes, her Majesty's 16th Regiment N.I., is permitted to proceed to Europe for the purpose of appearing before a medical board there.

MARINE DEPARTMENT.—The following temporary appointment has taken place in this department (June 3):—Mr. William Carter was appointed Acting 3rd Officer of the steam vessel Earl Canning on the 28th April, 1868, vice Mr. William Murray, resigned.

THE INDUS VALLEY RAILWAY.—The Committee appointed at Kurrachee by Government to report on the Indus Valley Railway Extension is composed of the following gentlemen:—Mr. Havelock, C.S., Commissioner in Sind; Major W. R. Lambert, Collector and Magistrate of Kurrachee; Captain R. E. F. Cotgrave, R.E., Deputy Consulting Engineer of Railways in Sind; and Mr. G. Rawlinson, Agent Sind Railway. They met at Government-house on the 19th instant, when they discussed in extenso the correspondence that had previously taken place on the subject of the extension from Kotree on the one side and of that from Mooltan on the other, and made arrangements for obtaining statistical information for transmission to Government along with that already collected. Captain Cotgrave kindly consented to perform the duties of Secretary to the Committee. As it is a matter of paramount importance to satisfactorily test the engineering capabilities of the lines under consideration, it was decided to suggest to Government the advisability of allowing the Chief Engineer of the Sind Railway to join the Committee as a member, as also two of the most influential members of the European mercantile community of Kurrachee, who, from their position, would be able to render very valuable assistance by affording additional facilities in obtaining reliable statistics of trade, and in consulting the wishes of the European and native traders.

BANK AFFAIRS IN BOMBAY.—It is very satisfactory to note the closing up in Bombay, one after another, of the books of abortive or ruined banking companies of 1864-5. Amongst them is the Guzerat Bank, which was closed last week just in time to miss any indirect shafts that might have glanced off from the Bombay Bank Commission towards the secret history of that insignificant but somewhat mysterious scheme. However, its absorbent, the Central Bank, still affords a groove along which the Commission may find itself compelled to pursue collateral investigations. The Bank of Hindustan belongs to another class of institutions, the liquidation of which must be unavoidably slow, but we are glad to learn that the liquidators of the Hindustan Bank are about paying to its creditors the third instalment of 25 per cent. The number of the bank's claimants in Bombay is so small that the liquidator has had no occasion to advertise, hence less has been heard of this bank than of many others of less moment. The general assets here in Bombay of the Hindustan Bank have realised very fairly upon the estimates made at the time of its stoppage; but there have been one or two heavy deficiencies in the debts due from financials. The calls on the shareholders of the Hindustan Bank have been—£3, made shortly before the stoppage, and £2. 10s. since made by the liquidators. It is hoped that any further call may be avoided, though that cannot yet be determined. The position of the bank, bad as it is, compares favourably with those of the Asiatic and Commercial, which occupied very similar fields of business.—Times of India.

Home.

ARRIVAL OF SIR R. NAPIER.

Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., arrived at Dover on the morning of July 2, at a quarter to four o'clock. The gallant general crossed over from Calais in the mail packet Breeze, and was attended by Colonel Dillon, his military secretary; Captain Holland, adjutant-general; and Captain Scott, aide-de-camp. Notwithstanding the early hour, the Mayor (J. G. Churchward, Esq.) and several members of the Corporation of Dover were present to receive Sir Robert, and to welcome him back to England, after an absence of over thirteen years.

The steamer with Sir Robert Napier on board was brought alongside the pier in a few minutes, and when the gallant General was recognised amongst the passengers he was greeted with loud cheers, which he acknowledged by lifting his travelling cap. As soon as the gangway was fixed, the Mayor went on board, and was introduced to the General by Colonel Scott, an old friend of Sir Robert's, who had come to Dover to meet him.

Sir Robert, who was evidently much surprised, but gratified at the unexpected welcome he received, at once left the boat, and amidst the cheers of the spectators, who now numbered several hundreds, walked with the Mayor and Sir Luke Smithett to the Lord Warden Hotel, followed by the Corporation. He was conducted into one of the large rooms, which was speedily filled by an excited audience.

The Mayor then read a congratulatory address.

Sir Robert Napier responded as follows:—

Mr. Mayor and Gentlemen: I cannot sufficiently express how very deeply I feel the welcome which you are so kind as to accord to me. I can assure you that it was with feelings of great pride that myself, and the whole of the army I have had the honour to command, accepted the duty on which we were sent to Abyssinia by the people of England—a duty of no less importance than that of releasing from captivity a number of their fellow-subjects. We have all discharged the duty which the English people desired. I must not myself accept too much of the gratitude you have been so good as to express to-day; for I can assure you that no general could have been better seconded by his officers and the soldiers than I was. (Loud cheers.) I had a most excellent second in command in Sir Charles Staveley. (Cheers.) I had most excellent officers in command of the regiments; and of the regiments themselves I cannot speak too highly. You have at Dover one of the regiments that took part in the expedition—the gallant 4th King's Own—(applause)—and I may say that one spirit animated the whole of the troops. Our camp was filled day and night with men, women, and children; but be it to the honour of England that not a single complaint was made to me against any soldier or even an affront to any person. (Loud and prolonged cheering.) We entered the country knowing full well the spirit that should guide. We told the Abyssinians, "We have but one enemy, all the rest are our friends," and we desired to leave their country with the remembrance in their hearts that we had been friends to them. It was, therefore, very gratifying that, at the moment of our leaving Abyssinia, the Prince of Tigre, by whose assistance we profited so much, was the last Abyssinian on the border of his country to wish good-bye and to wish us God speed. (Loud applause.) In the name of the army I had the honour to command, and on my own behalf, I return you our most sincere thanks for the welcome you have been pleased to accord us. I shall always, I assure you, remember it with the greatest pride, whilst I shall preserve this address as one of the most treasured heirlooms in my family. (Enthusiastic cheering.)

Sir Robert was then escorted to the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Station, where he partook of refreshments, and then left for London by the 4.30 train, amidst the renewed acclamations of the large concourse of spectators. Sir Robert left Paddington by the 6.15 train in the evening on a brief visit to her Majesty the Queen at Windsor, returning to London the next forenoon.

Miscellaneous.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for bills on India took place on Wednesday, July 1, at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were, to Calcutta £185,900, and to Madras £14,100. The minimum price was fixed at 1s. 10½d. on both presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 10½d. will receive about 47 per cent. The results show a rise of about ¼ per cent., consequent upon a slight increase in the demand for means of remittance to the East.

MORE ABYSSINIAN DESPATCHES.—Some additional papers respecting the Abyssinian expedition were issued on Friday last. They comprise, amongst other documents, the despatches from Sir Robert Napier and the commanders under him, which have recently been published; the translation of two letters addressed by Theodore just before his final defeat to the British Commander-in-chief; and a despatch dated July 1, from Sir Stafford Northcote. In this last-named despatch the Secretary of State for India tenders to Sir Robert Napier the warm thanks of her Majesty for the services which he and his gallant army has rendered to the country. The skill with which the campaign was conducted, the care bestowed upon the sick and wounded, and the bravery of the troops are referred to as having caused great pleasure to her Majesty; and Sir

Stafford Northcote says it is with peculiar gratification that he conveys these acknowledgments to the native portion of the army. "I have submitted to her Majesty's Government," he says in conclusion, "your Excellency's recommendation that a pecuniary grant should be made to the troops in consideration of the gallantry they have displayed and the hardships and losses they have endured; and I have the pleasure to acquaint you that they have resolved on granting six months' donation batta to the naval and military forces." Theodore's letters, the first complaining of his own people, the second offering vague terms of friendship and promising to release all the prisoners, did not seem to Sir Robert Napier to justify any change in his own purposes. On the contrary, they rather confirmed the impression that the King identified the idea of friendship of the English forces with that of support against his enemies. "It is also necessary," remarks the Commander-in-Chief, "if we would avoid acquiring from the perusal of these letters an erroneous conception of Theodore's disposition, to read them less in the light of the language which he holds in them than in that of the actions and tenor of his past life. Thus it will not be forgotten that, while they were being written, the mangled remains of at least 200 of his countrymen who had been butchered by his order, and some of them with his own hand, were exposed to view at the bottom of the rock from which they had been thrown. The treacherous manner in which, only a few days before the appearance of our army, he plundered the peasants of the districts round Magdala, who, trusting to his solemn promise of protection, had always been faithful to him, may be taken as a further illustration of the late King's real character." In a despatch of June 18th, dwelling chiefly on Abyssinian politics and Sir Robert's communications with the different chiefs, that officer remarks that the widow who died in the English camp had been more of a prisoner than a wife. Her father was kept in confinement till he died, and her two brothers till the English released them. It is said that she herself was treated with the utmost harshness and cruelty by her husband. She certainly did not appear to be distressed by his death. The late Queen was the mother of the youth Alamaio, who accompanied Sir R. Napier homewards, and who is the only legitimate issue of the King. Reviewing the effect of our expedition on Abyssinia, the gallant commander thinks it may be said that its object has been accomplished without the rights of any of the princes or chiefs of the country having been interfered with by us, and that the prospect of Abyssinia enjoying tranquillity is at this day fairer than it was at the date when our army landed on the coast.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, July 2.—THE VOTE OF THANKS TO SIR R. NAPIER.—The House of Lords assembled in great force for a purpose in which no party or political feeling was involved, and with respect to which there could be but one sentiment, that of recording the thanks of their lordships to the army of Abyssinia. The Prince of Wales, the Duke of Edinburgh, and the Duke of Cambridge were present in their places on the cross benches. A number of ladies appeared in the galleries, including Lady Napier. Lord MALMESBURY expressed a feeling of regret, which only courtesy deterred his hearers from openly endorsing, that the task of moving the vote of thanks to Sir R. Napier and the Abyssinian forces had not fallen into more competent hands. Dragging in the well-worn Veni, vidi, vici, he suggested that Sir R. Napier might in a similar sentence have described the taking of Magdala within a hundred days after his landing at Zulla. His despatches showed, however, that though a Napier could always wield the pen as well as the sword, the hero of this victory was as modest as he was brave and skilful. The elephants suggested to the Earl the observation that "no such use had been made of these intelligent and magnificent animals since the days of Hannibal." The march of the 45th Regiment over 300 miles in twenty-four days, accomplishing seventy miles in four days across a pass 10,500 feet high; and the intrepidity of Drummer McGuire and Private Bergin, of the 33rd, in being the first to enter Magdala, were also noticed, as well as the general admirable temper and conduct of the troops.—Lord RUSSELL expressed his cordial concurrence in the eulogy passed on the army and its commander, taking occasion also to compliment the Government on their share in the undertaking. As for Theodore, he deemed it a benefit to mankind that such a monster should be removed from the world.—The Duke of CAMBRIDGE added some words of hearty commendation on the military qualities displayed by Sir R. Napier—"the most simple, modest, unassuming man he ever met"—and by the army under his command, which had not only cheerfully borne great hardships, but had in all ranks been ready to do every kind of needful work, the soldiers labouring with pick and shovel and the officers driving mules. Two morals he deduced from our Abyssinian experience—first, in any great expedition, place absolute and implicit reliance on the commander, when once you have appointed him; second, keep up at least the nucleus of a transport establishment in time of peace, in order to obviate the difficulties of improvising one when war breaks out.—Lord LONGFORD put in a word for the departments under the control of the War Office.—Lord ELLENBOROUGH referring to his prediction that the expedition would break down, rejoiced that it had not been fulfilled as to its result, though all the difficulties he anticipated had actually occurred. In the cheers which the Belooches drew from the British troops by their gallantry at Magdala he heard the death-knell of the memory of the Indian mutiny, and he hoped that every effort would be made to conciliate the Indian forces and to cultivate kindly intercourse between the different races enlisted under our banner.—Lord DERBY, as having been Premier when the expedition was despatched, begged leave to join the chorus of approbation which had been raised to greet General Napier and his army.

In the House of Commons, the benches of which were also thronged to excess, Mr. DISRAELI rose at half-past four o'clock to propose the thanks of the House to Sir Robert Napier, and the officers, troops, and sailors engaged in the Abyssinian expedition. In a speech warmly eulogistic of the manner in which the operations had been conducted, the right hon. gentleman described the expedition as one of the most remarkable military enterprises of the century. In the conduct of the commander there had been as much diplomatic ability as military skill. Throughout, no public man could have acted with more discretion. And the result was that he had accomplished his great object without involving the country in a single perilous engagement. The present was not the first or the second time that Sir R. Napier had received the thanks of Parliament for his services; and happy was the man who had thrice thus been honoured by his country. Passing then to notice the services of the naval forces under Commodore Heath, Mr. Disraeli praised the promptitude, skill, and efficiency displayed in buoying and lighting the Abyssinian waters, transporting troops and stores, supplying the army with water, and organising and equipping the rocket brigade, which took part in the whole of the operations. There had been instances of rapid marches and triumphant fields that had produced greater sensation in the history of modern times, but if regard were had to the exhibition of military virtue, he doubted whether the qualities of patience, endurance, and good temper, combined with such gentleness and docility, under the most trying circumstances, had ever been so strikingly exemplified by any troops.—Mr. GLADSTONE, in seconding the motion, did not claim for the expedition precisely the same kind of fame as that which attached to actions in which desperate conflicts were waged with an equal or nearly equal valour between nations or armies possessed of all the resources of modern warfare; but we lived at a time in which if it could not be said of the soldier it must be said of the commander that mere fighting, however arduous, mere tactics and mere strategy, had become, though perhaps still vital and essential, almost a secondary part, certainly by no means the whole apparatus required to make a successful general. And it was in those departments which related to the conflict to be carried on with nature, with distance, with climate, and with all the diversities and difficulties presented by one of the most peculiar portions of the earth's service, in the civil government of the army, and in the provision made for every want, that the Abyssinian expedition presented to the view a history alike complete and satisfactory. Alluding to the action of the Government at home, for whom the Premier had abstained from claiming any undue or peculiar credit, Mr. Gladstone observed that he felt bound to say that to them the country was indebted for the wise choice of a commander, for the unlimited confidence they had reposed in the able man who was the object of their selection, for the unsparing liberality with which, having once decided the difficult question of facing those great risks, they made the whole resources of the country available for the purpose they had in view, and for the care and forethought with which all the necessary provisions were made; especially were we indebted to the Minister who was charged with the chief share of the responsibility and the labour, the Secretary of State for India; and, lastly, we were indebted to the Government for the firmness and decision with which, from first to last, they had persisted, acting in accordance with the enlightened mind of the nation, in confining the operations to the legitimate purpose of the expedition, and in refusing to be led beyond the line of duty and wisdom by any vision, however flattering or seductive. The right hon. gentleman concluded by passing a high eulogium on Sir R. Napier. The motion was put and agreed to amid loud cheers.

EAST INDIA IRRIGATION COMPANY.—On the same night the SECRETARY for INDIA, in reply to Mr. BOUVIER, said he had no objection to the production of all the despatches and telegrams that had passed on this subject, but could not admit that he ought to have communicated to the Irrigation Company the despatch of the Governor-general stating the terms upon which the works of the company might be purchased. Parliament had distinctly laid upon the Secretary for India in Council the duty of superintending the revenue and expenditure of India, and where, as in this case, there was a difference of upwards of £100,000 between the offer of the Governor-general of India and that which the Council thought reasonable and proper, they would not have been justified in offering the higher price merely upon the ground that it had been recommended by the Governor-general, especially as the recommendation referred to the extreme point to which the Government ought to go. The Council were not at all anxious to purchase the works of the Orissa Company, but they were anxious to obtain possession of the Behar project, because those were works which the company were not likely for some time to be able to carry into effect, while the Government were perfectly ready to undertake them. The Orissa Company had made very successful exertions to raise money, and had expended £800,000 upon works which were likely in due time to be remunerative. When, therefore, the Council found that their offer was not acceptable, they made the alternative proposal to assist the company by loan, provided they gave up to the Government the Behar scheme. The Council held that the Government of India should not guarantee the capital that might be required to carry on these works, nor yet become shareholders in a company of that kind—(hear)—but if they could buy the works at a price, it might be a good arrangement for the Government to take them into their own hands. The Government were prepared to abide by the terms they offered in November last, and if these terms were refused they were ready to assist the company by way of loan on the security of the works, but not as the company desired, upon the terms that if there was any failure to pay the interest upon the advance, the Government should only enter into temporary possession until the arrears were paid. The motion was withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, July 3.—THE INDIAN COUNCIL.—Mr. OTWAY asked whether, having regard to the state of public business, the Indian Minister would object to substitute a temporary measure, so far as the Indian Council in this country is concerned, for the proposed Government of India Amendment Bill.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE said there would be difficulty in inducing gentlemen to accept office if they did not know something certain as to its tenure. He had, however, a suggestion to make to the House. The Bill contains six clauses. The first is passed, and three will meet with no objection. The fourth, relating to the appointment of the Council in India, may be transferred to the other Bill; so that there would be only the question of salary. He would therefore, when the Bill came on, ask the House to pass it through committee, and hon. gentlemen who have amendments can bring them up in report.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, July 7.—THE OVERLAND MAILS.—On the vote of £789,349 for the packet service, Mr. CRAWFORD called attention to the recent increase of postage on letters addressed to the East Indies and Ceylon, and the exemptions allowed in certain privileged cases. He observed that the result of this increase had been to induce private firms to use lighter paper, and to restrict their correspondence as much as possible, and he instanced the case of one firm which, since the increase, had actually paid the Post-office at the rate of £500 a year less than before, so that on the ground of expediency, as well as of fairness, the increase of the charge could not be maintained.—Mr. SCLATER-BOOTH said the new contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Company had involved an additional expenditure of £500,000 a year. The whole contract involved a loss to the Government of £82,000 a year, and the new one would involve a loss of £195,000 a year, even supposing there was the increase anticipated from the additional postage. The hon. member for the City had complained of the increase on letters sent via Marseilles. So far as experience went the result justified the anticipations of the Post-office. It was calculated that the increased receipts would be £37,000 a year, but they were at the rate of more than £40,000. He admitted it was an experiment, and circumstances might occur to induce a change. The hon. member had also complained that soldiers' and officers' rates were charged at the low rate of 6d. Well, that was on the same principle that soldiers were allowed to travel by railway when on duty in this country at a reduced fare.

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE

POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

BY

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1814 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with a sequel to a standard work. And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter, comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshuhur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner.

LIVES OF INDIAN OFFICERS,

Illustrative of the History of the Civil and Military Services of India.

BY JOHN WILLIAM KAYE,

Author of "The History of the War in Afghanistan," &c., &c.

Contents.

The Rev. HENRY MARTYN. Sir CHARLES METCALFE. Sir ALEXANDER BURNES. Lord CORNWALLIS. Sir JOHN MALCOLM. The Hon. MOUNTSTUART ELPHINSTONE.	Sir HENRY LAWRENCE. General JAMES NEILL. Brig.-gen. JOHN NICHOLSON. Captain ARTHUR CONOLLY. Major ELDRED POTTINGER. Major D'ARCY TODD. Appendix, &c.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canining. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune."

"J. W. KAYE."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employee of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the EXAMINER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

DYSENTERY, CHOLERA, FEVER, AGUE, COLDS, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is proscribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

NEVER AT FAULT.—In all irritations of the skin, sores, ulcers, burns, and scrofulous enlargements of the glands, Holloway's Ointment presents a ready and easy means of cure, which never disappoints the most favourable expectations; it manifests a peculiar power in restraining inflammation, removing stagnation, cooling the blood, and checking all acrimonious or unhealthy discharges. Whilst thus acting locally the Pills are no less remarkable for their power in improving the general condition and habit of body which render the cure complete and permanent. Under the genial influence of these potent remedies the puny infant becomes the robust child, the pale and emaciated regain colour and rotundity, and the dyspeptic eats freely without fear.

Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WASS's residence, free of charge.

THE PEOPLE OF INDIA:

PHOTOGRAPHIC ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE RACES AND TRIBES OF HINDUSTAN,

ORIGINALY PREPARED UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, AND REPRODUCED AT THE INDIA MUSEUM
BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

EDITED BY

J. FORBES WATSON AND JOHN WILLIAM KAYE.

MEMORANDUM.

In addition to the copies of this work prepared for the use of the Government, the Secretary of State for India in Council has authorised the publication of an edition for sale. The work will contain about 450 Photographs on mounts, in eight volumes, super royal 4to., and it will be issued at £2. 5s. per volume. The First and Second Volumes are now ready for delivery.

PREFACE.

During the administration of Lord Canning, from 1856 to 1863, the interest which had been created in Europe by the remarkable development of the Photographic Art communicated itself to India, and originated the desire to turn it to account in the illustration of the topography, architecture, and ethnology of that country.

There were none, perhaps, in whom this interest was awakened more strongly than in Lord and Lady Canning. It was their wish to carry home with them, at the end of their sojourn in India, a collection, obtained by private means, of photographic illustrations, which might recall to their memory the peculiarities of Indian life.

The great convulsion of 1857-59, while it necessarily retarded for a time all scientific and artistic operations, imparted a new interest to the country which had been the scene of, and to the people who had been the actors in these remarkable events. When, therefore, the pacification of India had been accomplished, the officers of the Indian Services, who had made themselves acquainted with the principles and practice of photography, encouraged and patronised by the Governor-General, went forth, and traversed the land in search of interesting subjects.

In this way the design soon exceeded the dimensions of a mere private collection; but Lord Canning felt that its importance was sufficient to warrant official sanction and development, and, therefore, placed the matter in the hands of Mr. Olive Bayley, his Home Secretary. Some of the more important results appear in the present work.

The photographs were produced without any definite plan, according to local and personal circumstances, by different officers; and copies of each plate were sent home to the Secretary of State for India in Council.

After a time, it appeared that a sufficient number of illustrations had been received from various parts of India, fairly to represent the different varieties of the Indian races. The negatives remained in India; but from the plates sent home it was easy to produce fresh negatives, the prints of which might be multiplied to any extent. The Secretary of State in Council sanctioned this operation, and the work was executed by Mr. W. Griggs, at the India Museum, under the superintendence of Dr. Forbes Watson.

In many cases some descriptive account of the tribes represented accompanied the photographs sent from India. These varied greatly in amplitude and value. But, on the whole, it may be said that they were sufficient to constitute the basis of the sketches contributed by Mr. John R. Melville, Colonel Meadows Taylor, Mr. Kaye, Dr. Forbes Watson, and others. These sketches do not profess to be more than mere rough notes, suggestive rather than exhaustive, and they make no claim to scientific research or philosophic investigation. But although the work does not aspire to scientific eminence, it is hoped that, in an ethnological point of view, it will not be without interest and value.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, June 16; Agra, June 13; Calcutta and Madras, June 11.

This is happily the first instance, since March, of any great delay in the arrival of the Bombay Mail. For the loss of two days, owing to a breakdown of the steamer in the Red Sea, it is possible that no one was much to blame. But why was none of the loss made good on the voyage from Alexandria, and how came the French authorities to keep the mails waiting eleven hours and a-half at Marseilles? It was surely possible to send them on at once by a special train—chargeable to the P. and O. Company—which might have overtaken the one missed by the steamer. Do French officials always go to bed at nine or ten o'clock? Seeing that five days extra are allowed on the Suez side during the monsoon, and that usually the mails on this side have been landed with ease at the Post-office on Saturday or Sunday, people who have letters to answer by to-morrow evening may be excused for asking a few questions.

WE have not been waiting, it seems, for any important news. The Revised Furlough Rules were not out; the Bombay Bank Commission had only opened its sittings to adjourn them; nothing was stirring on the North-West frontier, except bazaar talk, and possibly Feroze Shah; nor does any news of progress come to us from Captain Sladen's party. The Akhoond of Swat has declined to sanction a jehad or "crescentade" against the English in revenge for the blockade of his territory; cholera has broken out at Pooree among the pilgrims returning from Juggernath; an assistant-surgeon at Calcutta has been "severely reprimanded" for drunkenness and neglect of duty; and a paymaster up-country was to be tried for some unexplained deficit in his accounts. Some hundreds of policemen have been sent off to play their part in a small war in Cuttack, and the Zemindar of Ootterparah has written an essay on the epidemic rife in the Hooghly and Burdwan districts, which epidemic he ascribes to the gradual silting up of ponds, rivers, and watercourses. This stops drainage and produces swamps. They should be cleaned, he patriotically observes, at the expense of the landlords.

It is an ill-wind that blows no one good; and the storms which delay the homeward-bound steamer have set at rest all fears of actual famine in the Madras Presidency. The monsoon broke in a heavy storm up the Indian coast from Masulipatam to the Sandheads. While our own recent little storms have only aggravated the heat, Madras feels like a giant refreshed by heavy falls of rain, which filled the tanks, flooded the compounds, and greatly cooled the air. Some damage however has been done, not only to ships at sea, but to buildings and other objects on land. In the Black Town of Madras, at Royapooram, Trevandrum, and other places, the hurricane of the 4th June, one of the worst ever experienced, it seems, in those parts, played havoc chiefly with trees and houses; Trevandrum being the worst sufferer. Stories of disaster may be expected from the Bay of Bengal.

AN awkward accident has befallen the Madras pier. It seems that a French ship ran against it and knocked down about a hundred and fifty feet of it in the middle. According to the Athenæum it would take at least twelve months to repair the damage, at a cost of two lakhs of rupees, and the prospect of great inconvenience meanwhile to the merchants, who will no longer be able to ship their cargoes in the large boats that used to come alongside the pier. Passengers and cargo will have to put up with the old masoolah boats, the only ones that could get through the tremendous surf.

A GOOD many ships laden with troops and stores from Abyssinia had arrived at Bombay between the 9th and 16th of June.

WITH regard to the gold currency question, it seems likely that the Government will allow, as a tentative measure, the circulation of English and Australian sovereigns at their market value, without at present declaring the sovereign a legal tender. This will bring Australian gold in the shape of coinage into Indian markets, without any loss to trade, and with some proportional relief to the markets of Europe. The Government must however be prepared in due time to go further, and make gold a legal tender.

THE Bhamo Expedition, if not yet a failure, is still trembling on the edge of one. Some of the papers ascribe the result to the King of Burmah himself, but the Friend of India will not hear of such a libel on that excellent but misunderstood monarch, who has Captain Sladen's interests as deeply at heart as his own. It is not the king, but the Bhamo and Mandalay traders, who are putting hindrances in Captain Sladen's way.

THE average price per chest of opium sold at Calcutta on the 10th June was Rs. 1,425-9-0; a price which Chinese authorities say can never yield a profit to shippers.

SOMETHING must be done, we suppose, towards the discovery and release of those Englishmen, if any, who are held in bondage by a chief in Central Africa. Mr. Angelo, an experienced African traveller, has volunteered, it seems, to make the attempt at his own risk, if anybody will supply him with the needful moneys and appurtenances. The India Office, we believe, is quite willing to meet all such demands, on condition that the Government be in no way responsible either for Mr. Angelo's safety or his actions. If the public however should be willing to defray Mr. Angelo's expenses, the knotty question of responsibility would be solved, we imagine, without more ado.

THE little State of Chumba, tributary to the Punjab, seems to be flourishing apace under its able superintendent, Colonel Blair Reid. Covering an area of 8,216 square miles, with a population of 120,000, it yields the modest yearly revenue of £12,000, out of which £1,235 goes in yearly tribute to the Punjab Government. After defraying all needful expenses, Colonel Reid found at his disposal a surplus of £4,901, which he laid out on roads, public buildings, English sheep and cattle, machinery and workmen's tools. The Rajah has a fine new palace nearly ready, the roads are in excellent order, there is a new dispensary, and an improved public school. Debtors are no longer doomed to bondage. The probable income of the current year will be £17,377, against a probable outlay of £10,867; the surplus being reserved for the completion of the Dalhousie-road next year, and other "important works." In 1863 there were no roads; the little State was a lakh of rupees in debt; and the Rajah's substance was eaten up by a crowd of dependents. He himself is said to be a poor hand at business, so that all the work devolves on the Superintendent and his three subordinates.

ONE of the novelties popularly ascribed to the Abyssinian campaign has been the employment of elephants in carrying guns. To any one acquainted with the processes of Indian warfare, the novelty shows itself rather in the notion that such a method is new. Elephants were indeed originally used either for carrying baggage or drawing heavy guns on the line of march; and many a man must have admired the ease with which those noble monsters accomplished either task. But the very feats they achieved as beasts of burden long since suggested the expediency of utilising them for the carriage of guns. During the last nineteen years, remarks a correspondent of the Army and Navy Gazette, "few expeditions have started from Peshawur, or from other stations on the Trans-Indus frontier, in which elephants have not been seen carrying 8-inch mortars, 9-pounder brass guns, or 24-pounder howitzers for hill warfare. They have marched hundreds of miles and have been engaged in many a frontier scrimmage. There is a regular drill for the purpose." "Ex-Indian" indeed asserts that he is but one of many officers who "have marched and fought with guns so carried." This last fact about elephants standing fire, if it be literally true, is a striking instance of the extent to which their natural dislike to gunpowder has been overcome by human influences. We should like to know how they behave under fire.

It is to be hoped that the working of the Indo-European Telegraph has improved a little since last year. How much room there was for improvement could be seen from the loudly reiterated complaints of commercial bodies both in England and in India. In one of the Parliamentary papers lately published we are enabled to realise the full blessings of telegraphic intercourse as conducted on this particular line. The Glasgow Chamber of Commerce inform Sir S. Northcote that the experiences of a single Glasgow firm, from April to the end of September, 1867, were of this encouraging kind. Of the twenty-one messages sent from Glasgow to Calcutta at an average cost of £5. 19s. each, one was delivered on the twenty-sixth day after its despatch, another never reached its goal, and the remainder took an average of six days apiece on the road; the longest passage taking fifteen, the quickest two days. Only two of them were accurately transmitted, forty-six errors being reckoned up among the remainder. During the same six months the firm received from Calcutta twenty-six messages, costing an average of £8 each. These on the average were delivered in about five days, the longest period being thirteen days and the shortest two. Only two of the messages were accurately given; the average number of errors in each of the rest being five. In one of them there were ten, in another as many as fifteen errors. If such were the experiences of one house alone, no wonder that so many memorials have sung in different phrases one same wail of annoyance at the delays, errors, irregularities, and frequent intervals of total silence, that have long marred the working of the Indo-European line. From Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Kurrachee, comes the same cry. Things are now or will soon be a little better than they were; but again we hear of a break in the cable between Guadur and Kurrachee, and our hopes of any great improvement in the working of the whole line are certainly very small. How is it that commercial men keep so shy of carrying out the Red Sea project? The Americans would have had a cable down before this, and made as good use of it as they do of the Atlantic Cable.

SIR ROBERT NAPIER—or rather Baron Napier of Magdala and Caryngton—has undergone the pleasures of a private dinner at the Athenæum, and of public dinners at the United Service Club and the East India United Service Club. His reception at the latter especially was everything that such a man could desire. Sir Bartle Frere, as President, made an excellent speech in honour of the many services of the distinguished guest, especially alluding to Sir R. Napier's promptness in discerning the weak point of the Chinese defences during the last Chinese war. We have heard indeed that to him more than any one else were due the successful movements which carried our arms to Peking. Sir Robert Napier's answer would have won him the hearty goodwill of his hearers, if he had not already won it by his deeds. He declared among other things that his acceptance of the proffered peerage was mainly done out of compliment to that great Indian service of which he was proud to be a member. "He was perhaps the first Indian soldier who, from a simple lieutenant, having nothing but his name and his sword to begin with, had won the high honour for which her Majesty had been pleased to designate him." This is not quite the truth, we think, for Lord Clive began and ended in much the same way; but it is near enough the truth to satisfy any one. Mr. Gladstone added his meed of praise regarding "as joyful a celebration as history can record" of the carrying out a just cause by men who knew its justice, and would not sully it by "a taint of cruelty or ambition." Sir Stafford Northcote took care to explain that the credit of recommending Napier should be shared between the Duke of Cambridge and Sir J. Lawrence, while the latter had been the first to suggest that Napier should be entrusted not only with the military command, but with all the political guidance of the expedition.

A CORRESPONDENT draws our attention to the absence of any general rewards for the Hill campaigns of Umbeyle and Bhotan. Now that the troops engaged in the late New Zealand campaigns are to have a medal, it certainly seems hard to leave undecorated the brave men who fought and suffered in the Indian wars of 1864-'65-'66. In point of fighting, the Swat campaign was exceedingly severe, and on its issue depended a good deal more than the peace of the North-West frontier. Had Chamberlaine not been supported at a very critical moment by Sir W. Denison and the Commander-in-Chief, it is difficult to say how great a shock our prestige might not have suffered. There ought to be some fixed principle of awarding medals. Only it is hard to know where to stop. Are not medals becoming a little too cheap already?

POSTAL CHARGES.—The Bombay Guardian says that, "besides the revenue from increased postage, the Post-office is gathering a harvest from fines levied on account of insufficient postage. We received a letter by the last mail weighing $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. and stamped a shilling. It was not marked 'via Southampton' or 'via Marseilles.' It came by the latter route, and for the deficient penny we are charged tenpence."

INDIAN TOURISTS.

ONE of the Madras papers draws a glowing description of the wonders which any Englishman with a few hundred pounds to spare will be able to see during a few months' journey through India, as soon as the railway system is once fairly set at work. In three years the three older capitals will be linked together, Delhi and Lahore will be brought within a day's journey from each other, and a little later Lahore will be joined on to Kurachee. Already indeed the number of travellers who go to India for the mere pleasure of the thing is yearly increasing. And the sights which a mere traveller may see in a few months are numerous and varied enough to repay the cost and trouble of such a trip. The sportsman would find a broad field for the exercise of his special appetites and his keenest energies. The artist need never want for interesting subjects. For lovers of science in any of its manifold branches there is no end to the profit they may reap on every side; while men of historical and general culture would be largely rewarded even by a cursory acquaintance with Indian scenes.

But a few months spent in such a country would go a very short way towards really gratifying any tastes save those of the sportsman or the mere seeker after new things. Of course a traveller with his eyes open, and his mind fairly stored with preliminary knowledge, could get through a good deal of superficial experience in a short time. He might realise the intensity of Indian heat, might learn to distinguish between the Hindoo and Mohammedan types of manhood and architecture, to apprehend the rich variety of races and manners in Hindostan. He would learn something of the outward differences between the climate and people of Burmah and the Punjab, and be able to form some idea of the extent to which Western influences have already wrought upon the outer crust of Eastern civilisation. If he were a keen sportsman or an ardent botanist, he might even reach a certain intimacy with men and manners out of the beaten track. But in very few cases would a few months of Indian travel add much to a man's real knowledge of Indian life. There are some men, no doubt, who can grasp by force of pure sympathy at many organic truths, which others who have lived for years in the midst of such truths have never succeeded in finding out. In old times, when Englishmen went out younger to India and were thrown more on their own resources, something of this finer insight was often evolved from the necessities of daily contact with those around them. But in these days it is not so. Owing to the mutinies and the march of civilisation the Anglo-Indians of to-day have much less sympathy, natural or acquired, with their native fellow-citizens than they had forty years ago. Strength is slow to comprehend weakness. In India the same pride of race and conscious supremacy which has so long blinded us to the fair claims of Celtic Ireland seems to be sundering us more and more widely from the mass of those we govern. English officials, few and overtasked, see less and less of the people among whom they carry on their work. A few planters here and there, or perhaps a railway engineer or missionary of very large ideas may bore a little deeper than other men into the lower strata of native thought and feeling. But at best it is very hard for Englishmen, who after all these years have really come to know so little of their French neighbours, to plumb the depths of human nature in races still more markedly unlike their own. Sympathy springs either from moral or intellectual sources, and the average Englishman is too much of a Pharisee to care for real enlightenment on matters which seem to him not worth the knowing. Even in their own country how few Englishmen seem to have the will, if even they have the power, to understand each other? Between class and class, sect and sect, there is fixed a broad gulf of ignorance, indifference, or mistrust, which very few men succeed in overpassing.

It is good, however, to travel in a strange country, even for a few months. Travellers, like Miss Carpenter and Dr. Macleod, would pick up in that time at least two or three new ideas, perhaps rub off half-a-dozen old prejudices. But a longer stay would have probably enlarged the former's views on the morality of clothing, and made the latter a little less hopeful of Christianising the natives after the pattern either of the Westminster Confession or the Church Catechism. For old Indian officials the shorter term of travel might prove of no small benefit, as a healthy and sure means of counteracting the mental cramps produced by working too long in one place or in one groove. The civilian of one presidency should have every encouragement given him to explore the manners and habits of another.

CHESNEY ON INDIAN POLITY.*

IN his comprehensive, clear, and statesmanlike view of the whole scheme of British-Indian government—as it has been, is, and should be—the Accountant-general of the Public Works Department in India has done immense service to all who take any kind of interest, whether as actors or onlookers, in Indian affairs. Even among Anglo-Indians of every class, the two great services not excepted, we imagine that the number of persons at all conversant with the inner working of the system under which they live, or awake to the true bearings and the wide importance of the questions so ably handled by Major Chesney, must be very small. How many Englishmen at home could give correct answers to a dozen questions regarding the details of English administration, the development of our representative system, of government by responsible ministers, and so on? And in India a like state of ignorance admits of much more excuse. Amidst so many changes constantly occurring in the processes and the personals of Indian government, and the constant pressure of office-work in a trying climate, few men have the time or the heart to go deep into matters which after all have no immediate bearing on their own future. As long as the wheels of government worked smoothly, and promotion was not too long in coming, and new careers were now and then opened to the more ambitious, it mattered little to most how far the system they administered was in harmony with existing needs or with any particular movement of modern thought. Unofficial men of business had still less time or inclination to look at Indian questions from any standpoint higher than that of class-interest. For them that form of government was best which insured free-trade to the merchant and placed the fewest restrictions in the planters' way.

At home, on the other hand, the indifference to Indian questions, if less marked than it used to be, is still, we fear, greater than Major Chesney will allow. Some of that indifference however proceeds from ignorance, which a book of this kind should go far to enlighten. To all indeed who need enlightening it offers an amount of useful information not to be found elsewhere within the same space. And Major Chesney imparts his knowledge in clear straightforward language, easy to follow, and weighted with a becoming dignity of tone. He writes like one who thoroughly knows his ground, and disdaining the arts of a partisan or a wordslinger, cares only to make himself understood. Accordingly there is nothing slipshod in his style, which rather resembles Hallam's in its easy movement and simple weight of expression.

The first chapter, which forms also the First Book, traces the rise and development of British rule in India, from the first settlement of the English in Bombay down to the legislative changes of 1861. Specially noticeable in this chapter is the credit given to Lord Wellesley for having been the first to perceive that "in India a political equilibrium was impossible; that peace was only to be insured by establishing the preponderance of British power; and that the task of breaking down the Mahratta Confederacy was as practicable as, sooner or later, it must have been necessary to be undertaken." Unluckily his forecast was not shared by his employers; and the Mahratta war of 1817-18 "was the fruit of the timid policy of non-intervention" pursued after Wellesley's retirement. The final conquest of the Mahrattas established the Company as the paramount power in India; the country beyond the Sutlej being the only one that could henceforth "measure swords against it with any chance of success." In 1833 the Government of India was first formally recognised as distinct from the Government of Bengal, although at the same time the headship of both Governments was centred, we think unwisely, in the Viceroy himself. Lord W. Bentinck indeed and Sir C. Metcalfe would even then have limited the Viceregal powers to that supervision of the local Governments which the circumstances of the present day seem more and more clearly to demand. Twenty years later Bengal was allowed the show of independence under a Lieutenant-governor without a council; a show which must ere long be turned into a reality, if we would do our duty by the largest and most civilised province of British India. A brief survey of the legislative changes introduced into the government of India since the transfer of that government from the Company to the Crown, and of the provinces now subject directly or indirectly to British rule, closes a chapter full of information needful to the understanding of those that follow.

The Second Book, containing four chapters, treats of the constitution of the Indian Government. One chapter is devoted to the Presidencies, which are no longer three in number, according to the popular belief, but ten. Each of these ten great provinces has its own civil Government, independent of the rest, and enjoying more or less executive power; while all are under the direct authority and control of the Supreme Government. And here the author proceeds to show up the anomalies and defects of the sectional system which has grown up in British India. Madras and Bombay have each its separate army and separate civil service, while one military and civil service is deemed sufficient for all the Governments popularly comprised under the name of Bengal, though the Bengal Civil Service practically divides itself into two; one for the northern, the other for the eastern provinces. India in fact has four distinct civil services. Should these be further divided or fused into one? For all Imperial purposes a fusion is most desirable. Local appointments might still be reserved for local candidates, but the Imperial departments should be filled up by selection from the whole service. What is already in many cases become a fiction should henceforth give place to the wide recognition of the fact that civilians in one presidency are eligible for high employment in another.

Still more desirable, affirms our author, is the fusion of the three armies into one. The old system was convenient in its day; but now that all the European troops have been brought under one system, the need for local distinctions no longer exists. What is the use of keeping up three war departments instead of one, when the Supreme Government already regulates "the whole military expenditure and administration throughout the country?" In the movement of troops during peace, in their management during a war such as that in Abyssinia, in the perverse complexity of army accounts and of the ordnance departments, the evils of the present system have continually been exemplified. Its abolition seems in fact a necessary consequence of the new arrangements for landing and embarking all British regiments at Bombay. The same argument may be applied to the three Staff Corps, and to the officers at any rate of the native armies. Even in the case of the native troops, Major Chesney would carry out Lord W. Bentinck's scheme of four separate armies, each with its own complement of British troops, but all governed by one Commander-in-Chief with one staff.

The next chapter goes into the relations of the Supreme and Local Governments. Major Chesney examines the federal system of government, as proposed by Mr. Bright, and finds it inapplicable to existing needs. A federal system, in Mr. Bright's sense, implies a federal congress, for which India is certainly not yet ripe. But the present system has faults of its own. It leaves the local governments no sufficient power to raise revenue or to regulate expenditure on their own responsibility for purposes avowedly provincial. Hence come unfair distribution and wasteful employment of the common revenues, which are first gathered into the Imperial Treasury, and then doled out in different proportions to each government. Our author would remedy the evil by separating Imperial from provincial charges, and making the local governments financially responsible for their shares of the common revenue. They should contribute each a fair quota towards Imperial charges, such as the home establishment, the Indian debt, the army, the post-office, telegraphs, guaranteed railways, and one or two more items; but for most other purposes they should be free to raise and employ revenue in their own way, at their own risk, for their own advantage. Anything like a uniform taxation in such a country as India is at once politically dangerous and financially unwise. But a uniform and centralised system of accounts is absolutely essential, and the central government would still claim a large share of authority in questions of provincial finance, while the local governments would have a special interest in making the best use of local revenues.

The Provincial Governments form the subject of the next chapter. Major Chesney, like many other authorities, argues in favour of recognising facts by giving Bengal a full Governor with a Council. The Lieutenant-governor already has more work to do and wields wider powers than the Governors of Madras and Bombay. Why then should he not be placed on the same footing? Because a governor with no Indian experience might be chosen for the post? But Indian experience means sometimes experience of a very bounded sort, and "the prizes of the Governments of Madras and Bombay have always been freely conferred on distinguished members of the Indian service." The aid of a Council, without lessening the Governor's responsibility, lightens his labours by a due division of them, an advantage specially to be desired for Bengal. Any council established in Bengal would demand the services of a non-official member, in the interests of British capital and enterprise. Even without Assam, Behar, and Orissa, Bengal would still be the largest province in India. But there seems no sufficient reason for detaching Behar from a province with which it has so long been connected, at least by political ties.

Under a centralised system of military administration, the Councils of Madras and Bombay would no longer need a military member. For the North-West Provinces and the Punjab no council is needed; but the Governors who ought to be substituted for Lieutenant-governors should always be men of local experience. As for Oudh, a country as large and as densely peopled as Belgium and Holland, with a distinct land tenure of its own, our author strongly objects to its incorporation with the North-West Provinces, where the land-rent is mostly raised from peasant proprietors. Its Chief Commissioner ought however to be turned into a regular Governor; a dignity more befitting so important a province, and more impressive in the eyes of a people naturally fond of show.

The Second Book closes with a chapter on the Government of India. That country, says Major Chesney, is in fact a federation of States under a Central Government, and the time is come to recognise the fact. Relieved of all provincial details, the Supreme Government would take up its right position as "a general controlling authority, operating equally over all India." To that end the local Governments should cease to correspond directly with the Indian Secretary. The existing usage has fostered a general belief that Madras and Bombay "are less completely under the authority of the Governor-general in Council," than other parts of India, especially Bengal. There is no need for any such correspondence, even on financial pretexts, for the Supreme Government alone can have power to raise loans on Indian revenue. In practice the Supreme Council now forms a Cabinet, the Premier of which "rules through responsible ministers, but yet rules himself." Even in Indian official circles the extent of this great and necessary change in the business and functions of the Council "is scarcely yet apprehended," except in the case of the legal and financial members. Another good change has been carried out by Sir John Lawrence, who, instead of travelling without his Council, has always taken them and the whole staff of secretaries with him on his yearly withdrawals from Calcutta to the Hills and elsewhere.

Major Chesney regards as impracticable the addition of a native member to the Viceregal Council. One native could no more represent the interests of his countrymen than one European sovereign could be chosen to govern all the rest; nor is any native of high rank master enough of the English language to be able to take an active share in the Council's business. As for the appointment of a non-official European, where are you to find a fit person among a class which has no special training, nor any special knowledge, in which he would not be surpassed by a dozen servants of the State? In the case of the Bengal Government a better claim might be made on behalf both of native and European councillors. In the Supreme Council however, a place should be found for some responsible head of the public works department, in the room of one of the military members. Either one person should be War Minister and Commander-in-Chief, or else the Commander-in-Chief should not sit in the Council. Major Chesney also objects to the practice of promoting councillors to Lieutenant-governorships, as tending indirectly to weaken the authority of the Central Government. He would further enlarge the Viceroy's powers of veto, and make him Captain General of all her Majesty's forces in India.

By the Supreme Council is meant of course the Executive Council. The Legislative Council, which includes the members of the Executive Council, is a different thing. One-half of its twelve regular members are civil servants; of the remainder, two are Calcutta merchants, and four natives of rank from different parts of India. They all hold their seats for two years. The native members being ignorant, as a rule, of English content themselves with looking on; but they are said to prize their position as a personal honour. As each Presidency proper has its own legislative council, the Viceroy's Legislature deals mainly with Imperial questions and those which concern the minor governments. The Viceroy himself has a veto on all measures passed. This Council is and must continue to be "merely a body of nominees;" for in the present state of things it cannot possibly be turned into a representative assembly. But it might perhaps be so far enlarged as to raise the character and importance of its proceedings, and to admit "as many natives as possible to the benefit of the training in responsibility and habits of business afforded by a seat" therein.

With regard to the future seat of the central government,

Major Chesney adds his voice to the chorus of complaint against Calcutta. It is unhealthy, out of the way, belongs peculiarly to Bengal; its influence has tended to make the Government local rather than Imperial; and a government at Calcutta sees nothing of the army. But the author has little better on the whole to say for Bombay, Poona, or Central India. He would rather have no fixed capital at all, but let the Government move from place to place in the cold weather, as Lord Dalhousie used to do, and establish itself in or near Simla for the rest of the year. It is absurd, he thinks, to talk of the yearly visit to the Hills as "a retreat from the cares of office and from the influence of public opinion—as if the presence of a few over-worked merchants and tradespeople, far too busy in the pursuit of wealth to occupy themselves seriously about public concerns, constituted a necessary aid to the machinery of government." In point of fact, "the hot season is usually the busiest part of the year," as regards the labours of the desk. Simla, or some neighbouring ridge, is moreover within easy reach of the plains and of a strong British garrison; overlooks the whole North-Western frontier, and lies close to "the finest and best-affected nation in the country." If the author means the Sikhs, he is right enough for the present; but what if Sikh loyalty should some day prove a broken reed?

What he has to say on the questions of civil and military administration, of public works, and of finance in general, we must defer noticing till another week. Meanwhile, the foregoing summary will have helped to show what a store of useful knowledge and generally sound suggestions are contained in this timely addition to the literature of Indian politics. The book comes not too late, we hope, to influence the public opinion of this country on some of the questions raised by Sir Stafford Northcote's second India Bill.

MEDALS FOR UMBEYLA AND BHOOTAN. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Now that the troops engaged in New Zealand have obtained a medal, through the kind exertions of Lord Enfield in the House of Commons, can nobody say a word for those who served in the Indian Hill Campaigns of Umbeyla and Bhootan in 1864, 1865, 1866? In the former war, some thirty-five officers and a large number of men were killed and wounded; and in the latter many perished through sickness, exposure, and the sword. Up to the present time however, only the generals in command and a few of the officers have been rewarded by K.C.B.'s, Brevets, and Victoria Crosses, but for the troops in general nothing has been done. Surely a difference should not be made between wars carried on by the Home and Indian Governments.—Your obedient servant, JUSTICE.

EXPENDITURE ON PUBLIC WORKS.

The Madras Times deems it a serious matter that out of £6,000,000 yearly expended on public works, a million and three-quarters should be needed for barracks alone. Whether the charge is one that should be defrayed out of revenue or capital is open to dispute; but if there should be no borrowing for one class, there ought to be none for the other, and it comes very much to the same thing in the long run. So great a part of the State income coming from land, it might be expected that agricultural works would absorb a preponderating share of the grant year by year. Yet in 1866-67 only £403,500 from Imperial funds fell to agriculture, and this while £750,000 went to civil buildings, the instruments of taxation as they may in some degree be viewed. Nor must very homely considerations be excluded from accompanying this contrast, and heightening it. The bricks and the tiles which compose these buildings are mostly burned with the manure of which the fields are robbed, and the scanty edgings of trees that throw a shade for men and cattle to rest under, when meridian heat incapacitates, are taken for charcoal and for roof-trees. Indian agriculture has no more wasting foe than Indian architecture. This the people intuitively know, for do they not live in the humblest habitations in consonance with the depressed condition of tillage and their lank and shrunken domestic animals? Communications are, next to agriculture, of the utmost importance in this country. Taking one year after another about £850,000 is spent upon new roads, and half as much in addition upon road repairs. A tolerably good trunk road costs not much under £1,400 a mile, so that over 500 miles of good road should by this superficial mode of reckoning be opened up every year. But as 17 per cent. goes in establishments, eighty-five miles of road must be knocked off, leaving little over 400 miles of annual progress. It would be so useful to be sure here that at this place the public works department were moving. In Madras it certainly is not, for the grant for 1866-67 did not exceed £47,000, or enough to make less than thirty miles of respectable road, which is scarcely the share this presidency has a claim upon the 400 miles assumed to be made in all India together. The Central Provinces, which are of similar area to Madras proper, though worth a great deal less, and with a vastly smaller population, received more than double the grant accorded the Southern Presidency for roads, and within a few pounds of that for Bengal proper, with its prosperous multitudes and rich yield of taxation. Nearing the bottom of the list we come at the "Sundries," or, what sounds finer, Miscellaneous Public Improvements. £5,846 would not show much appreciable effect out of the regions of flowers and cinchona; yet Madras only expended about half in miscellanies. But Bombay walks off with £230,000, or nearly a quarter of a million sterling, without compunction. The Western Presidency has indeed, in almost everything, the lion's apportionment, and is in some respects a terrible dead weight on the finances. Federalisation would redress the equilibrium. When Bombay public works had to be prosecuted out of its provincial surplus, and with the Central Provinces included in its territory to meet their needs as well as its own, there would be a slight difference in figures thenceforward. Bombay prices are so extravagant, a rupee there being worth about half a rupee compared with most other places, that till they adjust themselves few will be sorry to see the tide on the turn, and the whales stranded. The instructive articles of the general account of expenditure on public works for 1866-67 occur, however, after original works and repairs, establishments, tools, and plant, and profit and loss, and stock are done with, costing, with local funds, five and a half millions. Every one has a very good notion of what lengths of railway are open, and they are waiting on in hope of learning, by a more direct medium than Parliamentary speechification, that the public companies have water running in Orissa and Kurnool in a paying mileage of canal. The railways are something astonishing at all events; and, had canals been equally understood, it would have been the same with them. Yet the whole State outlay in India, on guaranteed enterprise, mounts up, for example, to only £386,000 a-year, or to half the grant for cutcherries and jails. When it is remembered that the burden is not permanent, but becomes impouderous after a time, no stronger argument could be produced for paying interest merely of the gross outlay on public works likely to remunerate out of current annual revenue than the tabular statements issued by Government as a matter of course.

THE BLOCK IN THE INDIAN ARMY.

The Madras Athenæum asks if we are to go on heaping up field officers until every man now on the lists of the staff corps shall have been promoted; or is any scheme in contemplation for the painless extinction of colonels under chloroform? We fear that the spirit of the age is too much opposed to this latter arrangement, which certainly in itself must look peculiarly attractive, from its extreme simplicity and easiness, as well as from its being so wonderfully cheap. But if there is no other way of getting rid of the old fellows but by buying them out, why not buy them out at once and have done with it? It will be your own fault (the "you" means the Home Government of India in the abstract) if you ever get yourselves into such a hobble again. Buy them out. The first loss is always the cheapest in the long run. What are the reasons against it? Are you afraid of establishing a precedent? But that has been done already, when the officers who retired in 1861 were bought out. That was just as much of a "precedent," if an exceptional remedy applied to an exceptional case can be called a precedent at all. The present state of affairs has been only brought about by sweeping the whole (very nearly) of the Indian army higgledy-piggledy into the staff corps, whereby two converging streams of lucky and unlucky men have been brought together to swell the ocean of field officers. When all the old Indian officers have been used up, it will be easy enough to prevent any such influx in future. You can admit your new candidates in such numbers as you deem expedient, and you can make a rule only to admit young ones (as has, indeed, already been partly determined upon. Consequently, the "precedent" need be no peril for the future. Is it the feelings of the officers of the British establishment that you are anxious to spare? The present exceptional case can hardly outrage them more than the first instalment of exceptional pensions in 1861—nor more than the present sight of men drawing good salaries for doing nothing. The things needful to be done are to relieve the finances of a useless burthen, to admit the existing captains to suitable employments, and to make room for the additional subalterns who will in a year or so become indispensably necessary. There can be of course no breach of faith with the officers who have accepted the terms offered them by H.M.'s Government, neither is there the smallest necessity that there should be. We believe that were a reasonable inducement offered once and for all, more officers would be found ready to take it and go than Government desires to get rid of. There are probably men high in the service who would gladly anticipate their off reckonings at a discount of twenty-five per cent. True, if they did not get it, they might stick on and die in the country, and so Government would save their pensions altogether; but it is equally probable that they might go home on leave, tide over the interval, and then step into the full colonel's allowances, prime specimens of that extraordinary longevity so characteristic of retired Indian generals. It would be cheaper to discount their little bills at once if they are willing to accept the ready money. Moreover, it is probable that a good number of recently promoted lieutenant-colonels might be glad to take six or seven hundred a-year to retire at once, instead of lingering on doing nothing at Rs. 827-14-0 per mensem, with little or no chance of succeeding to a command for years to come, and with eleven or twelve years to wait for their colonel's allowance. £700 a-year in England will secure a man more actual comfort than Rs. 827-14-0 a month will do in this country; especially if he has a family at home to whom he must remit the greater portion, it would be decidedly cheaper for the whole lot to live together at home on the annuity aforesaid. At the same time the difference to Government in the case of each man would be £293. 9s. immediately, to say nothing of the eventual saving in the item of colonel's allowance. The retirement of eleven such lieutenant-colonels would afford a saving of Rs. 32,284, very nearly equal to the Indian pay of twelve lieutenants! Moreover, it is not unlikely that sundry junior majors would be very glad to take five hundred a-year to retire at once, while they have still sufficient energy left in them to try new walks in life. With so handsome an annuity for certain, a man might do great things in Australia and elsewhere, provided he was not too old. Fancy a man who had just got his majority, with a family of six or seven sons growing up around him. There are such cases to be met with. Add to these a few "hard bargains" who will not or cannot "pass," a few men who "hate the country," a few men who feel that they have lost their nerve, so that anything like service is unsuitable and distasteful to them (though as far as mere living is concerned they are like enough to drag on for the next thirty years)—a few men whose private affairs make residence in England expedient, but who cannot afford to go on bare major's pension, and we think a sufficient number of volunteers for retirement may be found to bring down our list of field officers to something like rational dimensions. We would make the offer to field officers only, in the first place, but if (which is not probable) a sufficient number did not take advantage thereof, it might be extended to captains of upwards of sixteen years' service to the extent of a consolidated annuity of £350 per year. In the cases of these captains and of the majors, the saving must not be computed on their actual present receipts. The certainty of their obtaining promotion at stated periods must be considered. By buying out a captain for £350 you save not only the £100 difference on his present pay, but the difference on the major's and lieutenant-colonel's pay, to which he would certainly succeed in so many years. It must be remembered that the saving by the retirement of a Staff Corps officer is a clear saving, as his going involves no promotion of anybody else. If we have got more cats than catch mice, our best policy is to offer to each superfluous grimalkin a bowl of milk wherewith to retire comfortably to the shelf. We have to reduce the expenditure of field officers, and it is puerile to make difficulties about the name under which the reduction is effected, provided it is fair and honourable in itself. It is of course a very objectionable thing to "swell the pension list." It is of course a very objectionable thing in the abstract to give people still in the prime of life high salaries for doing nothing. But how if, by a certain swelling of the pension list, we effect a larger reduction on the effective charges? How if, by giving certain able-bodied men high salaries for doing nothing in the name of pension, we escape paying them still higher salaries for doing nothing under the name of pay?

THE RED SEA TELEGRAPH.

The Times of India holds that all that the apologists of the Indo-European line urge in its defence may be admitted, and all the prospective improvements sketched out in Colonel Goldsmid's minute of last April may be taken for granted, and yet there are irresistible arguments in favour of a submarine, and therefore entirely independent, communication between England and India in addition to the Turkish and Russian land lines. As remarked in the memorial to Sir Stafford Northcote presented on May 22, the short line across Egypt is now under British management, and could always be kept under our control, which would be physically, as well as politically, impossible with any one of the continental wires, however well those may work in ordinary times. The mercantile world are quite willing that the British and Indian Governments together should undertake the Red Sea line, and so reserve all the management and profit to the State, if that course is deemed the best; but the granting the guaranteed concessions asked for by the Anglo-Indian promoters would expedite the extension of telegraphic wires in regions where neither the Indian nor the Home Government would take them, namely, to Singapore, Siam, China, Australia, and New Zealand. It has been well urged that the promotion if not the maintenance of telegraphic communication is as much an Imperial obligation as the maintenance of postal lines. The construction of a Red Sea line is demanded by the ever-increasing requirements of the Anglo-Indian community, and by the pressing necessity, which is now only dimly felt, for popularising and cheapening, whilst raising the standard of efficiency, of all our telegraphic systems. The national importance of this is being recognised by the Indian Government in the lower tariff and other improvements which it is about to adopt in its inland telegraphic system. The Imperial Government, it is earnestly hoped, will rise to the true level in regard to this invaluable international project; but in order to do this the Indian Minister, to whose lot it falls to give the preliminary consideration to this great subject, must clear himself from the bias of all professional and personal interest.

RELEASE OF A POLITICAL PRISONER ON BAIL.

The Delhi Gazette, commenting on the order from Calcutta to release Meradeen Khan, a returned rebel, is far from asserting that the law ought never to be relaxed as regards admitting prisoners to bail for non-bailable offences. Sometimes that law presses very harshly, unnecessarily so, on accused persons, and the principle seems to us a sound one that the prosecutor should have something to say to the extent of care with which a prisoner should be guarded. But in the present case, the world that is not behind the scenes wonders why the Government of India should show such indecent interest in behalf of a political prisoner. Are the authorities at Delhi not to be trusted to give a man a fair trial? If the Government, for some reason known to themselves, wanted to favour Meradeen Khan, wanted in short to get him off, for now that he has been treated in this very marked manner by Government it will be extremely difficult to get any evidence at all against him, the end might have been accomplished in a more decent and respectable method. It is always a serious thing to push aside the law for the sake of obliging a favourite—it is a thing that should be done, when done at all, gently, with delicacy and with care. But to hold up the whole criminal law to ridicule in the city of Delhi, to blacken the faces, as the natives say, of officers holding the position of Commissioner of Delhi, and the Deputy Commissioner, before the whole district, to blazon it forth to the world as far as Swat on one side and Mecca on the other, what intrigue and jobbery can effect in India, to flash the news to the city of Delhi long, long before instructions reached the executive, that the law was in this case to be set aside, is not the way to make British rule in India respected.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS IN INDIA.—A return has been published of the number and nature of railway accidents that occurred throughout India in 1867. It appears that the total number of accidents that occurred was 201—the same as in 1866. In Bengal 74 (against 55 in 1866); in Madras 10 (against 10); and in Bombay 117 (against 136.) The number of persons killed or injured was 390 (120 more than in 1866); and the fatal cases among these numbered 182, as against 139 in the previous year. The number of injuries to passengers in 1866 was 19 (5 cases being fatal), and, in 1867, 63 (15 fatal), the increase being chiefly due to two very serious accidents in the Bombay Presidency. Twelve of these deaths resulted from accidents on the Great Indian Peninsular Railway, and the number of persons injured on the same railway was 22. Leaving aside what it considers "exceptional cases" on this railway, Government considers the result very "satisfactory," looking at the fact that there was an increase of about two millions in the number of passengers. But in regard to the railway servants, "carelessness seems to be on the increase." In 1866 there were 200 injuries, of which 92 were fatal. In 1867 the injuries were 246 in number, an increase of 26 per cent. The number of fatal cases, however, increased in a less ratio, the number being 105, the percentage of increase being 15. But in 1867 six-sevenths of the whole number of injuries are returned as due to misconduct or want of caution. In 1866 the ratio was only four-fifths. The total number of passengers carried throughout all India was 14,866,530 (against 13,142,522 in 1866); and the open mileage increased during the year from 3,408 to 3,732.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers have leave of absence for the season:—Lieut. Hewson, 49th Foot (Paymaster Chinsurah Depot), to Cashmere, from May 24 to Sept. 25; Ensign Crompton, Rifle brigade, from June 18 to Oct. 15, in extension, to visit Cashmere and adjacent hills; Major Ward, Staff Corps (2nd in command and Squadron Officer 8th Bengal Cavalry), to Mussoorie, from June 10 to Oct. 15, in extension of privilege leave; Major Hamilton, Staff, to Simla, from June 15 to Oct. 15; Lieut. Carthew (2nd Squadron Subaltern, Officiating 3rd Squadron Officer 16th Bengal Cavalry), to remain at Murree, from June 15 to Oct. 15, in extension of privilege leave; Captain Story (Adjutant 1st Ghoorka Regiment), to Calcutta, for one month, from date of departure, on medical certificate, preparatory to applying for leave to Europe on the same account; Lieut. Anderson (Adjutant 5th Bengal Cavalry), from June 18 to August 14, to remain at Murree, in extension of privilege leave; Surgeon Major Beatson, B.A. and M.D. (Medical Storekeeper, Umballa), to Simla from Nov. 10 to 30. [This cancels the leave granted Nov. 8 last.]

PROBABLE SHAPE OF THE NEW FURLOUGH RULES.

The Delhi Gazette lately gave a rough draft of these rules as they were likely to come out of the Viceregal crucible. They are near enough the mark, no doubt, to show which way the wind of change blows:—

1. 50 per cent. of the substantive salary during furlough absence allowed up to a maximum of £1,200 and a minimum of £250 a year. The salary signifies total consolidated pay, not the extra or special allowances.
2. Two years' furlough, the maximum to be taken at any one time on pay and with retention of appointment.
3. A period of three years' service after return from last furlough necessary before fresh furlough can be taken unless on medical certificate.
4. Officer eligible for two years' furlough after eight years' service; a third year after six years' service counting from date of return to duty; and a fourth and fifth year after similar intervals of six years.
5. Urgent private affairs of six months (with extension to a year, if necessary) may be granted as hitherto when the officer is not eligible to ordinary furlough, or it may form part of the period of eight years and six years mentioned in preceding clause.
6. No restriction as to places where officer may resort to during furlough.
7. Officer not entitled to furlough may obtain under medical certificate two years in first instance with extension to three years on pay, and for such further periods without pay up to a total of five years.
8. Officer entitled to furlough whose health may compel his absence from India, must take leave as furlough under 4th clause (above). Any extension of this beyond period to which, under 4th clause, he may be entitled, will be regarded as furlough on medical certificate, and such extension not allowed until entire amount be exhausted of his available furlough on private affairs.
9. Absence on medical certificate for longer than three years at one time, or departure on such furlough within three years of return from a last furlough of not less than one year, will involve forfeiture of appointment.
10. Aggregate amount of furlough, with pay and retention of appointment, whether on private affairs or on medical certificate, limited to eight years.
11. Thirty days' preparatory leave to and from port of embarkation allowed.
12. Advance of furlough pay, if desired, will continue to be made in India as hitherto, for three months from date of embarkation, the next pay in England being six months from that date.
13. Officer acting in India to be restricted to half staff salary of the office in which absentee may be acting when taking furlough, plus the full pay of his (acting officer's) rank, together with the half staff salary of his own appointment if he possess one separately.
14. Period of service and leave qualifying for pension remain unaltered. Officer eligible, as at present, to general leave on private affairs in India for six months on full pay and half staff salary.
15. Sick leave not exceeding one year (capable of extension to two years) may as at present be granted on half staff salary, plus pay of rank.
16. Short leave of three months on private affairs or on sick certificate may be taken to sea, but further absence will be treated as furlough.
17. Privilege leave of sixty days in each year without deduction of pay and emoluments may be taken as at present. General leave in extension of privilege leave can only be granted on ground of sickness or other serious emergency not foreseen. Privilege leave may, however, be converted into general leave with sanction of Commander in Chief or Government.
18. Privilege leave to officers in civil employ will be granted in accordance with civil rules. Officer free to proceed on privilege leave eastward of Cape of Good Hope, or Egypt, where he likes, provided he can ensure return before leave expires.
19. Privilege leave cannot be taken in continuation of furlough nor vice versa; if one be superadded to the other during absence, the privilege leave to be converted into general leave on half salary.
20. Officers of Indian military medical services required to notify their intention to accept these rules or to adhere to the existing rules, on the first occasion of their taking furlough after publication of the new rules. If abiding by the existing rules, the furlough will be taken on the conditions laid down in rules 7, 8, and 15 to the extent to which they may be entitled under the furlough regulations of 1854, and on the rates of pay therein indicated, but retaining their appointments. The principle laid down in rule 14 must however be applied in those cases.

IS IT TRUE?—The Home Government have called for explanations from the Indian Government in the case of several officers who have been reported for neglecting to provide for the support of their children at home.—Englishman.

DEATH FROM CHOLERA.—The Jubbulpore Chronicle announces the death from cholera, on the 5th June, of Ensign H. C. Cox, of H.M.'s 2 12th Regiment. The deceased officer attended the theatre the previous evening in apparently good health, but twenty-four hours after he was laid in his grave. The deceased, who was very young, had but just joined the corps.

THE DELHI RAILWAY.—Meerut letters convey the satisfactory intimation, on which we are told we may rely with confidence, that the Delhi railway line will be opened for traffic from Meerut to Umballa at one stretch, on or about January 1, 1869, and that there will be nothing to prevent the section between Umballa and Loodiana being opened by the end of March of the same year.—Delhi Gazette.

TRAFFIC ON THE EAST INDIA RAILWAY.—Earnings of the week ending May 31, 1868, £39,365. 5s. Corresponding week last year, £41,454. 2s. 8d. Decrease, £2,088. 17s. 8d. Money, Wing Officer, to officiate as 2nd in Command and Wing Officer; Lieutenant and Adjutant C. McK. Hall to officiate as Wing Officer; Lieutenant and Quartermaster P. W. Smith, to officiate as Adjutant; Lieutenant W. F. S. Perry, 1st Wing Subaltern, to officiate as Quartermaster.

DEATH OF MR. MOULTRIE.—It is with deep regret we have to announce the death by accident of Mr. Moultrie, Accountant, Bank of Bengal, Nagpore. This gentleman had just arrived in the station, and at an auction had purchased a horse, which, on first trial, bolted away with him into a neighbouring bazaar; there he fell violently against a mud wall, bringing down a large portion of it on the prostrate rider, causing severe injury to his spine and consequent paralysis of the lower extremities, and concussion of the brain, which resulted in death within 24 hours.—Central India Times.

THE ENGINEER DEPARTMENT.—The following promotions are made with effect from March 1:—To executive engineer, 3rd grade, Mr. F. L. O'Callaghan, executive engineer, 4th grade, Central Provinces. To assistant-engineer, 1st grade, Mr. J. T. Fergusson, assistant-engineer, 2nd grade, Central India; Lieut. A. C. B. Wither, general list, Infantry, assistant-engineer, 2nd grade, Central Provinces; Mr. C. W. Hope, executive engineer, 4th grade, Arracan division, British Burmah, is promoted, with local rank only, to the 3rd grade, with effect from March 1, 1868.

MAGISTERIAL POWERS.—The undermentioned officers are invested in the Criminal Department with the powers of a magistrate, and with full powers in the Civil and Revenue Departments from the 1st of June:—Mr. E. H. Harrison, Lieutenant A. S. Roberts, and Mr. T. O. Wilkinson, Assistant Commissioners. The undermentioned officers are invested in the Criminal Department with the powers of Subordinate Magistrate of the 1st class, and with special powers in the Civil and Revenue Departments:—Lieutenants H. J. Lawrence, G. E. Macpherson, G. C. Napier, H. M. M. Wood, T. J. C. Plowden, and C. E. Macaulay, Assistant Commissioners; Yar Muhammad, Mr. E. W. Garbett, and Zulfiqar Ali, Extra Assistant Commissioners; and Nand Lal, Officiating Assistant Commissioner.

PAY OF THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—In modification of previous rules, it is notified for information the Government has decided that medical officers of mounted regiments, when on leave, whether on private affairs or on medical certificate, if in receipt of Indian allowances shall continue to receive the horse allowance of their rank provided they keep up their chargers, and no extra charge is incurred by the appointment of officers to perform their duties during their absence.

MOVEMENTS OF OFFICERS.—The Commander-in-Chief is pleased to direct the following movements of officers of the Judge Advocate-general's department:—Lieut.-colonel J. N. Young, Staff Corps, now on sick leave in Europe, is transferred to the Presidency division and Eastern frontier district; Major C. F. Browne, Staff Corps, recently returned from sick leave to Europe, is posted to the Lahore division. Lieut. E. H. Curtis, general list, Cavalry, attached to the 7th Bengal Cavalry, is appointed interpreter to the 2nd battalion 12th Foot, and directed to join.

THE NEW FURLOUGH RULES.—The Pioneer says that Mr. Lushington's severe illness, which attacked him almost immediately on his arrival at Simla, and has hardly yet released him, has had some effect in retarding the publication of the new leave rules. They cannot, however, now be long delayed. In the meanwhile we are glad to say that one of the clauses, for the safety of which most anxiety was felt, has passed unscathed through the ordeal—the clause, namely which allows two years' furlough to be taken on half pay without loss of appointment.

THE BHAMO EXPEDITION.—Letters dated 28th April have been received at Rangoon from Captain Sladen. He had been detained (by the orders of the Shan States), till then at Pensee, about five marches from Bhamo, on account of the roads being infested by Chinese marauders. Further on he communicated with the officers of the Panthay Government, who replied in the most friendly terms urging him to come on. They had also sent an escort for him. Captain Sladen expected to be able to move forward at once. Captain Williams and Mr. Stewart are returning to Rangoon, and have already passed Mandalay.

THE RECLAMATION OF THE SALT-WATER LAKES.—It would appear that there is a possibility of the scheme for the reclamation of the salt-water lakes being carried out. Mr. Dowle has been pushing the scheme during his absence in England; and the project is well thought of and may be proceeded with, providing the original concessions are confirmed. Application has been made to the justices to ascertain this, requesting an early answer. Certainly matters and opinions have somewhat changed as regards reclamation schemes since 1865. But if the salt-lake scheme were sound and desirable then it cannot be less so now, and on the score of sanitary improvement for the city we shall not be sorry to see the work soberly prosecuted in a different spirit to that of three years ago.—Indian Daily News.

DEATH OF COLONEL CAUTLEY.—It is with feelings of deep regret that we (Jubbulpore Chronicle) record the death of Colonel R. Cautley, which melancholy event occurred on Wednesday, 3rd June. The deceased was buried with military honours on Thursday morning, in the presence of a large number of the residents of the station. By the colonel's death Jubbulpore has lost one of its most esteemed members of society, a man whose heart was undoubtedly in the right place, and who, by his uprightness, had gained the esteem of all classes of Europeans and natives who knew him. The gallant officer entered the service in 1825, and was appointed to the 10th Bengal Cavalry. He served with Sir G. Pollock's force in the advance on Cabul, and was present at the battle of Maharajpore. For his services at Maharajpore he received a brevet majority.

THE EMPLOYMENT OF NATIVES.—Our native friends will be glad to learn that Sir Donald Macleod has submitted a scheme for the more extensive employment of natives, and in superior administrative grades, for the consideration and approval of the Government of India. Sir Donald proposes that the grade of Extra Assistant Commissioner shall be abolished throughout the Punjab territories, and the next superior grade, that of Assistant Commissioner, doubled in number so as to admit of a number of eligible natives of the necessary status and qualifications. The scheme has been referred by the Government of India for the opinion of the various minor Governments which have been requested to report on its applicability or otherwise to their respective dominions.—Indian Daily News.

SLATE QUARRIES AT CHUMBA.—With reference to a recent statement concerning the contemplated purchase by Government of the Chumba slate quarries, the Delhi Gazette hears from Dalhousie that they will not be at the disposal of the Rajah for some six years, in consequence of a contract his Highness entered into with a Mr. Macgriffin, who has been induced to transfer his privileges, at a considerable premium, to Captain J. P. Turton, of the 4th Goorkhas, at the neighbouring station at Bukloh. The Gazette hopes Captain Turton may be successful in his speculation, but with the Government quarry already established in the neighbourhood and the flourishing Slate Company at Dhurmsala, so much nearer the plains, it comes before us at a disadvantage, and would certainly appear a most improbable purchase for the Government of India to entertain.

CHOLERA AT NAGPORE.—A few cases of cholera have occurred in the city within the last week, but we are glad to say that the disease is in a mild form, and most of those attacked have recovered.—Central India Times, June 6.

THE NAGPORE CO-OPERATIVE STORE.—The co-operative store started a few months since may now be considered a decided success. The articles distributed to its members are of undoubted good quality, and the rates are one-fourth less than those obtaining at the shops in Seetabuldee. We commend this institution to our readers as one deserving of support, and we feel it our duty to remind those who have not yet joined it that the share-list closes on the 30th of June.—Central India Times.

EXAMINATIONS.—In continuation of the separate notification of June 1, published in the Calcutta Gazette of June 3, the following officers are declared to have partially passed by the higher standard of examination, subject to a further examination in the remaining subjects:—Lieut. Peet, Judicial officer, passed in Law, still subject to examination in Bengali and Assamese; Mr. Wroughton, police officer, passed in Urdu, still subject to examination in Law and Bengali. The Committee of Examiners have certified that at the examinations held on the 26th May last, the following gentlemen have passed examinations qualifying them for admission into the Subordinate Executive Service, viz.:—Messrs. Hand, Bailey, Beames, Roberts, Miller, Reily, Williamson, Martin, Hamilton, Middleton, Johnston, Ferris. The undermentioned officers are reported to have passed in the lower standard in Hindoostanee on the 4th inst.:—Lieut. Trotter, 93rd Foot; Lieut. Price and Ensign Heathcote, 103rd Foot.

STATE OF THINGS IN AFGHANISTAN.—No authenticated intelligence has been received during the week from Afghanistan and Central Asia. Shere Ali's party seem to be slow in following up their late successes, and there is a general feeling that Balkh will be invaded before Cabul. The attitude of Abdul Ruhman Khan is as undecided as ever; and the conflicting views and motives ascribed to him by the Cabul newswriters render it in the highest degree impossible to predict what policy he will adopt in the coming campaign. There can be no doubt that Abdul Ruhman wishes to temporise with both parties as long as he can, and that he would have no objection to wait on the heights of Balkh until his uncles mutually destroy each other, and then descend and seize upon the throne of his grandfather. It would however be a most difficult course for Abdul Ruhman to maintain a position of entire neutrality in Balkh, as Shere Ali's influence is still very great among the Turkistanee Sardars, who have been alienated from the Cabul party by the rigorous government with which Abdul Ruhman commenced his reign in that province. The most improbable rumours are in circulation of a tripartite alliance between Shere Ali, the Shah of Persia, and the Russian Generals; and the Cabul newswriters profess to be able to state to a rupee the subsidies by which the two latter Powers are to assist the ex-Ameer in rescating himself upon the guddee of Afghanistan.—Friend of India.

COTTON IN CENTRAL INDIA.—The report from the Cotton Commissioner of the Berars and Central Provinces for the fortnight ending May 30th—which within a very few days may be regarded as the close of the season—affords opportunity for an almost exact comparison of the exportable yield of the Central Indian cotton field this year and last. Up to the end of May, 1867, there were sent by rail to Bombay from all those districts a total of 212,830 bales; the quantity sent by bullock cart was not then ascertained. This year Mr. Rivett-Carnac has secured a return of the quantity leaving by cart—namely, 8,210 bales; these added to the railway export, 181,866 bales, show a total of 190,076, being 22,754 bales less than last year; but the Commissioner considered that there might still be cotton got off before the monsoon, which would bring up the year's export from that field to 200,000 bales, being very little short of last year's large supply. Rain had fallen, and the ryots were busy preparing their land for sowing. From the Dharwar cotton field the staple had been sent off much more rapidly than in former seasons, owing mainly to increased facilities being provided at the port of Carwar. Full half of the current season's yield would be at Carwar, if not shipped before the rains set in, and yet this activity has been in spite of the wretched state of the ghaut road, the bridges of which are reported to have been gradually breaking down as the season advanced. Nothing whatever appears to have been done during the last few months to improve, or even to repair this road, although soon after last monsoon the Government of Bombay passed a resolution devoting funds for the purpose. What Dharwar needs is European agencies on the spot, but they cannot be established there whilst there is not even a good cart road to the coast.—Times of India.

THE CALCUTTA AND SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY.—The Government have at last determined how they will work the Calcutta and South-Eastern Railway, which they purchased from the shareholders and took possession of on April 1. It is to be worked by the Eastern Bengal Railway Company, who assumed charge of it last Monday, and as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made—probably by the 1st proximo—the trains to and from Canning will run into and out of the Eastern Bengal Railway Station at Sealdah. Mr. Prestage has undertaken to conduct the traffic with his own staff, at the actual cost, plus an allowance to his officers, for supervision. Government at first intended retaining the railway in their own hands, and, upon the resignation of Mr. Shanks, some two months ago, they tried, but unsuccessfully, to obtain an engineer from the East India Railway to act as manager on their behalf. Failing in this, they determined on handing it over to the Eastern Bengal Railway. On Saturday last some of the Government officials, accompanied by the officer of the Calcutta and South-Eastern Railway, and heads of departments of the Eastern Bengal Railway, proceeded to Canning, with the view of inspecting the line before the transfer took place. In returning from the Mutlah the party stopped a few minutes to examine the bridge at the Pallee, which has lately been causing a little trouble. It is understood that the arrangement for working the line, as above detailed, is not absolutely a permanent one; for the Government of India reserves to itself the option of handing over the railway to an independent company, should one be formed, to carry out the proposed wet dock scheme, and to construct the bridge over the Hooghly, neither the East India or the Eastern Bengal Railway Companies seeming in a hurry to take any steps towards attaining that desirable and long talked of object.—Englishman, June 10.

THE VERDICT ON MASTER PILOT VAUGHAN.—The verdict of the Marine Court, in the case of Master Pilot Vaughan, for the loss of the Agamemnon and Ethel, has formed the subject of very severe stricture on the part of the master attendant, who considers that the defendant showed unskillfulness, "first, in casting off the Celerity before he had got his ship into a good berth for anchoring; second, in having allowed his vessel to drop down to a position where he, as a pilot, ought to have known there was no anchorage for her; and third, in not letting go his anchor when abreast of the Ethel, and at the furthest distance from her, by which means he might have brought up as a temporary measure, and have either made sail on the ship, or got the Celerity ahead again to conduct her against the tide to anchorage above the Ethel, where alone anchorage was to be found for the Agamemnon." This view of the case the master attendant submitted to the Lieutenant-governor, with a strong recommendation that his Honour should not accord his approval to the finding of the jury. The Lieutenant-governor has expressed his entire concurrence in Captain Reddie's feeling of dissatisfaction with the finding of the Court, and, in order that the Government may not be supposed to acquiesce in the propriety of Mr. Vaughan's acquittal on the charge of unskillfulness, has directed the publication of the report and his reply thereto. He appears however to have abstained from following the example of the late Lieutenant-Governor, in a similar case, by indicting extra judicial punishment on the pilot, a course which, whatever may be thought of the merits of the case, is fully in accordance with those English principles of justice and fair play, which, we cannot but think, are, on the whole, as expedient as they are generous.—Englishman.

WITCHCRAFT AMONG THE BRINJARRAS.

A very interesting paper has been recently drawn up by Lieutenant Lane, Superintendent of Police of the Oomrawuttee District, on the north-west boundary of the Nizam's territories, on the custom of the Brinjarra tribes with regard to witchcraft, and the information he gives on the subject is rendered very complete by the fact that an opportunity was afforded him of practically testing the reliability of the facts he elicited in a case which came under his own notice, and of which he gives the particulars. The Brinjaras, it is well known, are a wandering race, the grain-carriers of India, "tandas," or gangs of whom are continually on the move, with droves of pack bullocks conveying produce. On a woman of the tribe being suspected of being a witch or "dakan," the man who believes himself to be injured by her resorts to a "bhugut," or person who professes, and is believed to be endowed with powers of divination in cases of this kind, and from the bhugut, to whom he privately communicates the name of the suspected party, he seeks confirmation of his suspicions. Then comes the test which, contrary to the practice formerly in vogue in England and Scotland, in those "good old times" to which we have referred, is not applied to the suspected witch but to the consulted bhugut, to ascertain the value of his divining powers. For this purpose a pregnant goat is produced, the bhugut is called upon to say whether the young one is a male or female, and if he is bold he sometimes predicts that there will be certain marks upon it. If this test was final the unhappy dakan would stand about an equal chance of acquittal as of conviction; but it is not so. The goat is killed and immediately cut open; then if the bhugut's prediction is verified he, being in possession of all the needful information, at once names the accused female, his dictum is deemed conclusive, the doom of the alleged dakan is pronounced, and the husband is bound to carry out the sentence, in accordance with the Brinjarra law, and to strangle his wife to death. On the other hand, if the bhugut's prediction fails to come true, there is still no escape for the woman, for other oracles are resorted to till one is found whose predictions regarding the unborn kid come to pass, and his condemnation of the suspected witch follows as a matter of course. It is certain that amongst the Brinjaras the prescribed punishment for witchcraft is death, and that to this day it is frequently carried out when the gang to which the delinquent belongs is located in a wild country, or when, in its wanderings, it passes beyond British territory. But the terror of the penal code preserves many who would otherwise be victims to this and other superstitions, such as suttee. When the husband-executioner becomes alarmed lest retributive justice should overtake himself, he has to submit to a heavy fine in default of carrying out the fatal decree; and such was the result in the case which Lieutenant Lane reports as having come under his own notice in the beginning of the present year.

The following embraces all the facts of the case. A Brinjarra, named Roopa, whose gang is settled near Tulleygaon, in the Oomrawuttee district, lost his wife about two years ago, and about a month afterwards his son, represented as a particularly handsome boy, died. Then came an interval of about nineteen months, when Roopa's younger brother died, and three days afterwards his father died too. This aroused in Roopa's mind suspicion of witchcraft, and he denounced the wife of a fellow Brinjarra named Luchma to her husband. Upon this the two men, Luchma and Roopa, repaired to a bhugut named Khema to consult him in the matter. This impostor was held, it appears, in such high estimation that he was not subjected to the usual test, and upon being questioned as to who was the witch, he named Luchma's wife, and then killed a he-goat and drank its blood. Luchma, however, on returning home decided in his own mind that the proof of his wife's delinquency was insufficient, and he took no steps towards carrying out the dread sentence, and on being called to account for this by Luchma some fifteen days afterwards he disclaimed all belief in Khema, the bhugut, and proposed to consult another oracle—a bhugut of great reputation in Goozerat. This was agreed to, and Luchma set out with another Brinjarra named Lalla for Goozerat, but had to return without finding the bhugut. On this, "a punch," or jury, of Brinjaras was called together, and because Luchma had not killed his wife his property was confiscated. Sixteen of his bullocks were given to Roopa to repay him for the expenses incurred during the illness of his relations, and the cost of keeping the "punch" in food and liquor. Five bullocks were awarded to Lalla, in payment of Rs. 25 for which he had contracted, as remuneration for accompanying Luchma to Goozerat, and the unhappy Luchma himself was left penniless and in debt to his banker, with no means of paying but by personal labour. On these facts Roopa was sent up by the police for trial on a charge of theft, but was discharged by the magistrate. Lieutenant Lane concludes his narrative by expressing a belief that Luchma would get back his property if he killed his wife.

The bhugut, or diviner, will be perceived to play a very important part in these witchcraft tragedies, which are enacted so secretly and under circumstances so favourable to the perpetrators of the crime as to be, in the majority of cases, very difficult of detection. In this they differ materially from the suttee superstition, in which the local habitation of the actors is permanent and affords a means of tracing out the accessories to the crime; whereas, the strangling of a denounced "dakan" can be conveniently carried out while her tanda or gang is on the march in some lonely spot, and the authorities of the district have no means of acquiring information of the deed, since the gipsy-like habits of the Brinjarras would probably prevent any member of the tanda turning traitor, while it is very unlikely that the absence of the murdered woman from the tanda would be observed by others. Besides, she too knows nothing of her condemnation till the moment for her strangulation arrives. Reputed bhuguts, then, are well worthy of being placed under special surveillance. Lieutenant Lane's investigations lead to the conclusion that they are a totally distinct class of persons from the gooroos, or priests, one of whom every Brinjarra is supposed to adopt at some period of his life as his religious instructor or confessor, and the man who does not become the disciple of some gooroo is considered disreputable, and incurs the reproach of his fellows. The bhugut's functions, on the other hand, are of a special character as an adept at divination. He is too a Brinjarra, while Lieutenant Lane has ascertained that a gooroo is generally a Gosain or Byragee, and is seldom if ever a Brinjarra, and he thinks that the distinctive characteristics of bhugut and the gooroo have not hitherto been well defined.—Madras Athenæum.

Miscellaneous.

MADRAS STAFF CORPS—The following promotions are made, subject to her Majesty's approval:—To be majors, from June 9, 1868, having completed twenty years' service—Captain W. H. Greenwell Palmer, Captain Theophilus Leslie Scott, and Captain W. Hands.

SYKE'S JERVIS AND NORTH (MADRAS) TESTIMONIAL FUND—The Madras Times has been requested to again state that this fund will close on June 30, after which date no further subscriptions will be received. Major Rowland Farrer has recently received Rs. 25 from Lieut. G. S. Keth, 35th Regt. N.I. The total receipt up to June 1 amounted to Rs. 2,526. So much for the gratitude of the Madras officers for benefits received.

MOVEMENTS OF THE GOVERNOR—Lord Napier proceeded with Lady Napier to Coonoor on Wednesday last, and returned to the Presidency yesterday. He contemplates, it is said, remaining in Madras until the end of this month, and then visiting the Pulney Hills, in the Madura district. All apprehension of famine having been removed by the recent fall of rain, there is nothing of special importance occupying the attention of the Government.—Madras Times, June 11.

ARRIVALS FROM FURLOUGH—The undermentioned officers have returned to their duty, by permission of the Home Government, without prejudice to their rank:—Captain A. R. Kenny, Cavalry general list; Lieut. E. P. Maltby, Infantry general list, officiating assistant-superintendent Mysore commission: arrived at Madras on June 5.—Captain C. J. Jennings, Staff Corps, arrived at Madras on June 8.

MASULAH BOATS—The effects of the damage to the pier on Saturday evening last are already making themselves felt. Since the pier has been rendered useless there is a great demand for masulah boats, the boatmen asking most exorbitant hire for ordinary trips. A boat which used to cost two and a-half rupees to carry eight bales of cotton was yesterday charged at ten rupees. The total number of masulah boats at the port is 164, and they are capable of carrying about two tons each per trip. Besides these there are the three iron boats recently imported, and about thirty coast boats of various sizes. The actual carrying capacity of the boats now available at the port may be put down at about 760 tons. There are nearly 100 vessels, including native craft, now in the roads.—Madras Times, June 6.

COTTON—The cotton exports from the Berars and Central Provinces for the fortnight ending 16th May amounted to 754 full-pressed bales, 10,177 half-pressed bales, 3,719 dokras; or, in all, about 4,390 can lies of cotton; making the total exports from these provinces by railway this season about 87,908 candies. This is still considerably below last season's exports, which up to the 16th of May, 1867, had amounted to 103,379 candies. The exports by railway for the corresponding fortnight last season consisted of 120 full-pressed bales, 1,355 half-pressed bales, and 16,235 dokras. Last year the season closed early in April, whilst during the last fortnight at Khamgaon alone upwards of 4,000 bhojahs or 1,300 candies have been brought to market and at Shegaon, Akote, and Oomrawuttee also, the supply, considering the time of the year, has been large.

"BETTER LATE THAN NEVER."—The official community of Seetabuldee entertained Mr. Malcolm Low at a public dinner on June 11, on his transfer to the Commissionership of the Nerbudda division.

THE NEW VICAR APOSTOLIC OF MADRAS—We learn with pleasure that a telegram was received yesterday from Ireland intimating that his Holiness the Pope has been pleased to nominate the Very Rev. Dr. S. Fennelly to succeed his late brother as Vicar Apostolic of Madras. A selection more acceptable to the members of the Roman Catholic Church in the Madras vicariate could not have been made. The consecration of the new bishop will, we imagine, be made in Madras, but it cannot be for some weeks hence—that is, until the Pope's Bull and Patent of Canonisation are received in India.—Athenæum.

COCHIN—We have before us the annual report of the Administration of Cochin, the most striking part of which is the financial statement. The revenue raised, with a population of about four lakhs, is Rs. 10,79,711, a proportion agreeing pretty closely with that which obtains between the revenue and population of British India. When, however, we come to look at the expenditure, we shall find a remarkable contrast. Upwards of Rs. 1,60,000, or about 15 per cent. of the entire revenue, is laid out on public works, and about 9 per cent. of the revenue on religious and charitable works, while there is a balance of more than 5 per cent. The military expenditure, on the other hand, is less than Rs. 20,000. Nothing could show more forcibly than these figures how enormous is the advantage enjoyed by States like Cochin, in living under the protectorate of the British Government. For this advantage Cochin pays a contribution of two lakhs, it is true; but the protectorate is cheap at the price.—Englishman.

THE LICENSE TAX—The Government have ruled that in accordance with the terms of Act IX. of 1888, an Act for taxing professions and trades, a deduction of 1 per cent. will be made from the pay of all Government officials at this Presidency, for the month of May last and ensuing months of the present official year, and that the following officers are exempted from the operation of this Act:—II. Officers of any police force, whose pay and allowances do not exceed Rupees 6,000 per annum. III. All officers of Government, whose pay does not amount to Rs. 1,000 per annum, or Rs. 83-5-4 per mensem. The Government have further added that, if any servant of theirs has insured his life or that of his wife, he will be entitled, on proving to the satisfaction of Government, to a refund of the tax to the amount of any payment made on account of such insurance during the year of assessment. Such refunds will be made only in cases where both payments on account of insurance together with the fund subscriptions when deducted from the salary does not exceed 10 per cent. of the full salary, and if it does exceed 10 per cent. refund will be disallowed on the excess. Under the above Act no deduction from the Imperial Tax on account of municipal taxes is admissible.

ACCIDENT TO THE MADRAS PIER—On June 6 the French barque Saint Bernard, of 359 tons burden, was stranded in our Roads, but instead of remaining fixed where she struck, she drifted on the side of the pier, and her stern came into collision with the screw piles, at about 700 feet from the shore, and snapped off two of them with the first shock. The stern of the vessel was also smashed very considerably. Having once got alongside the pier the ship never left it again. Every fresh wave brought her with a thud against the piles which made the whole pier tremble; and every few minutes there were sounds of the iron work of the pier giving way and of the timbers of the ship crashing from the effects of these tremendous concussions. The ship in fact bore her way right through the forest of piles and cross bars, and thus undermined the pier itself, till the flooring, which has only recently been renewed at a considerable expense, fell in with a crash. The head of the pier now stands like a solitary island between the shipping and the shore; and the intermediate space which a few days ago was studded with about 100 iron screw piles, braced together by numerous strong cross bars, and surmounted by rafters and flooring, has been swept as clear of all these things as if they had been so much wicker-work. The Government are understood to have telegraphed to England for the materials needed in the repair of the structure, and an ad interim suspension chain bridge is talked of.—Madras Times.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE IN TRANQUEBAR—Accounts from Tranquebar continue to be of so unfavourable a nature, and the excitement in and around the town is so great, that we almost regret his Excellency the Governor has not, instead of going to the Neilgherries, started on a flying tour down south. Eight appeals against the decisions of Mr. Elliott, the Acting Judge, were before the High Court, and several others are coming up. We learn that the Government have requested the High Court to state whether the judgments of the Tranquebar Court—most of which we have already referred to—have come before them, and, if so, what action they have taken in the matter. The judges have in reply submitted a report, the tenor of which has as yet not transpired. The Government have also, in reply to their order, received a list from Mr. Elliott of the officials whom in his capacity as Civil and Session Judge he has suspended or dismissed the service. The Commissioner, Mr. Morris, lately deputed by Government to inquire into one special case of wrongful confinement, has forwarded his report.

which, to a great extent, exonerates Mr. Elliott from blame. This result was not anticipated in Tranquebar; and the complainant in the case is petitioning the Government for further investigation by an official unconnected with the district. How far the complainant has justice on his side we are not in a position to judge; all we now would remark is, that the administration of justice in Tranquebar has caused so much alarm and bad feeling in the neighbourhood, that it is the positive duty of the Government to appoint some competent official, whose impartiality cannot by any possibility be questioned by intelligent natives—such as are most of the present complainants—to institute a searching inquiry in the more prominent of the appeals against Mr. Elliott's judgments.—Madras Times.

THE COTTON MARKET.—The cotton market during the week has been quieter than for some time past, as buyers have kept out of the market, and dealers, having rather heavy contracts on hand, have not been at all anxious to sell. During the last few days however they have come down in their demands, and some few hundred bales have changed hands at Rs. 126 and 127, but buyers do not seem inclined to purchase to any extent even at these rates, so it is expected that we shall see lower prices in the course of a few days; the present quotation for Westerns may be taken at Rs. 126-125 per candy of 500 lbs. Tinnevely cotton has declined, and during the past week there have been transactions at Rs. 139 per candy on board. The exports show a slight increase for the year ending May 1 against same time last year. At Cocanada the market has been rather more active, and there have been sales at Rs. 117 and 117½ per candy for delivery in five to six weeks. Piece goods are in about the same state as a week ago; sales to a rather greater extent have been made, but only at a further reduction in price; dealers buy with the greatest caution, and only for actual consumption; the prospect of the market is very unfavourable, and we have no encouragement from either Calcutta or Bombay, where prices continue to decline. The rain which has fallen in the districts so generally may do some good by causing a fall in the price of grain, which ought to react favourably on piece goods. The present quotations are:—8½ lbs. Grey Shirtings, Rs. 6-10 to Rs. 6-12; 7 lbs. Grey Shirtings, Rs. 5-12; 40s. Mule Twist, Rs. 3-10 to Rs. 3-12. Freights continue to give way, and with the present available tonnage we cannot expect anything but a still further decline. The rates quoted to-day are:—Cotton to London, £4; light freight to London, £5 to £5.5s.; Coffee to London, £2.17s. 6d.; Cotton to Liverpool, £4 to £4.5s. At Tuticorin Cotton has been taken at £3. Exchange is lower, and the tendency is still that way. To-day's quotations are:—Bank Bills, six months' sight, 1s. 11½d.; Credits, six months' sight, 1s. 11½d.; Document Bills, six months' sight, 2s. to 2s. ½d.

OPENING OF THE BANK OF BOMBAY COMMISSION.

On Wednesday last the Commission of Inquiry into the causes and circumstances of the inability of the Bank of Bombay to pay its debts, held its first sitting in public in the Durbar room, Town-hall. The body of the room had been filled with chairs for the accommodation of the public, but only six persons were present—the Hon. G. Foggo, the Hon. Alexander Brown, Mr. John Stuart, and two other Europeans and a Parsee.

The proceedings were opened by Mr. F. D. Chauntrell, Secretary to the Commission, who read the document appointing the commissioners to inquire into the causes and circumstances of the winding-up of the old bank.

The President: The commission having been read, I would make a few observations as to the proceedings which have been already taken under it, and as to the course which the Commission intends to pursue. First as to the proceedings which have been already taken under it. As soon as it was decided that there should be a Commission, the Secretary of State for India issued two notices. The first was addressed to Mr. Low, the secretary to a committee of shareholders in London who had already presented two memorials to the Secretary of State. This letter informs him that the Secretary of State considered it necessary to institute a full and searching inquiry into the causes and circumstances which led to and attended the recent catastrophe of the Bank of Bombay. It then mentioned the appointment of a president of the Commission, who, it intimated, was going to Bombay by next mail steamer. The letter concludes with these words:—

As in the memorial from certain shareholders of the Bank of Bombay, forwarded by you to the Secretary of State for India in Council on the 2nd ult., serious charges of corruption were made against the Government directors of the bank, I am directed to request that you will inform the shareholders of the appointment of this commission, in order that they may take such steps as they may consider necessary for substantiating the charges above referred to.

The other notice from the Secretary of State was to all the directors in England and elsewhere whose addresses were known, and I have ascertained that care has since been taken to get the addresses of the others. That letter also said it had been considered necessary to appoint a commission to inquire into the causes and circumstances which led to and attended the recent failure, and intimated that a president had been appointed, and that the inquiry would probably commence immediately after his arrival, and be proceeded with without delay. The letter then says:—

I am also directed to forward to you the accompanying copy of a memorial addressed to the Secretary of State by certain shareholders of the Bank of Bombay, and to draw your attention to paragraphs 29 and 69, in which serious charges are preferred against the Government directors.

As the inquiry will relate to transactions of the bank for the period during which you were a Government director, I am directed to make this communication to you, in order that you may take any steps which you may consider necessary, with a view to your being personally present or being represented at that inquiry.

Notwithstanding these notices, if the public prints are to be credited, the shareholders who presented this memorial do not intend to be present at this investigation, and I have not yet received any assurance of any assistance from the directors. Under these circumstances it is obvious the inquiry differs considerably from a legal proceeding in which the plaintiff and defendant each prepares his own evidence and lays it before the judge. In this case it is the duty of the Commissioners themselves to search for the evidence and to ascertain what witnesses are capable of giving evidence as to the several transactions. It is plainly impossible for the Commissioners to examine witnesses as to facts of which they know nothing, or to call witnesses of whom they have never heard; therefore, that being the state of the case, the Commissioners resolved directly after their arrival that they would commence this inquiry by instituting a rigid examination into all the books, papers, documents, and correspondence of the bank, so as to get a complete view of the surrounding circumstances of the case. Well, we commenced that inquiry on June 1, but it will be obvious to every one that it is an inquiry which will require a great deal of time to complete. There are upwards of 200 loan transactions, and the documents relating to them are very voluminous. Under these circumstances the Commissioners think the course for it to pursue is to adjourn this inquiry till Monday the 29th inst., when they hope they will be able to prosecute it with effect. On that day they propose to commence the oral examination of witnesses. The evidence will be taken publicly, and we hope to conduct it continuously as far as possible, with no unnecessary delay. I have only one other observation to make, and that is that the Commissioners are earnestly desirous to elicit the truth in these transactions, and that if any person has any information to give, his right course is to address himself to Mr. Chauntrell, the Secretary to the Commission, stating shortly the subject on which he wishes to be examined, and we will take care that when the time comes when these transactions are considered he shall be called. At present, therefore, we do no more than adjourn.

The Hon. Mr. Foggo: May I be allowed to say one word?

The President: May I ask who you are?

Mr. Foggo: I am Mr. Foggo, who was a director in 1863. The only remark that I have to make is to inform the Commission that in consequence of the receipt of a letter from the Chief Secretary to Government in the Financial Department on May 30, I addressed a letter requesting to be examined by the Commission.

The President: Yes, we have seen it.

Mr. Foggo: And I merely wish now to make a formal repetition of that request before the Commission.

The President: We shall certainly call you as a witness. I may add that if there should be any person leaving the country or presidency—any person whom we should hear as a witness—we shall appoint a special day for his examination—though that is not likely to occur. At present, then, the Commission is adjourned till Monday, the 29th inst.

The Commission then adjourned.

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, May 30.—There is at last some prospect of the commencement of the Sind Railway Extension line to Mooltan, and it is time really that it was begun, which it would have been more than a full twelvemonth ago, when the survey was completed by a staff of civil engineers got out from England expressly for the purpose, had it not been (at least so the general impression is) for the misrepresentations made by the then Deputy-Consulting Engineer for Railways in Sind to the Government. The line will soon be commenced, it having been decided to run it along the right bank of the Indus; and the "missing link," as it has all along been termed, once completed, Kurrachee, or I should say Sind, will be second to no province on this side of India. The route fixed upon is by far the better one of the two surveyed, as the company will learn in a few years. The country right through is not only richer, but affords better facilities for the preservation of a line of rails which by its proximity to the flourishing towns of Shikapoor, and the military station of Jacobabad will secure the trade of Afghanistan which now passes through those places, and command also the great river traffic at Sukkur. But I need go into no further detail to indicate the advantages to be derived by this route, for the subject has already been ventilated by better heads. There is great cause for dissatisfaction with the manner in which the time table is arranged for the running of trains between this and Kotree. I have noticed that from the very beginning the company, or the Government under whose orders it is said to act, has never shown a proper consideration for the comfort of passengers—the great want of which you will readily imagine when I say that it has always been the practice to run the passenger train in the day during the hot months, and at nights during the winter, instead of reversing the order of things, which surely could not entail a greater cost upon the company. The heat all along the line is something frightful in the day just now, and in the winter the nights are so bitter cold that travelling then, if anything, is even worse than day travelling in the summer. The local papers are in favour of the change desired by all classes, and it is to be hoped that they will not let the matter rest till they effect it.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

VIOLENT STORM AT BOMBAY.—A violent thunderstorm, accompanied with rain, passed over Bombay about three o'clock on the morning of June 7, and another storm of still greater violence the same afternoon, the fall of rain being unusually heavy. Both storms travelled from east to west. During the storm in the afternoon the ship Theodor Knoop was struck by lightning. The ball at the foremost head was split in half, and about ten feet of the spar carrying it was shattered. Fortunately the flash did no further damage; the chief officer observed it run down the mast, and rebound from a house on deck into the sea.—Friend of India.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

THE SUBORDINATE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT OF H.M.'S INDIAN SERVICE.

June 5.—No. 550.—With the sanction of H.M.'s Government, H.E. the Governor general in Council is pleased to authorise certain modifications in the organisation of the subordinate medical department in H.M.'s Indian service, and to lay down a revised and enhanced scale of pay and pensions for that department.

2. The system heretofore existing in the Bengal and Bombay Presidencies, under which the purveying duties were performed by the medical subordinates, will cease; and these duties will be undertaken, as has heretofore been the practice in the Madras Presidency, by the commissariat department, through the agency of a body of hospital purveyors.

3. The grade of hospital steward, which was constituted for these purveying duties, will be abolished. All the existing members of that grade, who have passed or may be able within six months to pass the examination to qualify them for the grade of apothecary, will be admitted into the latter grade if they desire it.

4. Those who are unable to qualify themselves by passing the prescribed examination within the given time, or who may not desire to enter the apothecary grade, will be allowed the retiring pension of their grade, as hospital steward, without reference to their length of service; or if they have served fifteen years, the invalid pay of their grade, should they prefer remaining in India.

5. The body of hospital purveyors will be divided into three classes in the following proportions, and on the scale of pay specified:—

- The 1st class, one-eighth of the total number, at Rs. 45 per mensem.
- 2nd class, three-eighths of the total number, at Rs. 30 per mensem.
- 3rd class, one-half of the total number, at Rs. 20 per mensem.

6. The subordinate medical establishments at the three Presidencies will be divided into two classes—

The 1st to be designated the "apothecary" class for general employment with European troops, hospitals, depots, &c., including the subordinate medical department in Bengal, the corresponding portion of the medical establishment in Madras, and the warrant medical officers and apprentices in Bombay.

The 2nd to be designated the "hospital assistant" class for general duty with native troops and native civil hospitals, including the present "native doctors" in Bengal, "dressers" in Madras, and "hospital assistant" in Bombay.

7. The "apothecary" class will consist of—Senior apothecaries (in the proportion of one-tenth of the effective establishment of apothecaries). But for the next ten years the number now allowed to each Presidency will not, under any circumstances, be reduced.

Apothecaries.—1st class (after 5 years' service as apothecary). 2nd class (below 5 years' service as apothecary).
Assistant Apothecaries.—1st class (after 5 years' service as assistant apothecary). 2nd class (below 5 years' service as assistant apothecary).

Passed Hospital Apprentices.
Hospital Apprentices.

8. All these grades, with the exception of the hospital apprentices, will hold the rank of warrant officers, and receive warrants, which will give them a rank above all non-commissioned officers.

9. Passed hospital apprentices, when in subordinate medical charge of a body of troops, will have temporary warrant rank as assistant apothecaries whilst so employed.

10. The grade of honorary assistant surgeon will form no portion of the regular medical subordinate establishment, but will continue to be given specially to those deemed worthy of the distinction as heretofore. When a medical warrant officer attains this honorary rank he will no longer be employed as a medical subordinate with a regiment, or corresponding body of European troops, and will be supernumerary to the fixed establishment.

11. The strength of the "apothecary" class at the several Presidencies will be fixed by the respective Governments, subject to the approval of the Government of India on the following basis.

12. The effective strength will comprise the numbers of the several grades actually necessary for the duties with European troops, regiments, and in station hospitals, with depots, sanitarium, and medical store depots, as also with the Indian marine and telegraph departments, together with an additional margin of 15 per cent. in each grade to provide for detachments and other temporary duties, and for absentees on general or sick leave.

13. All who may be employed in civil or miscellaneous duties, other than military or those above specified, will be extra to the regular establishment, and will be seconded, their names being borne in the Army Lists in italics. In the event of a senior apothecary being so seconded, a promotion will be made in his room.

14. The regimental and other military establishments in the three Presidencies will be the same, viz.:—

For a European regiment of cavalry or infantry, a brigade of artillery or a large depot, or sanitarium equal to a regiment,—1 apothecary, 1 assistant apothecary, 1 passed apprentice, 1 hospital apprentice at least, and more if available.

For a detached battery of artillery, or a small depot or sanitarium,—1 assistant apothecary.

For a garrison or cantonment hospital, or Presidency medical store depot,—1 apothecary, 1 assistant apothecary.

For the head quarters of the corps of sappers and miners,—1 apothecary or assistant apothecary.

For provincial medical store depots,—1 apothecary.

15. The grade of second apothecary at Madras will be abolished, the members being merged in that of apothecary.

16. The practice obtaining at Bombay of maintaining a separate establishment for the medical store depots, will also be discontinued, the members so employed joining the regular establishment according to their standing.

17. The future pay of the members of the "apothecary" class, will be a consolidated sum, to cover all expenses, except those specially noted below.

18. When on regimental or corresponding duty, all subordinates will be supplied with free quarters, or when marching, with camp equipage. Hospital apprentices will also receive a ration allowance of Rupees 10 per mensem when not dieted in the hospital to which they may be attached, or in the Medical College. This latter grade will further be provided with the necessary barrack furniture, the usual allowance of bedding, and three suits of uniform clothing annually, one for cold weather, and two for summer wear, free of cost.

19. The consolidated monthly rates of pay will be:—

	Rs.
Senior Apothecary	400
Apothecary (Above 5 years' service in that grade)	200
Apothecary (Under 5 ditto)	150
Assistant (Above 5 years' service)	100
Assistant (Under 5 ditto)	75
Apothecary (Under 5 ditto)	50
Passed Hospital Apprentice	16

Ditto ditto when in College, 1st year	25
Ditto ditto 2nd year	30
Ditto ditto 3rd year	30

One-fourth of the above salaries to be forfeited during absence, whether on general leave or medical certificate.

20. In addition to the ordinary rates of pay a field allowance of Rupees 30 per mensem will be granted to all the Medical Warrant Grades, when marching or in the field.

21. A similar amount will be granted, as a staff or employed allowance, to those grades when senior with or in subordinate medical charge of the hospital of a British regiment or detachment of British troops, or of a battery of artillery, or a depot or sanitarium, or when attached to a general hospital or medical store depot.

22. The furlough pay, retiring, invalid and wound pensions of the several grades will be as follows:—

Grades.	Annual Furlough Pay and Retiring Pension.	Monthly Invalid Pension.	Annual Wound Pension.
Honorary assistant surgeon	£150	Rs. 175	£70

1st class do.	80	100	35
2nd class do.	60	85	35
Assistant apothecary	—	40	25

23. These retiring and invalid pensions are inclusive of any pension, which, as warrant officers, the recipients may be entitled to from Lord Clive's Fund.

24. Members of the "apothecary" class, who have completed 25 years' service, exclusive of the period passed in the grade of hospital apprentice, on retirement, be granted the honorary rank of assistant surgeon, if will, on retirement, be granted that distinction.

25. Medical warrant officers will not be entitled to retire until they have served 30 years in the department, exclusive of the period served as hospital apprentices, unless they are reported by a medical committee to be unfit for further effective duty.

26. If invalided in India they must have served 15 years, exclusive of the period passed as hospital apprentice, to entitle them to the benefits of the invalid pension, unless they are invalided in consequence of wounds or injuries received, or disorders contracted on service or in the execution of their duties, when their individual cases will be specially considered.

"If invalided in England they will receive invalid pensions in accordance with the G.G.O. No. 549 of June 5, at the following rates, should they have served 15 and less than 30 years:—

Honorary assistant surgeon	£120 per annum.
Senior apothecary	80 "
First-class apothecary	64 "
Second-class apothecary	48 "

"Should their services be under 15 years they will receive the English invalid pension of the next lower grade, a second-class apothecary in such case being allowed £36."

27. The following pensions will be granted to the widows of the medical subordinate department:—

	Annual in Europe.	Monthly in India.
Widows of honorary assistant surgeons	£30	Rs. 30
Do. senior apothecary	26	26
Do. apothecaries	20	20
Do. assistant apothecaries	15	15

28. Honorary assistant-surgeons and other members of the "apothecary" class, when employed in the independent medical charge of civil stations, will receive pay according to the scale laid down in financial department's notification No. 2,295, dated April 25, 1867, viz.:—

Under 5 years' service in independent civil charge, Rs. 350 per mensem.	450
From 5 to 10 years	550

Length of service to count from the date of entry on the pay of such appointment.

29. No honorary assistant-surgeon or member of the "apothecary" class will hereafter be permanently appointed to the charge of a civil station who has not gone through the regulated course of study in a medical college.

30. In the event of an honorary assistant surgeon or member of the "apothecary" class being placed in temporary independent medical charge of a native regiment, or a detachment of European or native troops, constituting the ordinary charge of a covenanted medical officer, he will, if he holds a diploma, be entitled to a salary of Rs. 450 per mensem, or, if he has no diploma, to an addition of Rs. 50 per mensem to his departmental pay, together with any additional staff or marching allowance to which he may be entitled.

31. Should an honorary assistant surgeon or other member of the "apothecary" class holding a diploma be allowed to retain independent medical charge of a native corps for upwards of five years, his salary will be increased to Rs. 600.

"Hospital Assistant" Class.

32. This branch of the subordinate medical department will consist of first, second, and third class hospital assistants, the classes being regulated by length of service, and of medical pupils.

33. The regular establishment will comprise the number requisite for, and employed on military duties, or on those connected with the Indian marine and telegraph departments, together with a margin of 15 per cent. to meet extra and temporary duties and absentees. All the members of this branch required for civil or miscellaneous duties will be extra to the regular establishment, and will be seconded, their names being in italics on the list.

34. The grade of sub assistant surgeon will not be considered as forming a portion of the regular establishment of the "hospital assistant" class; but when, by their conduct and attainments, they can prove themselves well qualified for advancement, a certain number of hospital assistants may, if specially recommended, be allowed—the exigencies of the service permitting—to attend the medical college of their Presidency for a period not exceeding two years, with a view to their qualifying for the grade of sub assistant surgeon. See paragraph 47.

35. The establishments requisite for military purposes will be as follows: For a native regiment of infantry or cavalry, or a native depot or detachment of greater numerical strength than a wing,—2 hospital assistants.

For a native battery of artillery, a detached company of sappers, or a detachment of native infantry or cavalry less than a wing,—1 hospital assistant.

For a station or detail native hospital or lock hospital,—1 hospital assistant.

For a regiment of British cavalry, a brigade or division of royal artillery, or a detached battery of horse, field, or heavy artillery,—1 hospital assistant.

36. The monthly pay of this branch will also be consolidated, and on the following scale:—

	For those qualified in the English language.	For those not qualified in the English language.
	Rs.	Rs.
1st Class Hospital Assistants of above 14 years' service	60	40
2nd Class ditto ditto of above 7 years' service	40	30
3rd Class ditto ditto under 7 years' service	25	20
Native Medical pupil, 1st year	7	5
Native Medical pupil, 2nd year	8	6
Native Medical pupil in College or Medical School, 1st year	9	7
Native Medical pupil in College or Medical School, 2nd year	10	8
Passed Medical pupils	16	12

The foregoing allowance to medical pupils includes ration money.

Hospital assistants will draw as field batta—those of the 1st class Rupees 10, and the rest Rupees 5 per mensem, when marching, in the field, or on foreign service. When on general or sick leave, they will forfeit one-fourth of their salaries.

37. Accommodation will be furnished for medical pupils in hospital and also in college, if required. One suit of uniform clothing will likewise be supplied to them annually.

38. The scale of pensions for the hospital assistants will be:—

One-third of the average pay of preceding five years after fifteen years' service, and one-half after twenty-five years' service as hospital assistants if invalidated by a competent medical committee, counting from the date of their passing for the grade of hospital assistant.

After thirty years' service one-half of the average pay of preceding five years, without the necessity of producing a medical certificate.

If invalidated on account of wounds or injuries received on service, they will be allowed one-third of the average pay of preceding five years if under fifteen years' service; one-half if above fifteen years' service as hospital assistants; and the full amount after twenty-five years' service.

39. Hospital assistants who have been advanced to the grade of sub-assistant surgeon will be entitled to retire after completing the requisite service under the uncovenanted service rules, counting their service from the date of passing their examination as hospital assistants.

40. Hospital assistants will hold rank below all native commissioned and above all native non-commissioned officers.

Training and Education.

41. With a view to ensure a certain amount of professional training, independent of hospital practice, all hospital apprentices and native medical pupils will, subject to the exigencies of the service, be required to pass a given period at one of the medical colleges of their respective presidencies, and attend a regular course of lectures. They will, moreover, be required to pass a standard examination in such college, before they can obtain promotion to the grade of assistant apothecary, or hospital assistant, respectively.

42. Both classes will, as heretofore, be required to pass a preliminary examination prior to entrance into the service under the existing rules. Hospital apprentices will then join a European regimental hospital, and native medical pupils a native regimental hospital or civil dispensary. After two years' employment in these capacities, if favourably reported on, they will be allowed to join the medical college, where hospital apprentices will be required to serve three, and medical pupils two, years.

43. Hospital apprentices, after passing the requisite examination, will receive the designation and pay of passed hospital apprentice, and will revert to regimental employ, or join general or station hospitals, until promoted to the grade of assistant apothecary.

44. In like manner native medical pupils will, on completing their college career, and passing the prescribed examination, receive the designation and pay of "passed medical pupils," unless or until they are promoted to the grade of 3rd class hospital assistant. In such case they also will join a military or civil hospital as subordinates, until they receive promotion.

45. On proceeding to and from the Medical College, both classes will receive free passages or a travelling allowance.

46. In order to afford junior members of the "apothecary" class of undoubted ability and good character an opening to further advancement, a limited number of assistant apothecaries after having served five years in that grade may, if they are specially recommended as likely to profit by the measure, and if the exigencies of the service permit, be allowed to attend the Medical College for a further period not exceeding two years, to qualify themselves for the grade of sub-assistant surgeon. On appointment to that grade, they will be struck off the establishment of the hospital class, and join the civil body of sub-assistant surgeons under the usual conditions.

47. A limited number of hospital assistants will also be allowed to return to the Medical College for a like purpose. A previous service of seven years in the grade of hospital assistant is indispensable, as likewise is a competent practical knowledge of the English language. This opportunity of advancement will only be extended to such members of the service as are reported specially deserving by their general conduct and qualifications, and who have kept up their professional knowledge by the study of English works on medicine and surgery, and who are likely to be able to pass the requisite examination within the prescribed period of two years.

DINNERS TO THE HERO OF MAGDALA.

Sir Robert Napier was entertained at the United Service Club on Saturday evening, July 11. The chair was taken by the Duke of Cambridge, and the Prince of Wales was present as a member of the club. The guests included three Secretaries of State, Lord Stanley, Sir John Pakington, and Sir Stafford Northcote.

On the evening of Monday last Sir Robert Napier was entertained by the members of the East India United Service Club, in St. James's-square. About one hundred gentlemen were present, Sir Bartle Frere presiding, and among those at the centre table were, besides the guest of the evening, Mr. Gladstone, Sir Stafford Northcote, Sir J. Burgoyne, Lord William Hay, M.P., Sir Charles Staveley, Sir W. Wyllie, General Baker, &c. The health of Sir Robert Napier was drunk with great enthusiasm. Sir Robert Napier, in responding, said if any one had told him forty years ago when he arrived in Calcutta, a second lieutenant of Engineers, without a connection in the country, and without a friend except his contemporaries who went out with him, that he should receive from the Indian services the welcome which had been accorded him that night, he should have thought it a dream indeed. He had always felt it a high honour to be a member of the Indian service. It was a service which from small beginnings raised and preserved for England an empire which has been governed as no other empire or colony has ever yet been governed. The recent campaign had exhibited most completely the amalgamation of the Indian and the English services. During the entire expedition no one thought for a moment to which service he belonged. He (Sir Robert Napier) had been called upon to command a mixed force of English and Indian soldiers sent from the shores of India, and he was perhaps the first Indian soldier who, from a simple lieutenant, having nothing but his name and his sword to begin with, had won the high honour for which her Majesty had been pleased to designate him. He had thought seriously whether he should be wise in accepting the honour which he was informed was to be conferred upon him, and one great motive for his accepting of it was—that it was conferred upon him as a member of the Indian service. Mr. Gladstone responded to the toast of "the Lords and Commons." He said they had met to unite in as joyful a celebration as history can possibly record, for they had had a just cause, managed and conducted by men who knew its justice, and who were determined that it should not be sullied by the taint of cruelty or ambition. "Would to God," the right hon. gentleman added, "that but a small fraction of the wars that from time to time have stained the surface of the earth were attended with the same gratifying recollections as this." Sir Stafford Northcote, in acknowledging the toast of his health, said that his interest in India was not an interest of twelve months' standing only, because he was brought up in an Indian family. His mother was born in India, and he was brought up among those who had taken an active part in the campaigns of Lord Cornwallis, and who knew the Duke of Wellington when he was only Colonel Wellesley. Sir Stafford dwelt at some length on the assistance he had received in the management of the Abyssinian expedition from his Council, from the Admiralty, from the War Office, and especially from the Commander-in-Chief. From the very commencement of the expedition, the personal interest which his Royal Highness took in it was most remarkable, and his steady faith and confidence in the General selected was not less so. "It has sometimes been asked," Sir Stafford Northcote said, "'Who selected the commander-in-chief for this expedition?' Well, I might almost say that Sir Robert Napier was selected by acclamation. His nomination came from two wholly independent quarters and from different parts of the world—from Sir John Lawrence in India and from the Duke of Cambridge at home. Those recommendations entirely settled the question. It was Sir John Lawrence, too, who, in the first instance, suggested not only that Sir Robert Napier should command the expedition, but that all political authority should be intrusted to the same hands, and that we should put our entire trust in him. That principle was accepted at once by the Government, and it was the principle upon which this war has been carried on." Sir Robert Napier said it was impossible for any one in his position to have had more active and thorough support than he had received throughout his operations both from the Secretary of State and the Commander-in-Chief. The toast of "the Army, Navy, and Volunteers" was acknowledged by Sir John Burgoyne.

A GRAND BANQUET will be given to General Sir Robert Napier, G.C.B., by the officers of the Royal Engineers, at Chatham garrison, on Friday, on which occasion several distinguished individuals will be present.

Miscellaneous.

ABYSSINIAN PAPERS.—The Gazette of July 10 publishes a despatch from Sir Robert Napier, dated Paris, July 1, containing a list of officers who have been recommended for their services during the Abyssinian campaign by the generals and other officers under whom they served. The names have already been mentioned in the despatches previously received.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The mail steamer which left Southampton on Saturday last took out £148,900 in specie, of which £73,500 is in dollars for Shanghai, £40,000 in gold for Bombay, and the remainder for distribution at some of the smaller ports of China.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for bills on India took place on Wednesday, July 15, at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were, to Calcutta £150,000, and to Madras £50,000. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on both Presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 18 per cent.; those above that will be allotted in full. The result shows an advance of about 1 per cent., owing to an increased demand for remittances.

BARON NAPIER OF MAGDALA.—(Whitehall, July 11.)—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baron of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto Lieutenant-general Sir Robert Cornelius Napier, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., Commander-in-Chief of the Army of Bombay, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, by the name, style, and title of Baron Napier of Magdala in Abyssinia, and of Caryngton, in the County Palatine of Chester.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR NATIVES OF INDIA.—The trustees of the Gilchrist Trust have proposed to establish two annual scholarships of £100 a-year, to be held by natives of India at the Universities of London and Edinburgh. All persons born in India, except those of pure European descent, will be permitted to compete, and the award will be by open competition, by examiners under the direction of the trustees. The scholarships are to be tenable for five years. The Secretary of State for India, with a view to encourage the scheme, has sanctioned the grant of £100 for passage to each scholar proceeding to England. The first examination is to be in January next.

SIR R. NAPIER'S POPULARITY.—Sir Robert Napier is probably a little surprised at his own popularity. Wherever he goes the public eagerly follow him, and they seem to have very good sources of information at their command with respect to his engagements. When he dined with Sir Stafford Northcote recently, Harley-street was blocked up by a dense gathering of people, and the cheers which saluted the general on his arrival and departure probably satisfied him that his work was fully appreciated by the humbler classes. A few nights ago a similar crowd waited for Sir Robert before the East India Club in St. James's-square—that paradise of the returned Indian.—Pall Mall Gazette.

SIR STAFFORD NORTHCOTE entertained the following gentlemen at the India-office at breakfast on Saturday morning:—The Earl of Kellie, Sir Charles Staveley, Sir William Hill, Sir Henry Green, Mr. Rissam, Mr. Flad, Colonel Thuillier, Mr. Schaleh, Colonel Dillon, Lieut. Pridaux, Dr. Blanc, Colonel Fraser, Major Roberts, Col. Milward, Colonel Thesiger, Captain Holland, Colonel Grant, General Chesney, Mr. Abbott, General van Cortlandt, Mr. Dickinson, Mr. Ashley Eden, Mr. Lawrence, Mr. Torrens, M.P., Mr. Robinson, Mr. Pridaux, Mr. Hooper, Mr. Marwood Tucker, Mr. Davison, General Pears, Mr. Markham, Mr. Bedford, Mr. Kaye, General Baker, Capt. Eastwick, and Mr. Northcote.

PRESENTATION TO COLONEL MILWARD.—A public presentation of congratulatory addresses was made on Saturday evening to Colonel Milward, R.A., assistant director of ordnance, the officer who had charge of the Mountain Battery at the siege of Magdala, and who was subsequently the bearer of King Theodore's crown and official despatches to the Queen, and whose services her Majesty has graciously expressed an intention of noticing by some special mark of favour. The presentation took place at Colonel Milward's residence, Plumstead-common, in the presence of Mrs. Milward and family. The Rev. J. A. McAllister, Vicar of Plumstead, and Mr. W. P. Jackson, chairman of the Woolwich Local Board of Health, presented addresses from the parishes of Plumstead and Woolwich; which Colonel Milward acknowledged in suitable and soldierly terms. After the presentation Colonel Milward showed the gentlemen present (about thirty) several Abyssinian relics brought from Magdala.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—The directors of the East Indian Railway Company have issued their report in anticipation of the meeting. The accounts show that the net earnings for the half-year ending 31st December last were £397,145. 3s. 10d., against £493,097 in the corresponding half-year, the difference being partly caused by the working expenses, which were 56·84 per cent., against 47·76 in the last half of 1866. The almost entire stagnation of trade in India during the whole period explains much of the falling off, and it is stated that for many months there was scarcely any through traffic, while the Jubulpore line is as yet unprofitable, there being no connection with the Bombay system. The board also state, as regards the revenue account, that they take exception to the sum disallowed by the Government for interest on revenue balances, and are in correspondence with the Secretary of State on the subject. It was anticipated in the last report that it would be necessary to raise £1,000,000 in the following six months, but finding that the expenditure might be met by a smaller sum, the amount was limited to £450,000, raised in debentures at 4½ per cent. During the next six months it is estimated that £1,000,000 will be required, and it will be proposed to raise this in shares or paid-up stock at a price agreed upon with the Secretary of State, and to be offered rateably to the shareholders. The directors then allude to a very able report, drawn up by Mr. Rendel, on the question of the capital required to complete the works. The amount thus taken as necessary for the remaining works on the general scheme required by the Government of India, from the 1st of January, 1868, is £3,868,000, which, added to the expenditure to the 13th December last, would make the cost of the entire system £31,642,300. At this figure Mr. Rendel considered the capital account may be practically closed. The completion of these works, it is estimated, will occupy three years, and when the whole are finished the company will possess 936½ miles of single, and 563½ miles of double line, with rolling stock equal to a traffic of at least £60 per mile per week.

ARRIVAL OF THEODORE'S SON IN ENGLAND.—The Urgent, last from Malta on July 5, arrived at Plymouth on the 14th inst., with Prince Dejatch Alamayou (I have seen the world), the son of King Theodore, in charge of Captain Speedy, and attended by an Abyssinian man servant, Shellika Kassa. The Prince and Captain Speedy landed, and breakfasted with the Port Admiral, Sir W. F. Martin, visited General Spencer, the military Commander-in-Chief, and then went over the dockyard. Thence they proceeded up the Tamar in the steam-tug Carron, to view the Royal Albert Bridge, returning to the dockyard, lunching with Admiral Superintendent Drummond, and dining with the port admiral in the evening. No directions had been received up to a late hour as to the Prince's immediate movements. He is an interesting little lad, tall for his age (seven years last April), and is already much delighted with England, exclaiming, "Oh this beautiful country; I shall never go back." The servant, who is a very intelligent man, on going over the arsenal, observed, with regret, "Theodore should have seen!" The young prince will probably accompany Lord Napier to Osborne on Friday. A little Abyssinian slave girl, a protégée of Sir Robert Napier, was also brought by the Urgent.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, July 9.—SIR R. NAPIER.—The LORD CHANCELLOR read the following message from her Majesty:—

"Victoria Regina: Her Majesty, taking into consideration the important services rendered by Sir R. Napier, as Lieutenant-general in her Majesty's army and Commander-in-Chief of the army of Bombay, in the conduct of the recent expedition to Abyssinia, and being desirous to confer upon him a signal mark of her favour, recommends it to the House of Lords to concur in enabling her Majesty to make a provision for securing to Sir R. Napier and his next male heir a pension of £2,000 a-year."

The Earl of MALMESBURY gave notice that he should move that her Majesty's message should be taken into consideration on the following day.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, July 9.—SIR ROBERT NAPIER.—MR. DISRAELI brought up a message under her Majesty's sign manual to the following effect:—

"Her Majesty, having taken into consideration the important services rendered by Sir Robert Napier, Lieutenant-general of her Majesty's army and Commander-in-Chief of the army of Bombay, in his conduct in the recent expedition to Abyssinia, and being desirous to confer some signal mark of her favour for these and other distinguished services of Sir Robert Napier, recommends it to the House of Commons to enable her Majesty to make provision for securing to the said Sir Robert Napier and the next surviving heir male of his body a pension of £2,000 per annum."

I shall move to-morrow, in committee, to take into consideration her Majesty's gracious message. (Cheers.)

HOUSE OF LORDS, July 10.—PEERAGE AND PENSION FOR SIR R. NAPIER.—On the motion of the Earl of MALMESBURY, an humble address was carried, assuring her Majesty of the hearty concurrence of that House in her Majesty's wish to bestow some signal mark of the royal approbation on Lieut.-general Sir Robert Napier.—Lord MELVILLE, before the question was put, objected that the pension proposed was contrary to precedent, being for two, instead of for three lives. He had never known a similar case in which the pension was not granted for three lives.—Lord RUSSELL fully concurred in the address.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, July 10.—PEERAGE AND PENSION TO SIR R. NAPIER.—The House having gone into committee upon the message from her Majesty respecting a pension of £2,000 per annum to be conferred upon Sir Robert Napier, Mr. DISRAELI rose and said: Sir, after the discussion which has taken place in this House, and the present state of public feeling in the country on this subject, it is wholly unnecessary to expatiate on the services of Sir R. Napier, great as those services have been, in Abyssinia and other portions of the world. (Hear, hear.) For a long period of years he has proved his loyalty to his sovereign and his country—(hear, hear) and I have the satisfaction to inform the House that her Majesty has conferred a peerage upon him, by the style and title of Lord Napier of Magdala—(cheers)—and it is to sustain the honour and great distinction of that title that her Majesty has now appealed to Parliament to assist her in the consummation which she desires. (Hear, hear.) It is a part of the admirable combination of our constitutional forces that the sovereign and the nation unite together necessarily when there is a complete and perfect recognition of public services, and if the committee will pass the resolution which I am going to move we shall prove that in this country those who render great public services may depend upon a gracious sovereign and a grateful people. (Cheers.)—The resolution conferring a pension of £2,000 per annum upon Sir Robert Napier was then agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, July 13.—OVERLAND ROUTES FROM INDIA TO CHINA.—In answer to Mr. AKROYD, Sir S. NORTHCOTE said the survey of the direct route from Rangoon to Kianung, on the south-western frontier of China, has been suspended because it was apprehended that to continue it beyond British territory would lead to political complications. The survey of the route by Bhamo to Talifu, in the north-west of China, has been authorised without consulting the Secretary of State, no doubt because its continuance was not expected to lead to such political difficulties.

THE RAJAH OF KUPURTHULLA.—In answer to Lord W. HAY, Sir S. NORTHCOTE stated, that it is true that the decision of Lord Canning with respect to the will of the Rajah of Kupurthulla has been reversed by the Governor-general of India, but the decision has been suspended in order to give time for an appeal to the Home Government. No appeal has yet been received, and if, when the appeal arrives, it is found that six months is not sufficient for its consideration the time will be extended.

ANNUITY TO SIR ROBERT NAPIER.—The report of the resolution of the House founded on the message of her Majesty for granting an annuity of £2,000 a-year to Sir Robert Napier and his heir male was brought up and agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, July 14.—OFFICERS ON SICK LEAVE.—SIR R. ANSTRUTHER asked the Secretary for War whether the travelling allowances of officers invalided home from Abyssinia had been disallowed, and if so, why?—Sir J. PAKINGTON complained that the form of the question was likely to convey the impression that the treatment of these officers differed from that of other invalided officers, and that the War Office has discretion in such matters. All the expenses of such officers are paid, except accidental detention on the way, and land travelling after their arrival in England. The rule bears hardly upon officers, and the Government are considering and will shortly issue a new rule, by which all the expenses shall be allowed. He could not say whether that will be retrospective.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, July 15.—THE INVESTMENT OF TRUSTS FUNDS SUPPLEMENTAL BILL (which stood for committee) was thrown out by a majority of 17—33 to 16. The object of the Bill was to extend the provisions of a former Act to certain railway stock absolutely guaranteed by the Government.

SIR ROBERT NAPIER'S ANNUITY BILL.—The House having gone into Committee on this Bill, Mr. Serjeant GASELEE said he desired to place on record his opinion that it would be more useful to Sir Robert Napier and his family to give him a lump sum of £50,000 instead of the proposed annuity. Besides, the giving of a lump sum would be to throw all the burthen on ourselves, whereas this pension would throw a burthen on posterity. He would also suggest that Sir R. Napier should be made a peer for life as a preferable course to conferring upon him a hereditary dignity. The Bill then passed through committee.

LEAD IN CENTRAL INDIA.—During the progress of public works on the Eastern road some excavations for road metal were being made in the neighbourhood of Chicholee, near Raipore, and the character of the metal having attracted the scientific eye of Mr. Robert Smart, Revenue Surveyor, we have, it appears, stumbled on a mine of wealth in the shape of a lead mine. The rock is so closely veined with the ore (galena) as to yield on analysis above 80 per cent. of pure lead.—Central India Times.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.

COLDS, COUGHS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH.—These corrective remedies are infallible for these pectoral complaints, which neglected, often end in asthma, bronchitis, or consumption. The Ointment well rubbed upon the chest and back, penetrating the skin, is carried directly to the lungs, whence it expels all impurities. All the blood in the body constantly passes through the lungs, and there all noxious particles tending to produce disease can be quickly, thoroughly, and permanently neutralised, rendered harmless, or ejected from the system. Holloway's Ointment and Pills perfectly accomplish this purification, and through the blood thus cleansed the influence of these wonderful medicaments reaches the remotest parts of the human body, and thus cures all diseased actions, whether internal or external.

IMPORTANT HISTORICAL WORKS.

Just published, in Two thick Volumes, demy 8vo., price £1. 12s.;

LIVES OF THE ENGLISH CARDINALS, from NICHOLAS BREAK-SPEAR (Pope Adrian IV.) to THOMAS WOLSEY, Cardinal Legate. Including Historical Notices of the Papal Court. By FOLKESTONE WILLIAMS, Author of "Court and Times of James I.," "Court and Times of Charles I.," "Memoirs of Sophia Dorothea," &c.

Scarcely one adequate biography exists in print of "the Princes of the Church" of English birth; and when they are named collectively by their own countrymen, or foreign writers, they are briefly catalogued—frequently with doubtful incidents and questionable dates; nevertheless, the majority attained the highest honours, spiritual and temporal, and were engaged in some of the most important transactions in European history. It has, therefore, been considered that an acceptable service might be rendered to students by collecting the trustworthy details of Bale, Pits, Leland, Godwin, Tanner, Dugdale, and similar explorers in the same field of inquiry, adding such notices as may be gathered from the annals of the popes and cardinals, —Baronius, Ciaconius, Aubrey, Spondanus, &c.; from the numerous monkish chroniclers, from Hemingford to Jocelin de Brakelonde, as well as from contemporary correspondence; and combining with them new facts from the researches of modern historians, such as Pauli, Neander, Dollinger, Ranke, Cardella, Sismondi, Guizot, Lingard, Millman, Brewer, Giles, &c., &c.

Whilst tracing the development of the papal system, care has been taken to exhibit its influence upon society, especially at Rome, Avignon, or wherever the Pontifical Court resided. As members of what may be called the Privy Council of the Pope, each of the English cardinals who chose to remain at the seat of government assisted in its administration. Many were employed as diplomatists, or took a prominent part in the great councils, called from time to time to remedy evils then afflicting the Holy See; almost all were members of the hierarchy, in one or other of the principal branches of the Roman Apostolic Church, and not a few possessed almost unlimited authority at home in secular employments.

HISTORY OF CIVILISATION IN THE FIFTH CENTURY. Translated, by permission, from the French of A. FREDERIC OZANAM, late Professor of Foreign Literature to the Faculty of Letters at Paris. By ASHLEY C. GLYN, B.A., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

"Mr. Glyn's translation from Ozanam deserves high praise, and will, we hope, be cordially welcomed."—The Month.

"M. Ozanam's work, when not warped by ecclesiastical assumptions, is a valuable repository of facts and observations, relating to a period of deep historic interest."—Po. Mail Gazette.

"This book constitutes a very valuable addition to English Catholic literature."—Dublin Review.

Third Edition. One Volume, 8vo., with Map, price 12s.,

HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq. Containing a copious Glossary of Indian Terms, and a complete Chronological Index of Events, to aid the aspirant for Public Examinations.

"Mr. Thornton is master of a style of great perspicuity and vigour, always interesting, and frequently rising into eloquence. His power of painting character and of bringing before the eye of the reader the events which he relates, is remarkable; and if the knowledge of India can be made popular, we should say his is the pen to effect it."—Times.

"The writer evinces diligence and research into original authorities; his style is easy, and the intrinsic interest of the important events of Indian history is thus increased by a popular and amusing narrative."—Edinburgh Evening Courant.

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA from the Appointment of Lord Hardinge to the Death of Lord Canning. By LIONEL JAMES TROTTER, late 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The First Volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment, in 1844, to the retirement of the Marquis Dalhousie, in 1856.

The Second Volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India, in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death, in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

In One Vol., 8vo., pp. 1015, with Map, price £1. 1s.,

A GAZETTEER OF INDIA, Compiled chiefly from the Records at the India Office. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq.

The chief objects in view in compiling this Gazetteer are:—

- 1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages, with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practicable brevity all that is known respecting them; and,
- 2nd. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these are added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which cannot otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The work, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body.

It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guarantee not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB'S residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKILL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 229, Piccadilly, London.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, June 23; Agra, June 20; Calcutta and Madras, June 18.

While we in England are in despair at a state of heat and drought unparalleled here since 1834, some parts of India are rejoicing in a temperature unusually low for the season. Thanks to the unusual fall of rain the thermometer at Calcutta in June was content with a maximum of 78 degs. in the shade. The rainfall there from the 8th to the 14th June was as much as 15.29 inches, or about six times the average of the same week in the last fourteen years. From the 1st of January to the 14th June there had fallen 32.86 inches of rain, or more than double the average of the last fourteen years—namely, 15.37 inches. In Madras too "the weather continues very cool." Heavy showers had been falling for some days, until the tanks were almost brimful, and the face of the earth had once more become a rich green. So cool was the weather in consequence, that one of the Madras papers grudges Lord Napier any credit for staying on at Madras instead of retiring to the Hills.

IN Sindh, on the other hand, the heat seems to have been unusually severe. In the course of a few days no fewer than nineteen persons connected with the European troops died at Kurrachee, and six at Hyderabad, not to speak of many natives in both places. Sunstroke and heat-apoplexy were the causes of all these deaths, most of which were fearfully sudden. From the latter cause also died at Jacobabad Colonel Dennis, of the 2nd Sindh Horse, Political Superintendent of the Sindh Frontier. Among the victims at Kurrachee was Mr. Malvery, owner and editor of Our Paper, formerly head assistant to the Chief Engineer in Sindh. During the mutinies he was specially useful to the Government from his varied local experience; but soon afterwards he fell blind. In spite of that misfortune he succeeded in starting a journal, which he conducted with much ability to the day of his death. Owing to the heat, 108 degs. in the shade, the public offices at Kurrachee were opened at 6 A.M. and closed at 11.

WE have all heard of Dr. Boustead and his wonderful feats of elephant-shooting in Abyssinia. Well, he seems to have become the hero of two quite opposite stories regarding another matter, which occurred at Sooroo in January last, when Dr. Boustead belonged to the 1st Belooch Regiment. There was a squabble between him and a brother officer. The matter was reported to the major commanding, who made the needful inquiry, and sent on the papers to the brigadier. According to one version the doctor came off with flying colours, and promotion to the post of sanitary officer to the force. Another version, which declares itself the only true one, is, that the doctor was released from arrest on technical grounds, and punished for his quarrelsome behaviour by an order to remain behind at Zoolla as sanitary officer, on a salary if anything lower than that he drew with his regiment. It seems the doctor's fate to be always a mystery.

AT Poonah a court-martial has been held on Captain J. E. Cameron, of the Madras Staff Corps, for drunkenness and neglect of duty. The verdict is still unknown. The captain seems to have admitted his fault, but pleaded exhaustion from the intense heat and hard work as the real cause of his seeming offence. His past character was also brought forward in his defence.

LEGISLATION at Simlah seems to flag. Two meetings of the Council in June came to nothing for want of a quorum. On the 15th however the new furlough rules were discussed, and subsequently passed to something like the following effect:—The distinction between furlough on sick certificate and on private affairs is nearly abolished. Officers may obtain leave on an allowance of 50 per cent. of their pay and allowances, up to a maximum of £1,200 per annum, the minimum being £250 per annum. Furlough for two years will be allowed without forfeiture of appointment. Officers will be eligible for two years' furlough after eight years' service; a third year after fourteen years' service; and a fourth, after twenty years' service. The aggregate amount of furlough, with pay and retention of appointment, is limited to eight years. Sick leave in India, not exceeding one year, will be granted on half staff salary. Privilege leave will be allowed for sixty days in each year without deduction of pay, and the officer will be allowed to proceed where he pleases. All general leave granted in India is to count against service. The Civil rules are favourable to the service. Assistants, acting for collectors, will get two-thirds of the difference. The military rules have been passed without further reference home; but it is said that such a reference has been made in the case of the civil rules.

THE Bombay papers mention the death at Zoolla of Surgeon-major J. G. Nicolson, of the Marine Battalion. He had joined Sir R. Napier's force as Superintendent of Hospitals at Zoolla, where he died of liver disease, brought on by the tremendous heat. About a hundred transports from Abyssinia had arrived at Bombay, and as many more were daily expected. The last regiment to leave Annesly Bay was the 25th B.N.I., whose departure was fixed for the 11th June. There is some misunderstanding between the Commissariat and the contractor who had agreed to land all the Commissariat stores. He was bound, it seems, to land no more than 20,000 tons per annum, and the Commissariat officers want him to land the whole amount within a few weeks at the original rates. This he declined in the existing state of the market. The Commissariat refuses to pay a higher rate, and so the Government is saddled with a daily expenditure of about half a lakh of rupees.

Most of the elephants have arrived safe in Bombay harbour. They seem to have fared much better than their humbler companions, the mules. Out of forty-five which left Bombay only six have died. Some of the survivors however returned in very poor condition.

THE Times of India still hammers away at the new mail contract. It asserts the difficulty of conveying to the English mind a true idea of the indignation which the terms of that contract have aroused in India; terms sanctioned by Parliament "with indecent haste," before the public at large knew what they meant. As one proof of the mistake thus made, the Times asserts that mail after mail reaches Bombay two or three days before the time specified, so hard is it to keep down the speed of the steamers employed. One captain is said to have received a "a sharp wiggling" for bringing his ship in eleven days from Bombay to Suez. The Times should remember that coals are dear and harbour expenses unprofitable.

THE ruined Mowkee-Mullee Viaduct on the Bhoore-Ghaut portion of the Indian Peninsular Railway has at length been replaced by an iron structure, so that the railway communication between Poonah and Bombay is once more complete. It is to be hoped that the damage done to this line by last year's rains has opened the eyes of the directors to the ruinous costliness of cheap, but ill-constructed works.

WE seem to be as far as ever from the truth regarding the reported battle at Samarkhand and the death of the Ameer. At any rate, according to the Indian papers, the Ameer is not only alive, but he never, at least on this occasion, measured swords with the Russian commander. He seems, on the contrary, to have carefully avoided giving his white neighbours any cause for offence. When his moollahs urged him to lead a crescentade against the Kaffirs he gave them an evasive answer, and caused one of their leading fanatics, the Chief Judge of Bokhara, to be put to death. The Ameer's nephew however did lead a mob of fanatics against some Russian troops outside Samarkhand, and got well beaten for his pains. The Ameer's eldest son was commanding at Samarkhand. The Ameer himself was about to accept the Russian terms regarding the construction of military cantonments at various places along the line of the Oxus. The people of Noorattah, to the north-west of Bokhara, on the caravan road thence to Orenburg, are said to have made terms with the Russians, who now occupy the whole of that district. In the more settled parts of Turkistan we are told that "great confusion and disorder now prevail."

THE Englishman throws a gleam of light on the present complications in Afghanistan. Its reading of events, se non è vero, è ben trovato, and we may accept it in default of any likelier. Shere Ali, as we know, lately got possession of Maimanah, a stronghold commanding the road from Herat to Balkh. Holding Abdurrahman Khan thus in check, he went off to capture Kandahar. That done, the way seemed open to Cabul. After the defeat of Surwur Khan at Mokur, Azim Khan's fate seemed imminent, when news came of his nephew's advance from Turkistan. Leaving his main army, Shere Ali hurried off to Herat. Abdurrahman Khan made a dash at Maimanah, but being caught at disadvantage on the march had to retire to Balkh. He again advanced in the same direction, but finding the enemy too strong for him, sent some of his troops to aid in the defence of Cabul, and with the rest has since been hanging about Maimanah in hopes of a favourable opportunity. Shere Ali being then ill at Herat, Sirdar Yakooob Khan hurried off to defend Maimanah and look after Abdurrahman Khan. The latter is a very able commander, but the chiefs in his rear are hostile, his enemies are everywhere numerous, and his own soldiers badly off for supplies. Neither general cares to force a battle, but the odds are said to be daily heavier against the Ameer's nephew. Meanwhile Azim Khan has so little hope of ultimate success, that he has written to the Akhoond of Swat for an asylum in the event of his having to leave Cabul.

It is rumoured in Bombay that Sir R. Napier—we beg his pardon, Lord Napier of Magdala—is likely to become the next Commander-in-Chief of Bengal. There is nothing at all improbable in such a notion. As a peer of the realm, Lord Napier may well look for some higher command than the post from which he was called at Bombay. If proven merit were sure of its reward, no fitter successor to Sir W. Mansfield and Lord Strathnairn could easily be found. Lord Napier would certainly be the most popular Commander-in-Chief since Lord Gough, and as fit for the post as the ablest of his predecessors, Lord Strathnairn not excepted.

THE Bhamo Expedition, if not quite at a stand-still, is advancing slower than could be wished. Shortness of funds had caused two of Sladen's comrades to return to Rangoon, Sladen himself having held out very small hopes of piercing further eastward this season than Momein. Money however was on its way to Captain Sladen, who was still at Pansee, amidst friendly natives, and resolute by all accounts to make his way, with or without baggage, to the Chinese frontier. Mr. Gordon, Executive Engineer at Prome, had started off at Colonel Fyche's request to join Sladen's party. It is said that most of the Burmese officials accompanying the party have been recalled in disgrace by the King for neglecting to give due aid to his friend Sladen.

THE Indian papers are discussing the case of the ex-Nawab of Tonk from various points of view. On the whole however opinion sides with the course taken by Government against the dethroned ruffian, or suffering innocent, whichever he be. The evidence in favour of the latter version is altogether outweighed by that on which he was condemned; and Mr. Pritchard's visit to England is not very likely, we think, to end in a reversal of his client's sentence. According to one paper, his deposition "is known to have had a most beneficial effect throughout Rajpootana."

THE neighbourhood of Rumpah, in the Godavery district, is said to be overrun with tigers. Every village there has suffered more or less from the ravages of those unwelcome beasts, whose attacks are not confined to lonely wayfarers or quiet hours. On one occasion a tiger charged a body of villagers within a few hundred yards of Khondada station. Some of the smaller villages have been deserted by their occupants, and the people of Khondada told Captain Robertson that but for the neighbourhood of the police-station they, too, would have gone off to some other part of the hills. If Government would offer a fair reward for all tigers actually killed in Godavery this new plague would soon be abated. Such a measure has been sanctioned for a term of two years in the Vizagapatam district, and why not in others equally infested? We are told that this nuisance has greatly increased since the general disarming of the natives during the Mutiny. If so, is it not time to reconsider that arrangement?

ACCORDING to the Madras Times, Mr. G. Duncan's appointment as secretary to the Commissioner for the Uncovenanted Civil Service Examination is the first instance of such a reward being bestowed on an outsider. Mr. Duncan, we learn, has for many years done excellent service in the lower grades of the Educational Department, besides producing the best work on geography circulated in India. His experience as an examiner in his own department has doubtless justified Lord Napier in raising him to the higher and more lucrative post.

THE Rev. James Long has at length published, according to the Friend of India, his long promised volume of Bengallie Proverbs, illustrating native life and feeling. The collecting of these has been a work of several years and of no small difficulty, most of them having been gleaned from behind the Purdah. With the help however of "an intelligent Pundit," who coaxed the women to yield up their literary treasures, Mr. Long has brought his labours to a successful close. It remains to publish a translation of the work in accordance with the prayer of the Royal Asiatic Society of London. Such a collection will be full of fresh interest for English readers.

On Tuesday Lord Napier of Magdala was duly presented with the freedom of the City and the inevitable sword. In the evening he was loudly cheered by the 200 persons who shared with him the feast at Guildhall. In his speech he once more enumerated the services of all concerned in the late campaign.

INDIAN HEAT.

THERE is no mistake about the heat in England this year. A foreigner who had come over here for the first time in March or April last would by this time be apt to wonder if the sun ever ceased shining here. So hot a summer and so long a drought are not to be remembered, we believe, by middle-aged men. The heat has been quite against all English use and wont. Three hot days and a thunderstorm is the proverbial description of an English summer; whereas this year the storms are rare and the hot days continue for weeks together. Thunderstorms are fondly believed to cool the air; but this year they have done nothing but intensify the heat. Clouds of a certain density gathering over the sky were once thought to mean rain; but this season the most formidable mass of clouds seems to mean nothing.

So excessive has the heat been all this month that some people, old Indians of course, have been heard to wish themselves back in India, with punkah going overhead, tatties and thermantidotes keeping the air cool around them, and all the other appliances for conquering heat or inducing cold. A great many people who have never been in India are finding a sort of dreary consolation in the thought that this must really be Indian heat; that now, if never before, they know what Indian heat is. Well, if that will satisfy them, they are welcome to believe that the temperature of the last ten days or so has been no bad imitation of the genuine thing. Eighty in the shade is considered hot for an English summer, and in an ordinary season few days reach that mark. But this summer the quicksilver scorns to fall so low as eighty during the midmost hours of the day, and rather makes a point of touching ninety as often as possible. And this unusual heat has been heightened by the sultriness that usually foreruns a thunder-storm. It is all the more trying, too, in a country where all the means and appliances of living are absurdly unsuited for so hot a summer. But the unusual severity of the season need not tempt us into halting comparisons. The heat is ungodly, but it is not really Indian heat, such as one feels in the plains of Upper India or in the sandy wastes of Sindh. Think of Agra for instance in May or September, when the temperature for days and weeks together in the shade never falls below 90 degs., except where tatties and punkahs may now and then bring it down to 85 degs. In June there, before the rains, the thermometer in the shade ranges from 95 degs. to more than 100 degs. Tropical Bombay in early March is at least as hot as London has been these ten days past. What is 100 degs. in a small tent at Wimbledon compared to 110 degs. in a good Indian "singlepoled" tent in the month of October, on the road from Umballa to Ferozepore? Even in the hill-station of Subathoo the thermometer in June often marked 93 or 94 degs. at morning gunfire. In tropical India the fierce heat is just now tempered by the rains, but no one who had lately spent April or September in Calcutta would seriously call this Indian heat. As for Sukkur, we are afraid to say how high the thermometer rises in that worst of Indian furnace-holes. But the latest accounts from Kurrachee tell us of Europeans and natives dying off there apace from heat-apoplexy, with a temperature of 108 degs. in the shade, which means about 150 degs. in the sun. If the present heat lasts many days longer, homebred Britons may yet know what Indian weather is like during several months of the year. But that knowledge is still to come, except perhaps for stokers and puddlers.

THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.—IV.

THE Lieutenant-governor of Bengal begins his minute on the questions raised by Sir Stafford Northcote's despatch of January by pleading the necessity of discussing those questions from a standpoint outside Bengal. From the suggestion that all legislation for Bengal Proper should be entrusted to the Supreme Government, he "unhesitatingly dissents." Such a course would be "a very startling example of the vacillating policy" often charged against Indian statesmen. Where is the mischief of letting two legislative bodies sit in one place, with jurisdiction over the same class of subjects? Anomalous it may be, but the mischief of it Mr. Grey can never understand. The local legislature has in six years got through a great deal of useful work. Besides, the time has really come for admitting the native and English residents in Bengal to a larger share in the framing of their own laws. For such an end the general legislature is utterly inadequate, unless it were enormously enlarged and swamped with Bengal representatives. Under existing circumstances no central legislature could fitly represent the numerous provinces and peoples of British India; and therefore the Supreme Council should restrict itself to legislating on purely imperial matters. All new taxation for local purposes should be imposed by local legislatures, that being the one subject about which the people feel a genuine interest. A local legislature could at least be made to represent the leading interests, such as land and trade, on which the new imposts would have to fall.

The anomaly in the present system consists in this. The Central Government has a share in the local legislation for the North-West Provinces. Hence it has come to encroach on the domain of the Bengal Legislature, which is further hampered by its want of power over the high courts of judicature, and its dependence on the Supreme Government in questions bearing on Acts passed by the Viceroy in Council, or on old Acts of Parliament. These restrictions should be largely modified, and the number of local legislatures should be increased in accordance with the tenour of the Indian Council's Act of 1861. That Act has hitherto been more or less disregarded; and yet there can be no difficulty in forming in any province a legislative body fit to deal with all local questions. On any law, passed by such a body, the Viceroy's final decision, if adverse, should not be pronounced until the local government had had time to clear up his doubts and answer as far as they could his objections.

Even in non-regulation provinces like the Punjab Mr. Grey would strengthen the Executive by an admixture of official and non-official councillors. In the case of Bengal itself, he sees no reason for divorcing the so-called non-regulation provinces of Assam and Chota Nagpore from the Bengal Government. In every Government, indeed, he would have a local legislature, "separate from, though of course comprising, the executive authority."

Mr. Grey goes on to describe the extent and character of the work devolving on the Government of Bengal—that is, of provinces containing between forty and fifty millions of people within a space of more than 240,000 square miles. His survey brings him to the conclusion that it is "simply impossible for any one man, with such a staff as has hitherto been allotted to the Government of Bengal, to do tolerable justice to the enormous mass of work, and to the important and varied interests which the head of the Bengal Government has to deal with." In fact, the amount of work now thrown upon his hands is greater than that which devolved on the Supreme Government at the time when Lord Dalhousie first proposed to divide it between the Governor-general and the members of his Council. In 1853 he was helped by a staff of four chief and four under-secretaries, besides three members of Council; whereas in 1867 the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal had a staff of one secretary, two under-secretaries, and a Public Works' Secretariat. Again, the civil staff of the Madras Government comprises two members of Council, two chief and two under-secretaries, besides a Public Works' Secretariat, whose work must be half as heavy as that of the Bengal Government. The only wonder is "that the Lieutenant-governor and his Secretariat have not long ago broken down."

How is this to be remedied? Certainly not by placing Bengal once more under the Governor-general, who ought, as Lord Dalhousie declared, "to be what his title imports, the Governor-general of India," and to be "relieved altogether from the labour of administering the details of a local government." The business of the central government has increased immensely since 1853; and that of the two governments is now three or four times greater than it was when Lord Dalhousie held that the same man could not properly discharge the twofold functions of Governor-general and Governor of Bengal. Moreover, his lordship never thought that the local business which still remained in the Viceroy's hands would remain there for ever after, when the new provinces had become ripe for governments of their own.

The true policy should be a forward one. Place Bengal on the same footing as Bombay and Madras: "A Governor in Council will have more weight with the public, and more weight with the Government of India, than a Lieutenant-governor can ever have." He will be stronger to govern, stronger to secure full justice for his people: the business of government will be better done, on the principle of a formal division of labour between the members of the Council, a principle which has worked well in the case of the Supreme Government. Raise the status of the Local Government, and the administrative machinery would work more smoothly, while the line between the two governments would be at once more clearly seen and more carefully respected.

With regard to Assam, Mr. Grey would link it to Bengal by the same kind of tie that unites Sindh to Bombay. The Commissioner of Assam should be subject to no control but that of the Bengal Government, with which Assam is naturally connected both by position and commercial interests; the latter depending on Calcutta for all present and future advantage. There is nothing which the Supreme Government can fairly do for Assam which the Bengal Government cannot do as well, and there are some things which the latter could do better. European enterprise in Assam being for the most part conducted from Calcutta, the transfer of that province to the Central Government would cause needless inconvenience to the European planters and their friends. What Assam wants is a labouring population, and that once obtained, her material prosperity would advance at the same pace under any form of government.

Touching the seat of supreme government, Mr. Grey holds that the two governments should not always be together in Bengal; in other words, that the Government of India should not be tied down to Calcutta. He also strongly insists on the advantage of letting the Council accompany the Viceroy on his travels. In practice Bengal Proper has already a separate Civil Service. She should also have a separate Medical Department, and a separate Department of Public Works. The Army would remain under the Central Government, but it is a question whether the whole of the Indian Army might not be centralised under one head, with provincial commanders amenable in the long run to that head, but for local purposes subordinate to the Local Governments.

Mr. Grey appends to his own minute a note by Mr. Dampier on Mr. George Campbell's proposed amendments in the Executive machinery of Bengal. The Lieutenant-governor agrees in all the writer's suggestions touching the Secretariat, the Revenue Board, and the Police of Bengal. Mr. Dampier would divide the executive business of Bengal among the members of Council, as is done already in the Viceroy's Executive Council. The Board of Revenue should be abolished, and its duties shared between a member of Council, a Revenue Secretary, and a Chief Commissioner, with some increase of power for the divisional Commissioners. The Secretariat would comprise three departments, each under its own Secretary; namely, the Judicial, the Revenue, and the Miscellaneous. The control of the Police should be restored to the Commissioners of Divisions, whose number should be raised to eleven, three of them for non-regulation districts. The present magistrates should become deputy commissioners, taking charge of the police and other executive business, while their judicial functions would be transferred to a separate department.

Sir H. Durand's supplementary minute demurs to Mr. Maine's praise of Simlah, insists that Calcutta is the true centre of European opinion, and maintains against Mr. Grey the need of strengthening the central authority rather than that of the local governments. Instead of giving Bengal a council, he would take theirs away from Bombay and Madras. He would not encourage the local governments "to assume the position of independent, or at best loosely Confederate States."

Next comes one more minute from the pen of Sir J. Lawrence. In spite of the majority against him, he adheres to his own opinion on the proper government for Bengal, endorsed as that opinion is by his late colleague, Sir W. Muir. The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has, in fact, more weight than the other governors, through the support he gains from "the immediate presence of the Government of India." If the work now thrown on the Lieutenant-governor be as heavy as he asserts, of which the Viceroy is not at all certain, a Council would increase instead of lessening it. This Sir J. Lawrence attests from his own experience. The true remedy lies in relieving the Lieutenant-governor of some part of his "very extensive territories;" Assam, for instance, and perhaps Behar, with part of the province of Benares. Sir J. Lawrence denies that his Government has ever unduly interfered with the Government of Bengal. Mr. Grey's reasoning "amounts to a claim that he should say which are the matters wherein the Government of India may legitimately interfere." The latter might just as reasonably urge the same claim against the Home Government.

Sir J. Lawrence foresees grave difficulties in the way of a full government for Bengal. The High Court would have to be modified. The Public Works Department needs better supervision than that of a local governor. All large questions which arise in Bengal have to be referred to the Governor-general. "Complications and discussions" would surely arise from having two governments with councils at the same place. The pay of the Lieutenant-governor ought however to be raised "nearly on a par" with that of a governor. Sir John flatly dissents from Sir H. Durand's suggestions that lieutenant-governors should be appointed from home, and that Madras and Bombay should lose their councils. He brings forward fresh arguments for abolishing the Local Legislature of Bengal, some of its work being best done by the Lieutenant-governor, and the rest by the Supreme Government. Mr. Maine's arguments in favour of summary legislation for the less advanced provinces meet with the Viceroy's entire approval. Not so does it fare with Mr. Grey's proposals to extend to the whole Government the power of veto on Local Legislatures now wielded by the Viceroy alone. As the appointed representative of the Queen, Sir John utterly objects to such an idea. He next takes pains to show how little time is really wasted on the journeys to and from Simlah, and defends the choice of that place as a good political centre, close to Umballa, whose eminent claims in that respect are "too well known to require explanation." He agrees however with all Sir H. Durand has written in favour of Calcutta, as against any of the old capitals like Agra, Allahabad, or Delhi. And he concludes with a grave warning against the tendency to subject the viceregal authority "to processes which might induce weakness and decay." He believes that there is "as strong a necessity as there ever was, as strong a necessity as there could possibly be, for one central, absolute authority in India"—namely, the Governor-general in Council, and in extreme cases the Governor-general himself. For grave financial reasons, and in view of possible dangers and complications, "widely different from those of 1857, but equally formidable," Sir John earnestly pleads for the continued maintenance of the powers which he hopes his successor will receive from himself entirely unimpaired.

Further papers are contributed by Mr. Bayley, Mr. J. Strachey, and Sir H. Durand. The first-named allows that the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal is overburdened with work, but sees no remedy for that in making him a Governor. He holds that the Viceroy in Council should have power to amend as well as veto provincial Acts. Mr. John Strachey would not assimilate the Government of Bengal to that of Madras, nor would he detach Assam from the former, nor would he abolish the Bengal Legislative Council. But he would ease the hands of the Lieutenant-governor by a system of departments with a minister at the head of each. He agrees with the Viceroy in retaining Calcutta as the nominal seat of Government, and preferring Simlah as a retreat for the hot weather. Summary powers of legislation should be confined, he thinks, to the Indian Government. Sir H. Durand's short minute merely aims to show that the journey to Simlah causes a month's delay in public business.

Two more memoranda close the volume. The first, contributed by Mr. Mangles, defends the position taken up by himself and the majority of last year's Committee on the question of the proper government for Bengal. He protests against bringing forward the Orissa disaster as a reason for a sudden change in a system hitherto worked successfully by men of tried worth like Sir F. Halliday and Sir C. Beadon, and by one man of "surpassing ability"—Sir John Peter Grant. Sir John's successor, Sir C. Beadon, may have been "tempted to remain in harness too long," and to struggle with a burden beyond his failing powers; but after all no human efforts could have saved the "dense cottier population" of Orissa from the extreme results of a famine so widespread and so long foreshadowed. The people of Bengal are very easy to govern. The Lieutenant-governor called by another name would be no abler or stronger than he is now. Give him a larger staff of secretaries who would relieve him from "all labour but that of the mind;" and entrust civil officers of all grades with "larger powers for the definitive disposal of business."

Sir Erskine also defends his former position, by arguing that two full Governments could not live in peace at one capital, and that the Special Committee were all of one mind in retaining Calcutta for the seat of the Supreme Government. Bengal now spends but £5,000,000 on itself out of a revenue of £16,000,000. Under a quasi-independent rule, would not an able governor succeed with the help of Press, bar, and land-owners, in raising a formidable cry of Bengal for the Bengalis? The problem of the day, how best to combine local efforts and local administration under a strong central authority, is only to be solved by limiting the Lieutenant-governor's sphere of action and strengthening his connection with the Government of India. With regard to the Bengal Legislative Council, Sir Erskine justifies the Committee's proposal to abolish it, as a step not really retrograde, but demanded by the conditions of a country still unfit for representative rule. Of the two main classes of laws now needed for India, the first pertaining to broad general principles can best be framed, amended, or digested in England, while the second class naturally falls under the care of an Indian Government. The subordinate governments should have power to make rules and ordinances at their own pleasure, checked by that public opinion which can always express itself through an open durbar. As for the English in Bengal, they have plenty of ways of making their voice heard.

Thus far have spoken the various authorities consulted by Sir S. Northcote. Amidst their conflicting opinions it is easy to see which way sets the tide of contemporary thought regarding the future of the supreme and local governments of India. In spite of the recommendations of the Select Committee we may with good reason predict that Calcutta will not be severed from Bengal, that the latter will be placed on the same administrative footing as Madras and Bombay, that the centre of the Viceregal Government will not long remain in Calcutta, that the Viceroy and his Council will be allowed or required to go on circuit at pretty frequent, if not regular intervals, that Simlah will not be abandoned yet awhile of its viceregal visitors and their train. We should not be greatly surprised to see the North-Western Provinces raised into a full Government, and perhaps incorporated with Oudh. Sindh is possibly ripe for incorporation with Bombay; and some years hence we may expect to see the Punjab ready for a full-blown Governor with a Council. As fast as each "territory"—to use an American equivalent for a like state of things—can be made fit for a separate government, it should pass from under the viceregal sceptre; and so in due time the Viceroy's Government would be recognised as wielding powers akin to those of the American Congress and its President. For all truly imperial purposes he would reign supreme over a cluster of co-equal States.

Notices of Books.

Macmillan's Magazine for July. The Fortnightly Review for July.

In the former of these serials Mr. Clement Markham, Geographer to the Abyssinian Expedition, gives an interesting account of the fall of Magdala, with some noticeable remarks on Theodore himself. That prince himself, we are told, was his own chief engineer. The road across the great Jiddah ravine, a work of vast difficulty, all things considered, was built indeed with the aid of German artisans, who directed the details of blasting and revetting. But it was Theodore alone who traced out the road and organised the labour. Every morning too he himself "commenced work with his own hands." Mr. Markham shares the belief of those who look on Theodore as the victim of some misunderstanding with regard to the surrender of his prisoners and the supposed acceptance of his offered cattle. Be that as it may, it was not Sir R. Napier who deceived the King. The writer closes a spirited account of Theodore's last stand at the gate and his crowning act of suicide, with a description of the dead man's appearance:—

The body was that of a man of medium stature, well built, with broad chest, small waist, and muscular limbs. The hair was much dishevelled, crisp and coarse, and done in three high plaits, with little stumpy tails behind. The complexion was dark for an Abyssinian, but the features showed no trace of negro blood. The eyebrows had a peculiar curve downwards and over the nose, and there was a deep curved furrow in the centre of the forehead. The nose was aquiline and finely cut, with a low bridge; the lips thin and cruel; the face, though thin, rather round than oval. The once changeful eyes had lost their meaning—one closed, the other staring. The scanty beard and moustache contained many grey hairs. Teodoros was born in 1818, and was consequently in his fiftieth year.

Mr. Giffen's paper in the Fortnightly on the "Question of Central Asia," is the work of a man who has made Russian politics a special study for some time past, and in so doing has not learned to exaggerate the strength of Russia or to under-rate that of England. There is nothing of the alarmist in the following sentences:—"Indian politicians, coolly taking stock of what is occurring, cannot but observe that, empire for empire, India is stronger than Russia. This may not be the Russian belief, but it is the fact nevertheless. The Indian revenue is nearly as large as the Russian, though Indian taxes are very much lighter; the population is larger than that of Russia, including millions of warlike tribes as effective at least as the Cossacks, which form so large a part of the Russian army; and India is backed by England, the strongest State in the world in an economical view, which means the strongest

State for any material contest. The question, then, is hardly one on which the existence of the Indian Empire need depend, provided due care be taken. Indian politicians likewise do not fail to observe that if India is exposed to a new danger, Russia is also exposed. By creating within our reach a new and important province of the empire, Russia has given a hostage to England of no little value." But in going on to recommend the conquest of Afghanistan as "a new means of exercising pressure" on the conquerors of Turkistan, the essayist seems to lose his moral and intellectual footing. To say nothing of the sheer injustice of such a measure, we are utterly blind to its usefulness, whether from the strategical or the political point of view. We hold that nothing could be more insane than to waste time and strength in annexing a country which can be turned to far better account in other ways. We can at any moment keep Russia at a distance by enabling the Affghans to bar her advance. We might even at the last pinch hold Affghanistan ourselves. But to go and take the country now on the mere chance of a Russian invasion to come, would certainly increase the chances of Russian success by adding one more conquered people to the list of our probable foes. If we are stronger than Russia, that is no reasoning for wantonly weakening ourselves by taking up a position so far in advance of our natural base. What safer policy can there be than to hold the line of the Indus, and keep on good terms with those small frontier States that ought to serve as buffers against the shock of an inroad from Central Asia, if ever that shock should come. It is not at all likely to come during the next hundred years, and meanwhile India would be paying a pretty penny for the possession of a post which, in time of need, would prove to us a more fatal snare than Sebastopol did to Russia in the Crimean war.

British India Classics. Edited by W. J. Jeaffreson, M.A., Oxon. Vol. I.—Scott's Lady of the Lake. (Cantos I. and II.) Vol. II.—Gray's Poems.

Here we have the first two volumes, handy of size and neatly printed, of a series of class-books meant primarily for native students in Indian schools and colleges, but available also, it may be, for English scholars at home. The editor, formerly Principal of the Elphinstone Institution at Bombay, seems to have discharged his share of the undertaking with much care and skill in the conveying of needful knowledge and the suggesting of just ideas. The notes are perhaps a little overdone, as such things are apt to be, but they are almost always pertinent, clear in meaning, and betray a considerable amount of philological learning and critical insight. They are excellently adapted for home students. For native Indian learners we should have liked to see more frequent reference made to points of analogy in some at least of the Indian languages. Many of the words and idioms, might surely have been illustrated, by means of Sanskrit, for instance, and its modern offshoots. In some cases indeed this has been done, but might not the practice have been carried further? On the other hand, the references to Latin and Teutonic sources are very full and appropriate. In the notes on the "Lady of the Lake," a useful analysis of the story is interwoven—a great help to the foreign learner. Gray's Poems are carefully arranged in the order of their composition, and a concise biography is followed by a critical estimate, which helps the student to draw his own conclusions from the opposite opinions of former critics, and Mr. Jeaffreson's own remarks thereon. On the whole his estimate of Gray does far more justice to that exquisite lyric poet than his estimate of Scott does to him whom Byron called "the Ariosto of the North." In the latter instance he leans too much on Mr. Carlyle's one-sided rules of criticism. If Scott, as he implies, was not a genuine poet, because he expressed too little of his own inner thoughts and deeper feelings, showed "no consciousness of a high message to his fellow men," and gave up writing verse when it ceased to sell, what are we to say of Homer, Shakespeare, and other poets, who painted life as objectively as Scott himself? Mr. Palgrave's praise of Scott may be extravagant, but we should have thought that no impartial reader would have denied the author of Marmion a high place among genuine poets. It is too much the fashion in these days to look for profound thought, minute realism, and scientific dissection of self, in poetry, as well as in other walks of Art. But they who regard the poet, as above all things an artist, clothing his ideas in beautiful shapes, will find room in the same Valhalla for Scott and Wordsworth, Byron and Shelley, Moore and Tennyson. One star may differ from another star in glory; but they are all stars notwithstanding.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE GOVERNMENT STUD DEPARTMENT.

The Englishman understands that the Government are about to appoint a commission to inquire into and report upon the Government Stud Department. Considering the complaints that have for years been made by commanding officers of cavalry regiments and batteries of artillery of the impossibility of procuring the stamp of horse they require from the Government studs, we trust that the very important question of entirely doing away with the present expensive establishments will not be passed over by the committee. The present Stud Department has been confessedly a failure; it becomes then a matter of necessity to consider in what way the supply of horses required for the Indian Army can be most easily and economically furnished. A century ago the Punjab, Rajpootana, Central India, the Deccan, and other districts in the North-West furnished quantities of animals with sufficient breeding and bone for remount purposes, whilst Cabul and Turkistan annually contributed a considerable supply of horses good enough for native cavalry remounts. As the exportation of horses from Cabul has been almost put a stop to by the prohibition lately issued by Azim Khan, and as the Russians are not likely to allow the further export of horses from Turkistan and Central Asia, these sources of supply may be at once dismissed from the calculation. When at the commencement of the late Abyssinian Expedition the Government ordered an increase of thirty-six men to every regiment of native cavalry it was found in many instances impossible to obtain satisfactory remounts either amongst the studs or country breeds for this comparatively small body of men. We may conclude, therefore, that these sources of supply are also at present inadequate, and the question therefore resolves itself into either importation from England, the Cape, or Australia, or the encouragement of the breeding of a better description of animal by the native breeders. That this latter plan is the most desirable, if properly carried out, we think few would deny, for the immediate benefit of having a supply in the country itself in case of any emergent demand, is self-evident, to say nothing of the risks of importation and the length of time that it takes to get an imported horse into working condition after a bad passage. But to encourage native breeders Government must be prepared to go to some considerable immediate expense, which would, however, be gradually recouped by the abolition of the present expensive studs. The first expense necessary would be to import from England annually for several years about twenty stud horses, but of a superior description to those now imported, and which should cost on an average nearly one thousand pounds each. These should not be selected at present by a London horse-dealer, but by a committee at the different sales and shows of thoroughbred stock throughout the United Kingdom, or from private persons, and after being passed as sound by a veterinary surgeon, should be forwarded with as little delay as possible overland to this country. These horses should then be located in different parts of the country where the best mares are to be found, care being taken to select the stallion for each district most likely to nick with the breed of mares in it. They should travel round the district at the proper season, a small fee only being charged for the services of the horse, the Government having the option of purchasing the produce at a fixed price when three years old. To encourage the breeders to take better care of the mares and foals, annual shows should be held, at which really good prizes should be awarded to those whose animals were in the best condition, and showed evidence of most attention having been bestowed upon them. The districts of the stallions should from time to time be changed, and the best filly foals should be selected as future breeding mares. To produce a sufficient supply of remounts under these circumstances must at any rate be a work of time, and as the demands are immediate we must at present look to importation. It seems to us that a new field of importation has been opened up by the establishment of the present line of large transports, which during that part of the year when they are not employed in conveying troops might be very advantageously used for the conveyance of horses from England to this country. It is well known that cavalry remounts can be purchased in almost any quantity in England and Ireland on an average of from twenty to twenty-five pounds each, the latter being the price allowed by Government, and as one of the transports should be able to carry three hundred horses, or even more, the cost of transport to this country should not exceed ten pounds per horse. According to the rates at present charged for horses for the Indian market in Australia and at the Cape, the price of each animal landed in India averages fully forty pounds, exclusive of the risk of loss on the voyage, which would be comparatively small by the transport and overland route. It seems to us, therefore, that until the system of breeding in the country as recommended above is thoroughly established, the cheapest and best market for Indian remounts is to be found in England.

TEA IN THE NEILGHERRIES.

The Madras Times holds it for certain that had the Neilgherries had the advantage of a commissioner, who would have made it his business to do for the planters there what Mr. Jacobson did for Java, we have no doubt that great losses, especially in tea seed, would have been avoided; and the results of the cultivation up to the present time would have been much more satisfactory than they are. The Government appear to have given no assistance to the Neilgherry planters, and whatever success has been achieved is due entirely to private enterprise. In Java, however, we find Mr. Jacobson was encouraged and assisted in every way by the local Government. He says "the third circumstance which came most powerfully to my aid" (in the introduction of tea into Java) "was the unceasing kind and benevolent support and treatment that I had the honour to experience from his Excellency the Commissary-General, Viscount Du Bus de Gisignies. This gave me the opportunity annually of experimenting upon the before-mentioned 500 tea plants, from month to month, placing them out in various directions in the Preanger Government gardens, and in this manner making observations upon them every year. I shall always bring to my recollection the name of this nobleman with the highest esteem, and the most sincere gratitude. By his assistance I was enabled to bear up against the difficulties and oppositions wherewith I so immediately had to contend, and already in 1829 to produce both green and black tea—yes, and even Souchong and Pekoe." The Governor-General of Java also gave every assistance. A most interesting fact is that in February, 1839, Mr. Jacobson brought a number of genuine Fokeen tea plants from China to Java. We do not think any of these have reached the Neilgherries. In Java they were a great success; they were planted at a place called Tjis-roopen, and from the abundance of seed they produced were the origin of hundreds of thousands of the choicest tea plants. At Ootacamund and Coonoor the China plant is, we believe, considered the worst of all; whereas these Fokeen tea plants, although it was at first asserted on their arrival in Java that they were exactly the same as the Japan plants, very soon showed their superiority. This is an important circumstance, because if the Fokeen plant is really so valuable for seeding, the sooner it is introduced on the Neilgherries the better. The difficulty appears at present to be the want of fresh seed. After Mr. Jacobson had succeeded in introducing the cultivation, he began to look about him for manipulators. He very soon found that in Java the search for Chinese who understood both the culture and manufacture of tea was fruitless; only here and there could he find a man who could pluck, roll, and dry the leaves, and then the produce did not pay. He says, "It is worthy of remark that now no more than then, notwithstanding every encouragement, no Chinese who had come direct from China were to be found in Java, who knew how to make merchantable tea, or, rather, tea merchantable, which is a different thing. The only cause probably that can be assigned for this is, that proper and qualified tea makers have seldom or ever from the first betaken themselves out of the country." The Government of Java therefore directed him to do the best thing possible, viz., to go to China and bring everything—seeds, planters, manufacturers, and chest makers. It must be borne in mind that this was not only a difficult but a dangerous affair; but he had the good fortune in two years to transport hundreds of seeds and plants, and eventually, in 1832, all the workmen, planters, and manipulators that were required, and hundreds of thousands of tea plants to Wanajassa. The Chinamen he brought were quiet, industrious, and respectable people. Mr. Jacobson repeated this expedition in 1833, and with such fortunate results that he arrived again in February of that year with another set of workmen and with millions of seeds from China. Tea planters on the Neilgherries will be glad to know how far the transit of so much tea seed was successful so many years ago, and it would be well to inquire how it is so much seed is at present rendered perfectly useless by the operation of "sweating" during the journey from Calcutta to Madras and on to the hills. The reason is that sufficient care is not exercised. The bags of seed should be constantly turned and the air allowed to get at them. They should never be heaped up in a mass. Mr. Jacobson reports that, notwithstanding the dangers and difficulties of every kind, thirty-five years ago the greater part of the seeds taken to Java from China lived, and the workman, each in his own department, became skilled, and a healthy state of affairs by energy and perseverance was established. Let us hope that similar good fortune may attend the efforts of the Neilgherry tea planters.

THE BHAMO EXPEDITION.—The Rangoon Gazette hears that the King of Burmah has ordered the whole of the Bhamo officials, except the new Governor, to be sent to Mandalay in chains at once. The official who accompanied Captain Sladen to Bhamo, and who proved himself most useful to the party on the voyage up, has been promoted by the King, who is sparing no pains to show that he is friendly to British interests, however much his officials may be inclined to oppose the expedition. The same paper states that Mr. Gordon, Executive Engineer at Prome, has been directed by telegraph from Rangoon to join Captain Sladen, to supply, we presume, the place of Captain Williams.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, June 11.—It is at it again. I mean the rain, which came pouring down in grand style the night before last, continued to pour all night, and kept on pouring until late yesterday afternoon, when there was a clearance up, which however seems, from the dense white mist now enveloping this place, likely to be but a very temporary clearance. The Abyssinian expedition is considered to have redounded to the credit of the native troops sent from this side of India. None of the Bombay regular native regiments were sent to the front, but positioned along the line of route, and the so-called Beloochees happen to be mostly Pathans from Kohat and the other Punjab districts west of the Indus. The only tidings your correspondent has heard from Bunnoo are that Dr. Mackertich is out of all danger, and doing well. The "Doctor" from Kohat, and another Medico from some other neighbouring station, were affording the necessary medical aid, but as yet none of the assassins—for the belief is there were more than one—have been arrested or traced out. The strange story told by the Central Indian Times, "on the most unexceptionable authority," that Sir Richard Temple is to return to the Central Provinces as Lieutenant-Governor, as soon as the Supreme Government shall have matured a scheme for the annexation of the Berars (Hyderabad) and their amalgamation, as also that of the southern Mahratta country, with the Central Provinces, in order to give Sir Richard Temple a dominion worthy of his sway, is perfectly true. But as Government has not yet completed a scheme for the annexation of the Berars, or any other portion of the Nizam's dominions, nor conceived a notion of doing anything of the kind, your Central India contemporary will have to wait some time before he sees Sir Richard Temple re-translated to the Central Provinces, or those provinces erected into a Lieutenant-Governorship. And now for a short pregnant paragraph. There is no doubt that if the Disraeli Ministry remains in Sir Stafford Northcote will come out as Viceroy. Colonel Herbert left this a fortnight ago for Bombay en route to Bagdad, and I have not heard that there has been any message sent after him to stop him on the way. I mention the Colonel's departure, for I have seen it stated that the Hon. Mr. Elliot, British Ambassador at Constantinople, intimated that Sir Arnold Kemball's departure for England just now would be incompatible with the interests of the public service. But whether incompatible or not, Sir Arnold Kemball requires to go home through ill-health, and the ambassador's opinion, therefore, is not likely to keep him in Turkish Arabia. The question of a gold currency—ay, that's the question! "Whether it's better"—but the subject is not one for parody. Your correspondent was under the impression that by this time everything would have been settled; but all he can learn is that there is to be no hurry, no incontinent haste, no reckless interference with the present state of currency matters; and that if, after the most mature deliberation, it should appear desirable to take any steps towards the admission of gold, they will be taken cautiously and in a manner to, if possible, preclude any evil results. You will have heard ere this that though the Ameer of Bokhara may—it is possible—be dead, the latest authentic intelligence from Bokhara (dated 11th May) represents him as alive, in active health, and anything but disposed to enter on fatal hostilities with the Russians, who were represented to have slain him in battle. He appears to be, with relation to existing circumstances, the wisest man in Bokhara; for the whole of his fanatic subjects seem bent on exposing themselves to defeats by civilised and disciplined forces they make no suitable effort to fit themselves to encounter. All that Russia seems to want from them at present is consent to a line of posts on the Oxus, intended in all probability to be extended to a point on the Turkoman shore of the Caspian. This would hem in and restrain the worst of the tribes dealing in human flesh and blood, and so far the march of Russia would be that of humanity; but, despite this, Russia's movements are exciting great apprehension in Persia (notwithstanding it is from Persia the tribes mostly wrest their captives), and may eventually lead to results there. The "news" that the Ameer of Bokhara had been killed in battle, and replaced by the Russians putting his nephew on the musnud, was probably concocted in Cabul, where, though they wear long beards, there are excellent hands at a "shave."—Indian Daily News Correspondent.

BAREILLY, June 14.—I beg to bring to your notice for the good of the Indian public and English gunsmiths that in this city in broad daylight English gunsmiths' names are engraved on Monghyr fowling-pieces, nicely done up, much after the English finish, but of the worst iron; these guns are often known to burst and cause damage to the unfortunate beings firing them (I have seen one burst myself). The public ought to be warned against purchasing such weapons, and soldiers in India ought in like manner to be cautioned. It is a gross injustice to the English gun makers, who may have taken out patents for expensive guns. How has this escaped the notice of the police authorities of the place? But what else can be expected from the class of subordinate inspectors that are now in the police? scarcely a dozen English, Irish or Scotchmen in the subordinate grades of the North-West police force. From the 26th ultimo to the present moment we have had very hot weather; the intervening showers of rain have stirred up a breeze and cooled the air for the time being, but towards evening it is exceedingly hot.

NYNEE TAL, June 15.—Some three months ago I remember having seen some correspondence in the Delhi Gazette regarding native attempts at English letter writing, and some rather odd specimens were given. Perhaps the following attempt may not be altogether uninteresting to some of your readers, especially to the baboo who so warmly advocated the cause of his countrymen:—"Honoured sir,—In reply to your letter Dated 7th March 1868, with enclose an order on Agra Rs. 25. Sir wrote me those word you get first in my under Rs. 40 therefore I humbly beg to say before I am only one man, now I am two man, because I have been marriage, therefore I have great expence more than before. Sir, I am present in your Honour [Heaven forbid that this should be true] at Railway station on the 20th instant with my wife. I am very sorry to say that I keep my house on 200, and I shall ever pray for your long life and prosperity." Judging from the length of time which this effusion took to reach me it would seem that its composition must have cost the writer a terrible effort of genius. He certainly puts forth a very novel principle—namely, that when a man gets married his employer must maintain his wife by immediately raising the pay of the husband, on the ground that he has now become "two man" instead of only one. I fear the writer will get but few to sympathise with him in the deep regret which he expresses at having been unfortunate enough to be obliged to keep his two hundred rupee house, instead of having been compelled to sell it, the more especially as the misfortune was the consequence of his having received an increase of pay and an advance of twenty-five rupees.

SAHARUNPORE, June 17.—After a fortnight's hot and sultry weather we were at last favoured with a pretty good shower on Monday night, but as it did not last long, the weather has become hotter and more disagreeable. The clouds however still hover over our heads and predict more rain, which will be highly acceptable. The good news of the opening of the Railway from Meerut to Umballa at one stretch in January next communicated by you the other day is corroborated by the railway officials here. It is also added, and by those whose word ought to be relied on, that the engine will commence running as early as October next, and that the Viceroy when returning from Simla in next November will proceed down by rail through this, but from what we see here we can hardly believe that the contractors can be as good as their word. How far they will fulfil this promise, which some consider to be a mere excuse to postpone the opening of the line into Saharunpore in next October, time only can show. The East India Railway Company opened their line by small sections, but why the Delhi Railway authorities do not pursue the same course is a mystery that cannot be easily got at. The meeting "to give the natives the first lesson in the art of self-government," I mean the meeting of the municipality, about the constitution of which so much has already been said in your correspondence columns, has not as yet been held. I hope to give you some particulars of it when it takes place. It is rumoured that the Archdeacon of Calcutta will pay us a visit shortly.

Miscellaneous.

ILLNESS OF MR. TREVOR.—The Indian Daily News regrets to hear that Mr. Trevor, member of the Board of Revenue, Calcutta, has been suffering from palsy for the last few days.

OPIMUM.—At the opium sale on 10th June 2,300 chests Behar opium were sold at an average price of Rs. 1,439, and 1,700 Benares at Rs. 1,412.

OUTRAGES IN JEHANABAD.—The sub-division of Jehanabad has lately been the scene of three or four dacoities, the perpetrators of which have baffled the police.

RAILWAY POLICE.—The Supreme Government we hear have sanctioned the formation of a separate railway police force for the line of railway from Ghazeeabad to Meerut, as recommended by the Government of the North-West Provinces.

THE REBEL PRINCE OF BURMAH.—The Englishman hears from Burmah that the Meingoon Mengtha has succeeded in collecting a force of 8,000 Shan and Karens on the frontier, and that the Royal Council have been called upon to devise measures of defence.

THE EX-NAWAB OF TONK.—Mr. I. T. Pritchard, barrister-at-law and editor of the Delhi Gazette, has been retained by the ex-Nawab of Tonk to plead his cause before the public. Mr. Pritchard apparently charges all the political officers with having been bribed, and the young Thakoor of Lawa with plotting against the ex-Nawab.

GRANT TO THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—We hear that the Government of India has authorised the grant of Rs. 12,000 as compensation to the Agricultural Society, Calcutta, for the value of the improvements made in the land in the Government Botanical Gardens, which has been resumed by Government from the occupation of the said society.

MR. G. W. KELLNER, Inspector-general of Accounts, will, it is said, soon take up the accounts of the Bengal Presidency and the North-Western Provinces for inspection.

ARRIVALS FROM FURLOUGH.—The undermentioned officers have reported their return from England:—Major C. F. Browne, of the Bengal Staff Corps, Deputy Judge Advocate General, date of arrival at Bombay, Jan. 16. Capt. H. Macdonald has furnished a report of his arrival at Bombay on May 9.

MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS.—The following gentlemen have been elected by the householders of Dalhousie to serve as the Municipal Committee of that station for the years 1868-69:—Capt. R. Home, R.E., and Mr. R. Gereson. Capt. H. R. Worsley to be a municipal commissioner for the town of Dacca.

ABSCONDING MEDICAL SERVANTS.—The undermentioned hospital apprentices, having absconded, are struck off the establishment of the subordinate medical department, from the dates specified:—William Davenport, Oct., 1864; John Gleeson, Jan., 1867; John Blackburn, Aug., 1866; Fred. Augustus Catania, May 5, 1867; Wm. Bernard Law Good, April 11, 1867; and Wm. Henn, Jan. 1867.

PROPOSED RAILWAY TO DARJEELING.—The question of a railway to Darjeeling is likely to remain somewhat longer in abeyance. The Secretary of State has declined to come to a decision as to the advisability of guaranteeing the extension of the Eastern Bengal Railway to the foot of the hills, pending a further report on the whole subject. This report was called for in January last.

CURATORS OF THE INDIAN MUSEUM.—We (Indian Daily News) understand that Dr. Stoliczka, Palæontologist of the Geological Survey, and Mr. V. Ball, also of the same department, have been both appointed joint officiating curators of the Indian Museum, in the place of Dr. Colles, resigned. The salary of the abovementioned officers has been fixed at Rs. 500 for the former, and Rs. 250 for the latter, Dr. Stoliczka being the responsible curator.

RETIREMENT OF MAJOR GRANT.—The following notification appears in general orders dated Simla, June 9:—Major James Augustus Grant, C.B., of the Bengal Staff Corps, 2nd in command, wing officer 4th Goorkha Regiment, lately attached to the Intelligence Department with the Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, is permitted to retire from the service on the pension of a captain, with effect from the date of his departure from Zoulla.

THE QUEEN OF BHOPAL'S PRESENTS TO HER MAJESTY.—The Secretary of State intimates her Majesty's acceptance of the two fans presented to the Queen and Princess of Wales by her Highness the Begum of Bhopal. The fan for the Queen was worked by the Begum's own hands; and the one designed for the Princess Alexandra by the girls of the Victoria school, which the Begum has established for female education in her territories.

A CAUTION.—The following notification appears in the Calcutta Gazette:—"Intending pilgrims and other persons going to Pooree are hereby warned that the number of pilgrims already at that place is in excess of the accommodation available, and those who go now will encounter great hardships, will probably be subjected to extortionate charges, and be exposed to the danger of an outbreak of cholera."

EARNINGS OF THE EAST INDIA RAILWAY.—The earnings for the past week ending June 7, 1868, on 1,131 miles open, amounted to £36,741. 4s. 7d., or £32. 9s. 9d. per mile open, showing an increase of £525. 14s. 10d., or 9s. 4d. per mile open more than the corresponding week of last year. The returns for the first twenty-three weeks of 1868 show a decrease of £148,695. 14s. 2d. as compared with the corresponding period of 1867.

A COOL NOTION.—The latest thing out in American enterprise is a scheme for supplying London with country air by means of gutta-percha tubes, through which the fresh air from the Surrey Hills is to be sucked by steam power. We fear the project will hardly bear extension to India; but fancy the luxury of turning on a supply of mountain breeze, fresh from Kussowlie or Darjeeling according to choice, a constant supply of each being always on tap on the premises!—Pioneer.

POLITICS IN CENTRAL ASIA.—Fresh complications seem likely to arise in Central Asia, all tending to confirm the position which recent events have given the Russians. The Meer of Shehr-i-Subz, the birth-place of Timoorleng, desirous of taking advantage of the quarrel between the Russians and the Bokhariots, ordered a levy en masse, and marched on Samarcand with a force reported to amount to 40,000 horsemen and footmen. Should this rumour prove true, we shall probably hear in a few weeks of Shehr-i-Subz having been occupied by a Russian brigade.

SALES OF INDIAN TEA.—At the sales of Indian tea on the 12th and 13th May, 2,665 packages were disposed of, 354 of which comprised teas from the gardens of the Assam Company. Former rates were maintained. Fine teas were firmer than at the previous sale, and the common descriptions were in strong demand. The next sales were to have been held on 9th June. We take these particulars from the circular of Messrs. William, James, and Henry Thomson, to which we are also indebted for the following figures:—During 1867 the imports of Indian tea into the United Kingdom amounted to 7,094,400 lbs.; deliveries, 6,223,040 lbs.; stock on December 31, 2,852,880 lbs. Compared with previous years, the imports from Jan. 1 to April 30 are given as under :—1866, 2,100,647 lbs.; 1867, 2,401,680 lbs.; 1868, 2,793,280 lbs. From 1st to 13th May six vessels had arrived at London and one at Liverpool, with cargoes aggregating 318,102 lbs. Up to April 3, thirty-seven vessels were reported at sea with 2,159,072 lbs. of Indian tea.

TALK OF A FAREWELL DURBAR AT LAHORE.—We hear from Lahore that several of the native chiefs of the Punjab have submitted a proposal to the Viceroy to hold a durbar at Lahore, or at one of the Sikh cities on his Excellency's return from Simla in October next. We have not heard what decision the Governor-general has come to, but it would seem to be the object of the chiefs to pay a farewell tribute of respect and affection to a ruler in whom they profess to feel a pride.

ATTEMPTED SUTTEE.—A correspondent writes us that about the middle of last month a Sutte was attempted at Bicaner. Arrangements had been made secretly, the funeral pile was ready, and the woman was marching out of one of the city gates to offer herself up to the devouring flames, when the Rajah received information and immediately issued orders for the prevention of the sacrifice. "Bicaner has managed better than Cawnpore, and indeed great credit is due to the Rajah for the active steps taken by him in the matter."

MAGISTERIAL POWERS: NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—The undermentioned officers are invested with the powers of a magistrate, and with those of a deputy collector :—Messrs. F. W. Porter, W. H. Hudson, and G. R. C. Williams. The undermentioned officers are invested with the powers of a sub-magistrate of the 1st class :—Messrs. T. F. Harkness, W. T. Martin, and G. E. Knox, extra assistant-commissioner, Mr. E. P. Finn. The undermentioned officer is invested with the powers of a deputy collector for the trial and decision of cases :—Mr. A. Robinson. The powers conferred by the notification from this department, No. 187, dated Feb. 28, 1868, on Mr. F. Kilvert, officiating deputy collector of Gurhwal, subject to the result of this year's examination, are withdrawn.

CHOLERA IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The Central India Times says the cholera wave has at last swept into the military cantonment of Kamptee, and has already gathered to itself a number of victims. In one day there were as many as ten men of a native infantry corps brought into hospital, of whom three died within twelve hours. As yet we have not heard that it has appeared among the Europeans. In the cantonment and station of Jubbulpore, however, it has affected both European and native alike, but the cases are not many. In the Seonce district, where it first broke out, among the gangs of coolies working on the trunk road, it is spreading daily in a wider and wider circle, and there panic is at present master of the situation.

ALLOWANCES TO SOLDIERS' WIVES, &c.—The following notification has appeared, dated Simla, June 9 last :—With reference to the limit assigned by G.O.P.C. No. 667, dated Dec. 31, 1850, which renders subsistence allowance for wives or children inadmissible to non-commissioned officers and soldiers whose allowances, consolidated or otherwise, exceed a given amount, the Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council is pleased to extend that limit from Rs. 75 to Rs. 100 per mensem. This decision will have retrospective effect as regards any non-commissioned officers or soldiers whose aggregate pay and allowances were raised above the former limit of Rs. 75 by the additional pay sanctioned in G.G.O. No. 1,035 of Nov. 1 last, but in no other cases. This order is applicable to the three Presidencies.

THE LATE RAILWAY ACCIDENT AT SAMNUGGUR.—The committee of investigation on the late railway accident at Samnuggur held another sitting this day at the reasonable hour of 11 A.M. Some persons able and willing to furnish evidence attended. Mr. Prestage and his attorney were present. A certain old native gentleman, who enjoys some reputation as a babbler, and holds the somewhat objectionable position of Government contractor, was set to interpret the Bengalee part of the evidence. As another native gentleman was in attendance, we wish the former had been spared his trouble, because his way of doing the work is not very much liked by the community. But we are happy to state the committee behaved, as it should have done, with politeness and discretion.—Indian Mirror, June 15.

THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.—His Lordship the Bishop of Calcutta and chaplain arrived at Peshawur from Murree on June 13. As soon as the Bishop learnt that the Peshawur garrison was entirely without a clergyman, he hastened himself to fill the post the late chaplain left "at his own request." We are at a loss to understand why the garrison at Peshawur should be more objectionable for a chaplain of the Church of England to serve in than for any of the other servants of the State, whose duty compels them, in turn with others, to serve there. We learn that the Bishop intends to remain at Peshawur over two if not three Sundays; and, by taking the course he has in the difficulty into which he has been thrown, we feel assured his Lordship will gain the high esteem and sympathy of the whole garrison.—Delhi Gazette.

THE RAINS IN BENGAL.—It is many years since, according to the oldest inhabitant, the rains came in so early or so heavily. Up to the end of May nearly twice as much rain had fallen as fell in the same period of last year. This made the month comparatively cool and pleasant, the temperature only reaching a maximum of ten degrees below the highest point of last year. Hot weather, properly speaking, we have had none this year. The cool and showery May was of the greatest assistance to the crops. Planters anticipated a bumper season of indigo, and ryots an unexampled rice harvest. A few showers at the beginning of the month were looked for as necessary to prepare the crops for the fortnight of excessive heat which usually precedes the rains. The showers came, but only as the precursor of a fall of rain, which lasted with but slight intermissions from the 6th inst. up to last evening, when the weather seemed to break. So heavy and continuous a downpour has not been known for many years. Its effects on the crops will, it is feared, prove most disastrous. At the Sandheads and along the coast the weather has been rough and stormy.—Englishman, June 15.

SUBSISTENCE ALLOWANCE.—The following despatch on a matter of some interest to the Civil Service of India is published in the Calcutta Gazette :—India-office, London, April 8, 1868. To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-general of India in Council. Sir,—I have considered in Council your financial letter, dated Feb. 20, 1868, No. 46, recommending the adoption of the following revised rates of subsistence allowance for Covenanted Civil Servants throughout India, viz. :—Twelve or more years' standing, Rs. 400 per mensem; more than eight but less than twelve years' standing, 320 ditto; not more than eight years' standing, 250 ditto; and I have to convey to you my approval of your proposition.—I have, &c. (signed)—STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

THE PUNJAB.—The agricultural prospects of the Punjab are this season, up to the latest dates, very favourable. In the Umballa, Sealkot, and Huzara districts harvest operations were completed, and the returns were pronounced to be favourable. In Gurgaon preparations were being made for sowing the autumn crops, and in Rawalpindi and Bunioo the Khureef crops were being sown. The only complaint is from Peshawur, where the crops had been slightly injured by hail. The rainfall had been heaviest in the Simla district, where twenty-three, twenty-two, and fourteen inches were registered respectively at the stations of Kotguri, Kotkhai, and Simla between the 1st April and the 11th June. Prices were highest in the Rawalpindi and Sirsa districts, rising in the former as high as eight and a-half seers of flour of the first sort per rupee.

INTESTATE PROPERTY.—The following notices appear in the Calcutta Gazette :—Notice is hereby given that certain effects belonging to the late Mrs. Elizabeth Augusta Amelia King, who died intestate at Toolseepore, in the town of Cuttack, on April 28 last, are under this Court, and will be made over to any person legally authorised to receive the same. E. W. Molony, Officiating Judge; Judge's Office, Cuttack, June 4. Certain effects belonging to the estate of Mr. H. Walsh, sub assistant surveyor attached to revenue survey, fifth division, and British subject, who died intestate, are in the custody of this Court, and will be made over to any party legally authorised to receive them. All claimants to the estate of the deceased account-holders in or against the favour of the deceased should file complaints within one year from this date to this Court. A. K. Comber, Deputy Commissioner; Gawalparah, May 29.

EXAMINATIONS.—Mr. E. J. Martin, C.E., Executive Engineer, Delhi Division, passed the Examination in the Native Language in June last, according to the Departmental Standard, as laid down in Government of India Circular No. 62, dated the 4th of July, 1867. Lieutenant Whitmore, Royal Engineers, Assistant Engineer, and Mr. W. F. Heath, both of the Raneekhet Division, P. W., N. W. Provinces, passed the Colloquial Examination in Hindustanee on the 23rd of May. The undermentioned officers of the Mysore and Coorg Commission have passed the examination prescribed for assistants in those provinces :—By the Higher Standard.—Mr. H. W. Wellesley, Lieuts. E. S. Ludlow, H. M. S. Magrath, Messrs. E. Shunmoogavaloo Pille, V. Krishnasawmy Moodeliar, and Chuppadhi Soobiah. Mr. J. Beglar, Assistant Engineer, Second Grade, attached to Burrakur Division, passed in Colloquial Hindustanee on the 26th of May; Mr. E. S. B. Pereira, Executive Engineer, Fourth Grade, attached to the Rajshahy Division, passed in the Departmental Standard on the 21st of April, 1868.

THE ATTOCK TUNNEL.—Many of our readers will learn with interest that the Attock Tunnel is a fait accompli thus far at least, that the two parties which have been boring beneath the Indus from opposite sides met on the 5th inst. so nearly that a crowbar in the hand of a man belonging to one party could be grasped by one of the other. These long perforations are now made with such certainty that no precision astonishes us. It is said that the central axes of the Mont Cenis perforations, if produced, would coincide within five-eighths of an inch. Nevertheless there are some feats of science at which no familiarity preserves us from surprise. Whatever may, or may not, be the future utility of the Indus Tunnel, as an engineering tour de force it is undoubtedly honourable to the country. There is something, too, in the circumstances of the work which strikes the imagination. To think of men boring away for years just beneath a furious and mighty river, from whose invasion they were protected only by a thin barrier of more or less porous and friable rock, which barrier every stroke of their pickaxes tended to weaken! It is one thing for a man to walk 300 yards on a tight-rope at a moderate elevation above dry land, and another for him to go the same distance in the same manner over Niagara.—Pioneer, June 12.

POLICE APPOINTMENTS.—In modification of the separate orders, notified in the Calcutta Gazette of June 10, the following gentlemen are appointed to officiate as assistant superintendents of police in the districts mentioned, viz.:—Mr. Beadon, Burdwan; Mr. Burtleson, Gya. Mr. Forbes, assistant superintendent of police, Bhaugulpore, is transferred to Hooghly. Mr. Patch, assistant superintendent of police, Moorsheadabad, is to officiate as district superintendent of police, Rajshahye, during the absence on leave of Mr. Reilly. Dr. Fensworth to be medical officer with the military and police force assembled in Keonjhar. Mr. Farquharson, sub-registrar of Monghyr, to officiate as an assistant superintendent of police in Hazareebaugh. Mr. Fendall to officiate as an assistant superintendent of police in Lohardugga.

PUNJAB FRONTIER FORCE.—The relief movements of the Punjab Frontier Force for the ensuing cold season have now been made public. No. 1 Battery Artillery will move from Dera Ismael Khan to Kohat, No. 2 from Kohat to Bunnoo, and No. 3 from Bunnoo to Dera Ismael Khan. The 1st Punjab Cavalry will march under orders of the Brigadier Commanding the Punjab Frontier Force from Dera Ismael Khan to Bunnoo, the 2nd from Dera Gahzee Khan to Dera Ismael Khan, the 3rd from Kohat to Rajanpore, the 4th from Bunnoo to Kohat, and the 5th from Rajanpore to Dera Gahzee Khan. The 1st Sikh Infantry will move from Kohat to Dera Ismael Khan, and the 2nd from Dera Gahzee Khan to Bunnoo. The 3rd Sikh Infantry will march from Peshawur to Dera Gahzee Khan, whenever the regiment can be spared from that division. The 4th will remove from Dera Gahzee Khan to Bunnoo, when relieved by the 3rd Sikhs. Among the Punjab Infantry Regiments the 1st will move from Dera Ismael Khan to Kohat, the 2nd from Abottobad to Kohat, 3rd from Kohat to Abottabad, the 4th from Dera Ismael Khan to Kohat, the 5th from Bunnoo to Dera Ismael Khan and the 6th from Kohat to Dera Gahzee Khan.

THE WEATHER IN BENGAL.—The weather still continues showery and unsettled. The country presents an appearance which is only seen in ordinary years at the end of July. Wherever the eye turns it is met by wide sheets of water. This of course is most injurious to the crops, and already we are beginning to receive letters from various parts of the country, stating that the crops are "drowned." From the meteorological return issued by the office of the surveyor-general we find that the maximum temperature for the seven days ended June 14 was 87 deg., against 95 deg. last year. The highest point was reached on the 11th inst., but on the 8th the highest reading was only 81 deg. 4 sec., and on the 14th 80 deg. The lowest reading was on the 13th, when the thermometer marked 77 deg. The barometer stood at 29.647 on the 8th, and fell steadily to 29.361 on the 13th. It had risen next day to 29.416. The rain has been excessive, and although we have not yet reached the usual period of the setting-in of the rains, the fall has been up to date nearly half of that for the whole of last year, 32.86 inches, against a total for last year of 72.73 inches. Compared with the average of the last fourteen years, the rainfall to date is even more striking—average to June 14, 15.37 inches; Jan. 1 to June 14, 1868, 32.86 inches.—Englishman, June 18.

A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.—The Englishman cannot agree with the decision of the Government of India regarding the custody of Dr. Forbes Watson's work on the "Textile Manufactures and Costumes of the People of India." We cannot understand on what principle the Governor-general in Council consulted the trustees of the Museum upon the request of the Chamber of Commerce. They were interested parties, and it was naturally to be expected that they would insist on the superiority of their own claim. It will not be contended that the collection could be more safely lodged than in the Museum, but we really see very little practical use in providing for the safety of the work in a place where no one will go to look at it. The interest of the mercantile community in the work is superior to that of the general public. The work is obviously calculated to benefit them directly, and the public rather indirectly through them. But the interests of the public, whatever they may be, are not consulted by placing the work in the Museum. The only ground the Government urged for departing from the course followed in England has been abandoned; and the Governor-general in Council does not in his present communication show any other reason for departing from the express intention of the donors of the collection.

NATIVE OFFICIALS IN THE PUNJAB.—A scheme for improving the position and prospects of native officials in the Punjab has been sanctioned by the Supreme Government. The number of assistant commissioners is to be reduced from fifty-eight effective officers to forty-eight, and the number of extra assistant commissioners will be gradually increased by ten, and divided into classes and grades. The first class will be divided into three grades, of which the first will include three officers on Rs. 800 a month, the second four officers on Rs. 700 a month, and the third six officers on Rs. 600 a month. The second class will contain only two grades, the first consisting of seven officers on Rs. 500, and the second of ten on Rs. 400 a month. The third class likewise contains two grades, the first including sixteen officers on Rs. 300, and the second ten on Rs. 250 a month. The ranks of the extra assistant commissioners will be filled in accordance with the above scheme, as vacancies occur among the assistant commissioners. The offices of Small Cause Court Judge of Hoshiarpore and Peshawur are now declared open to natives; and natives duly qualified by position, character, and attainments are further declared eligible for appointment in special cases to the rank and emolument of assistant commissioners. The scheme, however, requires to be confirmed by the Secretary of State, but there are no just grounds for believing that in this case such confirmation will be withheld.

LATEST NEWS OF MR. COOPER.—Mr. Cooper, who conceived the bold idea of a journey across China, was last heard of at the city of Ching-tu, which is situated about 30 degs. north and 105 degs. east. Mr. Cooper speaks well of this town; he says that for size and appearance it excels any China city he has yet seen. The North China Daily News, among other particulars, furnishes the following:—At Ching-tu Mr. Cooper found the Nepaulesse embassy, whose cavalier treatment by the Emperor has so enraged Sir Jung Bahadur. Its members intended to set out homeward on the 25th March, and Mr. Cooper looked forward to accompanying them, as a forlorn hope, if his journey across Thibet to Sudya should be hindered. We have already mentioned his abandonment of the route he had first marked out across the Koking pass into the Shan territory—a change rendered necessary, it seems, by the disturbed state of that neighbourhood. His present scheme is to cross the south-east portion of Thibet, from the frontier town of Bathang, striking the Brahmaputra in the north-east corner of Assam at Sudya. That town, it will be remembered, was always his intended destination. Only he now intends trying to reach it by a more northerly route than he had at first contemplated. In either case his worst difficulties would begin directly he crossed the frontier—in the former, from the semi-barbarous tribes who dwell between China and Burmah; in the latter from probable official hindrance. After some delay and difficulty he has obtained from the Viceroy a passport through Thibet, which may tend to smooth away obstacles.—Indian Daily News.

PROPOSED CANAL AT RANGOON.—The communication by water between the towns of Rangoon and Tonghoo, along the Pegu and Sittang rivers, is annually interrupted during the hot season, for some months, by the drying up of the Kyatsoo creek connecting these two rivers. As the Government despatch troops by this route, and the principal trade is carried on by it, considerable inconvenience has been frequently caused by the stoppage of the communicating link, and the estimates have, we understand, already been prepared by the public works department for making a canal between the two rivers, navigable by boats at all seasons of the year. The public works department proposed to carry the canal through a line of country which is under water for many months in the year, which is little more than a jungle, and which contains neither towns nor villages. The proposed canal is to be over twenty-two miles in length, and would join the Sittang river at a point where it is still affected by the tidal wave. Luckily, the expense of making this canal has not been as yet incurred, for Captain Lloyd, the deputy commissioner of Rangoon, has just discovered a natural route, by which, at an outlay of about Rs. 20,000, the two rivers can be united, the only cutting required being for about six or seven miles, which can be finished in one season. This new route has the further advantages of passing through a country already studded with villages, and by draining a considerable quantity of land in the neighbourhood of Palgine, would enable about 70,000 acres to be brought into cultivation, thereby causing a large increase in the Government revenue of the district. It would, in addition, again open up the trade with the town of Pegu, which has, owing to the absence of proper communication, almost dwindled into the condition of a village.—Rangoon Gazette.

A BRIDGE OVER THE HOOGHLY.—An ordinary meeting of the justices of the peace for the town of Calcutta was held on the 11th June, Mr. Stuart Hogg in the chair. The business commenced with the discussion of the question of bridging the Hooghly. The chairman stated that the thing to be considered was not whether a bridge was desirable, but whether or not it was feasible. The chief difficulty was that if a road bridge were constructed, the traffic would be so immense that it could not be opened in the centre without great inconvenience to the public; and if a bridge were built that did not open in the centre, the whole of the valuable docks to the north of the bridge would be rendered worthless, and the traffic of steamers and up-country boats would be obstructed. Mr. J. B. Roberts disputed the propriety of discussing such a subject at an ordinary meeting. His opinion was that there should be a bridge across the river at Armenian Ghaut, and that it should be a double bridge, one for the ordinary traffic and one for the railway bridge. With regard to stopping the shipping of the port Mr. Roberts stated that there were only about ten Arab ships, and one or two English ships with broken backs, that ever lay above the Armenian Ghaut; and as for the docks he thought the land there would become so very valuable to the railway company that it might be worth while to afford to throw away the value of the docks in order to hold possession of the land. An objection, however, might be lodged against the bridge, that it would tend to depreciate the value of property in Calcutta, as many people would prefer living in Howrah to Calcutta. He repeated that Calcutta would never be a city worthy of the name until it was extended further to the west. It was now choked and crammed up with narrow lanes and gullies, huts, and other abominations, and the railway would open a new outlet for their overflowing population. On the motion of Mr. Roberts the consideration of the subject was deferred to a special meeting. The Salt Lake scheme was then brought forward, and after considerable discussion it was resolved to grant to the proposed Salt-water Lake Company the concession demanded on the conditions that the company should pay the total expenses incurred upon the conceded portion of the Salt-water Lake up to the date of transfer, that the grant should be brought into cultivation within a specified time, and that the concession should be limited to a period of fifty years.

INCENDIARISM AT CHITTAGONG.—On the 4th June the bungalow of Mr. Carter, the manager of the Chandpore Tea Plantation near Chittagong, was burnt by an incendiary under peculiarly atrocious circumstances. Whoever did the act chose an evening when every servant was out of the place—they having all obtained leave to go to some festival—and fired the thatch at midnight, when he knew Mr. Carter and his assistant, Mr. Simmonds, were in bed, and perhaps asleep. A number of dogs in the house probably saved the lives of these gentlemen, for the barking awoke Mr. Carter, who, getting up and going outside, saw the cook-room, some sixty yards distant, on fire. No sooner had he reached it than he perceived a glimmering light at the further corner of the dwelling-house, as also the shadow of a man on the road. Another moment and the glimmering light became a bright flame, as the fire ran up the roof, but the incendiary had disappeared in the jungle. Mat buildings like these are rapidly consumed, and in less than five minutes nothing but a smoking heap showed where the house had stood. It did not take long for Mr. Carter to rush back to the bungalow to awake Mr. Simmonds and get him outside, but by the time this was done neither could enter the flaming pile again. Not a thing was saved, and barefooted and half-naked these poor fellows, when daylight came, sought refuge in a neighbouring planter's house some two miles off. We hear that the Commissioner, Lord Ulick Browne, is acting with his usual energy, and through the District Superintendent of Police, Mr. King, is trying hard to gain some clue to the outrage. A more diabolical attempt to roast Englishmen alive we never heard of, for the night chosen, when there was no one to give an alarm, shows pretty clearly the intention. A reward of Rs. 1,000, half by Mr. Carter and half by the Government, has been offered, but we fear it is not probable the incendiaries—there were certainly more than one—will be discovered. However, measures may be taken to quarter police on the suspected locality. That measure is all the more necessary because this is not by several the first, though the worst case of incendiaryism directed against the planters in the Chittagong district.—Englishman.

Madras.

RETIREMENT.—The Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India has intimated that Captain R. W. Duff, Madras Staff Corps, having been declared unfit for further service, has been placed on the retired list, on the half-pay of his rank, from February 7, 1868.

ADVANCES FOR BUILDING HOUSES.—It is stated that the benefit of the general order, granting advances for the purpose of building houses, has been extended by the Government to military chaplains, on the terms allowed to combatant officers.

ABOLITION OF THE MADRAS MOUNTED POLICE.—We are informed that the commissioner of police contemplates abolishing this force shortly. The force consists of about twenty-six men. The men will receive a gratuity of one month's pay. They will be provided for as vacancies occur in the foot police.

IMPORTATION OF GRAIN.—We learn that the quantity of food-grain imported into Madras in the week ending June 6 was 2,981 cwt., against 3,032 cwt. for the same period in 1867, 3,046 cwt. in 1866, and 2,236 cwt. in 1865. 3,084 cwts. of food grain were exported last week from Madras.

EMBARKATION OF INVALIDS.—On the morning of the 13th June twenty-eight invalids, two women, and three children of her Majesty's service were to embark from the Custom-house beach, Black Town, on the British ship Copenhagen, for England. Lieut. Agnew, of H.M.'s 16th Lancers, commands the party during the voyage.

BREVET.—Major Keys, 17th Regiment N.I., Major Dixon, 22nd Regiment N.I., Captain (Brevet Major) Hutchison, 20th Regiment N.I., to be Lieutenant-colonels, from June 11, 1868, having completed twenty-six years' service. Captain Buttler, 23rd Regiment L.I., having completed twenty years' service, to be Major, from June 10.

THE GREAT SOUTHERN OF INDIA RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts for the week ending May 2, 1868, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 652-2-0, and for luggage, goods, &c., to Rs. 4,450-13-4, making together, Rs. 13,102-15-4, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 77-15-11. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 11,169-9-0, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 87-15-0.

RICE IN ORISSA.—Rice is now so abundant in Orissa that the rate at which it has hitherto been retailed from the Government stores—viz., a rupee a maund (for common Calcutta rice)—is too high any longer to attract purchasers. Government has, accordingly, sanctioned a reduction to 12 annas a maund for common, and to Rs. 1-8 a maund for the finest rice.—Pioneer, June 3.

TESTIMONIALS TO MR. C. B. SAUNDERS.—Mr. C. B. Saunders, the new Resident of Hyderabad, has been presented with a valedictory address in English, Hindustani, and Canarese by the native and European community of Bangalore. Mr. Saunders was also entertained at a farewell dinner by Mr. Bowring and the other officers of the Mysore Commission.

THE REVISION OF THE REVENUE AND MAGISTERIAL ESTABLISHMENTS IN MADRAS.—The Government of India has sanctioned Mr. Pelly's scheme for revising the revenue and magisterial establishments in Madras, and has recommended to the Home Government his proposal for the increase of salary of the Sheristadar of the Board of Revenue at that Presidency from Rs. 800 to 1,000 a month after five years' approved service.

NEWS FROM HYDERABAD.—We hear from Hyderabad that it was expected Mr. Saunders, C.B., the newly-appointed Resident, would assume charge of his new office on the 8th June. One of the first disputes he will be called upon to settle will be a quarrel between the chaplain and organist. The chaplain, who has been supported by the officiating resident, wishes to have the organ and choir removed from the gallery and set up near the pulpit. The subscribers—the late Sir George Yule contributed Rs. 5,000—wish to have the organ in the gallery. It is rumoured that Sir Salar Jung has ordered the collection of a tax on cotton in the Mofussil towns and villages. This tax is most unpopular. It is evident the native rulers are taking lessons from the systems adopted by the English.

MADRAS MILITARY FUND.—The Madras Athenæum is glad to learn that an attack has been made on that illogical ruling of the Secretary of State on annuities to the daughters of subscribers to the Military Fund, which has been condemned in that journal, not only on account of its absurdity, but also on account of its unfairness to daughters born before a date arbitrarily fixed upon. Three major generals, nine colonels and lieutenant-colonels, five majors, and four captains have sent up petitions to Government praying that all daughters of subscribers may be put on the same footing as those born subsequently to the 7th of June, 1867. The prayer has been recommended by the local Government for favourable consideration, and the supreme Government hopes that it will meet with such favourable consideration as the Secretary of State can bestow upon it.

THE WRECK OF THE "SAINT BERNARD."—On Saturday morning last an attempt was made by Mr. F. Doderet, mathematical instrument maker of the public works department workshop, Chepauk, to blast the hull of the French barque Saint Bernard, lying between the piles of the Madras Pier, by means of an electric battery. A small canister of gunpowder, containing about thirty-two pounds, was placed in the sea with two copper wires connecting themselves with the electric battery, about a foot and a half in length, and one foot in breadth and height. The battery was placed in one of the pier carriages. The operations commenced at six o'clock, at which time Lord Napier arrived to witness the explosion, but his Lordship was disappointed at the complete failure of the attempt. Mr. Doderet and his assistant tried their experiment up to two o'clock in the afternoon, but without the least success. We recollect that about the latter end of 1866, when the British barque Eva was wrecked in the roads, Captain Goddard blasted her hull with gunpowder by means of a galvanic battery.—Madras Times, June 12.

COCHIN.—The monsoon broke in upon us on the 2nd inst., and since then it has been raining cats and dogs. We have had strong gales, with terrific squalls on the 3rd and 4th, and the sea has encroached considerably with the setting in of the bad weather. There can be no doubt that the groynes which the master attendant is constructing will tend to arrest the encroachment, whatever the cynical and captious may say against the work. One groyne, which has already been extended nearly 70 or 80 feet, and which is thrown out on the Southern side of the ramparts, succeeded in checking the progress of the sea at first, and there is good cause for the belief that as the work of the groynes proceeds their effects will be more and more perceptible. The groyne at Vypeen shows unmistakable signs of success, for to the south of it a great extent of space has silted up, and a small beach has been formed. The effect of the groynes, either on the Vypeen side or at Cochin, should be the diversion of the current and the consequent silting up, and these results I should think may be expected. The groynes are now being thrown out at nearly right angles with the current; their ultimate success may be reckoned upon if they are carried our some 300 feet. I shall inform you of further results as they may occur.—Neilgherry Excelsior, June 13.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers have obtained leave of absence:—Lieutenant-colonel Hicks, R.A., from April 20 to October 20, 1868, on medical certificate; Captain Manderson, R.A., from April 21, 1868, to Jan. 21, 1869, on medical certificate; Lieutenant Macdonell, R.A., from April 1 to July 31, 1868, on completion of course of instruction in School of Gunnery; Major Burn, 13th N.I., from June 7, 1868, for four months, in extension—Neilgherries; Lieutenant-colonel Gosling, R.A., Assistant Adjutant General, R.A., for sixty days, from June 5, 1868—privilege leave; Lieutenant Ranking, Adjutant 34th L.I., from date of departure, for four months—Presidency; Lieutenant Tyzack, R.A., from date of departure—Madras, to appear before a medical board; Assistant-surgeon Lewer, R.A., from date of departure—Madras, to appear before a medical board; Mr. A. C. Burnell, Sub-Collector and Joint Magistrate of Nellore, three months' cumulative privilege leave; Mr. J. D. B. Gribble, Assistant to the Collector and Magistrate of South Arcot, three months' cumulative privilege leave; Mr. H. St. A. Goodrich, Junior Assistant to the Collector and Magistrate and Agent to the Governor of Fort St. George in Ganjam, privilege leave for three months; Mr. J. George, Executive Engineer of the fourth grade, two months' leave on medical certificate.

THE CUDDAPAH DISTRICT.—The acting collector of Cuddapah reported as follows on the 27th May:—"There was a fall of rain over a large part of the district on the 20th instant. The rain-gauge at Voilpaud showed one and a-half inch, and the Tahsildar reports that he thinks the rain was general over his talook. At Royachoty only one-tenth was gauged, but in the villages to the west of the talook it seems to have been much heavier, and sufficient to put a small supply in some of the tanks. The Tahsildar of Muddenpully does not report any rain in his talook, but I hear from other sources that the talook has had some good showers. There has also been rain in parts of the Kadiri talook, and in the talooks of Cuddapah, Pulivendala, and Budwail. Prices are much the same as at the date of my last report. There is a good deal of small-pox in the district, and cattle disease is very prevalent. The relief works in the Kadiri talook are being pushed on, and we are now only waiting for the arrival of a large supply of tools, which are expected from Cuddapah, for them to be in full operation. There are 590 labourers at work on the road from Kadiri towards Pulivendala, and smaller numbers on the Poolicoonta and Balasamudrum road, the Poolicoonta tanks, and the Charpully tank. A great number of wells are in hand all over the talook, as also in other talooks where they are required, giving a large amount of employment. Considerable numbers attend the relief-houses. Distribution of raw grain is being made at present every morning to the helpless part of the population. These relief-houses will require some modification, which I shall effect after consultations with Mr. Clarke, whom I expect here this evening. I regret to have to report a frightful catastrophe that has occurred in the Budwail talook."

MYSORE.—Under Mr. Bowring's vigorous administration Mysore is, we learn, making very satisfactory progress. The revenue survey on the Bombay principle has been introduced with marked success, to the great satisfaction of the people and benefit to the Government. One of the most experienced officers of the late commission, Colonel Clerk (whose discriminating remarks in favour of native administration have been quoted in both Houses of Parliament), has been selected as Inam Commissioner, and by the time the young Rajah assumes the reins of Government all vexed and difficult questions regarding the land tenure will have been settled by the Survey and Inam Commission. Some of the best roads and finest bridges in India are to be found in Mysore; and the splendid lakes of that province, as in many parts of the Nizam's territory, are the admiration of all travellers. The irrigation from the canals of the River Cauvery would make the whole of the southern portion of Mysore a smiling garden, almost as productive as Bengal, if the works had not been neglected under our administration until very recently. It will not be the fault of Mr. Bowring if the Public Works Department of the province fail to restore and repair the all but unexampled system of water conservancy left to Mysore by its native rulers. The last Mysore Gazette contains the form of "guarantee" by the Mysore Government of the permanency of the survey rates for the next thirty years, and we heartily congratulate the people that thereby the influence of British rule will be felt in Mysore long after British officers may have consigned its destinies to a native administration.—Times of India, June 10.

FURLONGS.—Captain R. Beatty, Acting Superintendent of Police, Bellary District, has leave for the prescribed period, preparatory to his proceeding to Europe on furlough. The following officers obtained furloughs in June last:—Lieutenant Huddart, R.A., to England, overland, on medical certificate, from date of embarkation—unfit to do duty with troops; Lieutenant Agnew, 16th Lancers, to England, via the Cape, for seventeen months, from date of embarkation—to do duty with troops on the voyage; Assistant-surgeon Lower, R.A., to England, by the overland route, on medical certificate, from date of embarkation—unfit to do duty with troops; Lieutenant Stokes, 19th Foot, from date of departure, for six months—England, on urgent private affairs; Lieutenant Agnew, 16th Lancers, will proceed to England in command of invalids, &c., returning per ship Copenhagen; Major Bowen, Staff Corps, from July 20, or date of departure, for one month—Madras, preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe; Lieutenant Coningham, 26th N.I., in continuation for fifteen days—preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe; Ensign and Deputy Assistant Commissary Edginton is permitted to retire from the service, on a pension of 2s. 6d. per day; Major Mackeson, Bombay Staff Corps, 2nd in command Meywar Bheel Corps, is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months, on medical certificate; Captain Johnson, Madras Staff Corps, is allowed furlough to Europe, for twenty months, on medical certificate. THE HEAT IN KURRACHEE AND THE DEATHS IT HAS CAUSED.

Such deadly weather as we have suffered since Thursday last is not within the memory of the oldest resident of Kurrachee. The heat is no doubt more intense in Upper Sind and stations in the Punjab, such as Meean Meer and Peshawur, but, unprepared as we were for it here, the casualties it has occasioned can scarcely be wondered at. On Sunday the temperature rose to a terrific degree, and strong men fell under it—it is not too much to say—"right and left." The mortuary return which we have procured, the whole of it traceable more or less directly to the fatal effects of the heat, is as follows:—

- June 3. Mrs. Buckley, A-18 R.A.
- " 5. Serg. Westley, A-18 R.A.
- " 7. Serg. Rampling, A-18 R.A.
- " " Serg. Cornelius, A-18 R.A.
- " " Corporal Litch, A-18 R.A.
- " " Mrs. Brookes (attached to the depot).
- " " Private Wm. Thomas (depot), 104th Regt.
- " " Gunner John Boothroyd (depot), 19th Brigade R.A.
- " " Private Edward Payne (depot), 7th Hussars.
- " " Mr. Barends (depot), 104th Regt.
- " " Mrs. McCartney, 106th Regt.
- " " Boy J. R. McCartney (son of the above).
- " " Boy Robert Gibbie, depot, 7th Hussars.
- " 8. Serg. W. H. Tall, 86th Regt.
- " " Private Grimes, 82nd Regt.
- " 9. Serg. Ross, 82nd Regt.
- " " Mrs. Kennedy, R.A.

Serg. Ross was married as late as Thursday last, the 4th. He commanded one of the parties which escorted the dead from the depot to their graves on Monday evening, was taken ill at the burying ground, and died at half-past one yesterday morning. At about three o'clock yesterday afternoon Serg. Leslie, of the Commissariat department, died very suddenly.

Among the civilians of Kurrachee death was also busy, especially among the debilitated and sickly. At about four o'clock in the afternoon on Sunday Mr. Malvery, editor and proprietor of Our Paper, who had been long ailing, was prostrated and died quietly in less than one hour. Mrs. Beck, the wife of our respected librarian, succumbed in the course of the night. But the saddest of these mournful events is the death of a lady of the convent—Sister Louisa—who expired on Monday. She had devoted herself to the care of another lady who, we regret to say, is still seriously ill, and being in delicate health herself, was stricken between two and three o'clock in the afternoon. She was buried yesterday morning within the body of the chapel.

The first victim was a man named John Lane, formerly a sailor, who fell near the Magazine Guard on Saturday and died whilst some European constables were carrying him to the civil hospital. Mr. Gillart, employed at the railway workshops, was found dead in his bed on Monday morning.

Death has been at work on the rail as well. Last Saturday, Mr. Newby, the driver of the 6.30 A.M. goods train—a powerfully built man—took sick and had to be sent back from Jempeer. He died at Kotree at 8.40 P.M. We have protested several times against the running of day trains on the Sind Railway, and correspondents have united their voice with ours, but to no avail. Poor Newby's is, we have ascertained, the third casualty to be traced directly to the plying of trains in the daytime during the hot season. Six years ago, driver Pearson died on his engine, which the unfortunate man had the presence of mind at the last—the heroism, we should say—to place upon a "siding" to avert any accident which might occur from its standing on the line. About one year later a "guard" died in his van. Last year another driver, whose name we forget, died under similar circumstances almost as Newby. And three years ago, another driver, named Jackson, would have perished also, but for the care Col. Southey, who was then deputy collector of Jerruck, and another gentleman, bestowed upon him. We hear that on the representation of Colonel Crawford, Superintendent of Police at Hyderabad, the Commissioner in Sind has taken upon himself to order the night passenger trains. The responsibility not to kill people! What if the responsibility for killing them were enforced? Colonel Ross, who commands at Hyderabad, also had to remonstrate against the running of day trains. He wrote on the 4th instant that he had frequently to send sick men from Hyderabad to the Ghizree Sanatorium, but as the train left Kotree at 2 P.M., when the heat was so intense that men in robust health avoided going, he therefore considered it his duty to bring the matter to notice, in order to avoid the loss of valuable lives. Colonel Ross particularises the cases of a corporal of the 38th, and of two privates of another regiment, who a few days since arrived at Kotree on their way from Hyderabad to the Ghizree Sanatorium in a fainting state in consequence of the heat. It is also added that the heat from Kotree to Joongshahie is most exhausting and without a parallel. It is due to the Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-general, Captain Campbell, to say that he at once placed himself in communication with the Deputy Consulting Engineer for the Sind Railway, who replied the day before yesterday that arrangements, as we have intimated already, had been made for the running of night trains to and from Kotree.

In Hyderabad the heat has been severe also. Seven or eight cases of sun-stroke and apoplexy are mentioned, four of which proved fatal. Staff Surgeon Littigow, attached to the Kurrachee depot, was ordered, on the recommendation of the Staff Surgeon Major British Forces, to proceed to Hyderabad at once, and left this by the night train on the 8th instant to afford temporary medical aid to the troops quartered at that station.

We regret to hear of the death of several natives from the heat also. A dhobie fell down dead whilst ironing some clothes at the Dhobie Ghaut on Monday, and two men died in a small tenement in Gharee Khata. Akhoond Gholam Hoosain, at one time Kardar of Kurrachee, expired on Saturday on his return to Kurrachee from Tatta, where he had gone to plead a case. The heat is said to have been felt chiefly from Joongshahie to this station.

The weather took a favourable turn yesterday, when cool breezes set in; and we are glad to say that the numerous sick who were driven into the military hospitals by the heat are recovering.—Sindian, June 10.

Miscellaneous.

SALE OF ARMS.—Messrs. Trevor and Nugent, Magistrates F. P. in the district of Tanna, are specially authorised to grant licenses within their respective charges under the Act relating to the manufacture, importation, and sale of arms and ammunition, and for regulating the right to keep and use the same, and to give power of disarming in certain cases.

THE CORPS OF ENGINEERS.—The undermentioned engineers of the Bombay Marine are promoted to fill existing vacancies from the dates specified opposite their names: Mr. Singster, 2nd Class, to be 1st Class Engineer (provisional), vice Greig, resigned, November 15, 1867; Mr. Driver, 2nd Class, to be 1st Class Engineer, vice Moritz, resigned, March 8, 1868.

RETIREMENTS.—The Commander-in-Chief in India has accepted the retirement from the service, by the sale of their commissions, of the undermentioned officers:—Lieutenant Shaw, 95th Foot, May 26, 1868; Ensign and Deputy Assistant Commissary Eljinton is permitted to retire from the service on a pension of two shillings and sixpence per diem.

THE CHARGES AGAINST THE GAIKWAR.—We learn that the Bombay Government have been instructed to inquire into the charges of misrule preferred against the Gaikwar. We trust the matter will be fully investigated by unprejudiced officers on the spot, and that the evidence of the British officials at the Gaikwar's Court will be received with due caution.

CUSTOMS.—The following arrangements have been made during the absence on sick leave of Mr. Taylor, 1st Class Assistant Commissioner of Customs, Salt, and Opium:—Mr. Pratt to act as 1st Class Assistant Commissioner of Customs, Salt, and Opium; Mr. Joshee to act as 2nd Class Assistant Commissioner of ditto; Mr. Cameron to act as 3rd Class Assistant Commissioner of ditto; Mr. Payne to act as 4th Class Assistant Commissioner of ditto.

Mignon has been appointed Assistant Commissary General, Poona division of the army; further, that the Commissary General, Colonel J. B. Dunsterville, will shortly proceed to England, and that Colonel H. W. Holland will be appointed Commissary General of the army, while Colonel Lucas will be appointed Deputy Commissary General.

TELEGRAPH BETWEEN BOMBAY AND KURRACHEE.—The Times of India is glad to state that the present unsatisfactory state of telegraphic communication between Bombay and Kurrachee is not likely to be of long duration. The single wire between Hyderabad and Deesa is being doubled, and will be completed in a week or two. What has always been the weak link in the Kurrachee line, the portion across the run of Cutch, which was liable to be submerged during the monsoon season, will be immediately abandoned.

THE "JUMNA" TROOP SHIP.—H. M.'s Indian troop ship Jumna left Bombay on Wednesday, June 17, for Suez, where her machinery is to be thoroughly overhauled and repaired by the makers. We hear that the Secretary of State for India in Council has decided on adding two more ships of the Jumna class to the fleet of five Indian troop ships now existing. One of these is to be employed east, and one west of Suez. There will then be four ships on this side, and three in Europe.

MR. MAINE'S RETIREMENT.—According to the Times of India the Honourable Mr. Maine, it is probable, though not at all certain, will quit India for good next spring. When we say that, notwithstanding this, it is not improbable the honourable gentleman may be found in India late in 1869, our readers will know what value to attach to the statements which have appeared regarding the party most likely to succeed Mr. Maine as Law Member of the Executive Council of India.

BOMBAY MARINE.—Mr. Eusa, 3rd officer of the Lord Elphinstone, was promoted to 1st officer of that vessel from April 6, vice H. Phillips, resigned. Mr. H. Jabers was appointed 3rd officer of the Lord Elphinstone April 16. Commander Robinson, Indian Navy, is appointed to officiate as Superintendent of Marine, from the date of Captain Young's death. Commander G. T. Robinson, Officiating Superintendent of Marine, is appointed to act as a member of the Bombay Harbour and Pilotage Board, vice Captain Young, C.B., deceased.

Fagan, 3rd Grade Assistant Superintendent Revenue Survey and Assessment Southern Mahratta Country, having completed three years' service in charge of a Native Establishment on the 7th of March last, is promoted to 2nd Grade Assistant from that date. Lieutenant Sartorius, 4th Grade Assistant Superintendent Revenue Survey and Assessment Southern Mahratta Country, having completed a year's service in charge of a Native Establishment on the 5th of June, 1868, is from that date promoted to 3rd Grade Assistant.

THE GYMNASIAC SCHOOL.—The Government of India having sanctioned for this Presidency an Assistant Instructor of Gymnastics, the staff pay of this appointment will be Rs. 300 per mensem with the Staff Corps pay of rank. With reference to the foregoing, Lieut. Daubeney, her Majesty's 109th Regiment, is appointed Assistant Instructor of Gymnastics, with effect from the 20th April last. One sergeant and two corporal instructors are also allowed on staff pay, of, for the former, 1s. 6d. a day, and the latter, 1s. a day, for six days in the week, in addition to regimental pay and allowances. These non-commissioned officers are not to be in excess of the establishment of their respective ranks in their own regiment.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following leaves have been granted:—Lieut. Wetherall, 2nd battalion 1st Foot, from June 15, to Oct. 31; Ensign Ward, 1st battalion 23rd Foot, from June 6 to Aug. 4; Capt. N.I., thirty days from date of departure, to proceed to Bombay on medical certificate. Lieut. PRINTED LITERATURE IN BOMBAY.—The Government catalogue of books printed in the Bombay presidency for the past quarter of 1856 comprises eighty-six publications in the various languages of that presidency. The Sanskrit language is represented by five works; the first is the celebrated astrological manual the Laghu Jataka; the second is the Shrimat Bhagvat, one of the eighteen Puranas; the third is a list of the one thousand epithets of Siva; the fourth is a book of pious precepts; and the fifth is another edition of the Bhagvat, one of the Puranas. Among the vernacular languages, Gujarati is represented by 29 works, or nearly one-third of the whole publications during the quarter; Marathi by 20 works; Hindustani by only 2; Canarese by 1; and Sindhi by 1. There are twenty publications in English, 1 in Portuguese, and 1 in Zend, 1 in Gujarati and Hindustani, 1 in Sanskrit and English, 1 in English and Gujarati, and 1 in Sanskrit and Marathi.

ILLNESS OF COLONEL DUNSTERVILLE.—The Times of India regrets to hear that another head of a department has succumbed to the pressure of work and anxiety. We allude to Colonel Dunsterville, the Bombay Commissary General, who, after long struggling with ill health, has been obliged to lay aside his active duties; but though this is as much, as in Captain Young's case, the result of the labour brought on the department by the Abyssinian Expedition, we trust there is nothing in Colonel Dunsterville's illness which forbids hopes of improvement as soon as he is relieved from official anxieties. But we understand by the technical rules of the Service the Commissary General will have to forego his appointment, because three years have not elapsed since his last return from England. On the other hand, his time in England should not count against him, his return being as much in consequence of war necessities as that of any other officer who has in former times been allowed to count sick leave as service.

DEATH OF MR. COBB.—We regret to announce the death, at Bhosawul, on Monday last, of Mr. Inspector Cobb, of the G. I. P. Railway Police, from the effects of a mauling received from a tiger while shooting in the Asseerghur jungles a few days previously. Full particulars have not yet been received, but as far as we can learn it appears that the unfortunate gentleman had wounded a tiger, and was following him up on foot the next day with his Bheel shikaree, when the animal rushed on him, and would have killed him but for the bravery of his shikaree, who fired at the animal, and, for the time, saved his master. By the death of Mr. Cobb the railway police has lost the services of one of the best officers in the force. Mr. Cobb formerly belonged to the 33rd Foot, but joined the G. I. P. Railway some years ago. On the reorganisation of the railway police, he was appointed Inspector at Bhosawul, and has since performed excellent services as a detective. It was only a few days before his death that he was strongly recommended to receive a pecuniary reward for detecting, during this season, five cases of theft of cotton bales from railway trains while in transit, and bringing to justice twenty-three persons. His death will be a great loss to the department, and it will be difficult to find an officer to fill his place.—Times of India.

THE MOWKEE MOOLLA VIADUCT.—We have much pleasure (says the Bombay Guardian) in announcing the completion of the new Mowkee Moolla viaduct on the Bhoze Ghaut, and the restoration of direct communication with Poona. Our readers will be interested in the following communication from our friend, Mr. A. R. Terry, the engineer to whom we owe (under Providence) the accomplishment of this important work:—"It may interest some of your readers to know that the last of the girders of the Mowkee Moolla viaduct, on the Bhoze Ghaut incline of the G. I. P. Railway, has this day (18th June) been safely transferred from the platform on which it was built to its permanent bed on the masonry, a lift of 63 feet, and that the line across this unfortunate gap will be fit again for traffic about the end of this month, which is less than a twelvemonth after the fall of the old bridge. I subjoin a few details of the girders employed. The length is 202 feet between the outer piers, perpendicular depth 20 feet; they weigh together 800 tons. To four of them a completed portion of the platform was attached and raised with them, the whole, that is, each girder and platform, weighing about 112 tons; the other four were lifted singly, and weighed each 88 tons. The hoisting machine, which rested on powerful scaffolding on the top of the masonry, was on the hydraulic principle—the pump worked by sixty men. The speed of actual lift averaged, including the stoppages for lifting the links of the chain, ten feet an hour. The operations were commenced on the 1st instant. It took about five days to shift the machinery from one span to the other, and much of the time was lost through the very heavy rains we have experienced here since the beginning of the month."

FURLONGS.—The following officers have obtained furloughs:—Assistant Surgeon Johnson is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months, on medical certificate; Captain Hoskins, Royal (Bombay) Artillery, Commissary of Ordnance Grand Arsenal, is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months, on medical certificate; Captain (Local Major) Macfarlane, 3rd Dragoon Guards, from 27th May, 1868, to 10th June, 1869, to proceed to Bombay, on medical certificate, preparatory to obtaining a final certificate to Europe; Surgeon

Birnie, 2nd battalion 12th Foot, to proceed to England by the overland route, for the purpose of appearing before a medical board (this officer is not available for duty with troops, and will, on arrival, report himself to the Adjutant General, Horse Guards). The following officers obtained furlough on June last. His Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has granted leave of absence as follows:—Second Captain Theobald, E brigade R.H.A., from 21st May, 1868, to 21st August, 1868, in extension, on the recommendation of a medical board; Captain Harris, E brigade R.H.A., from 5th May, 1868, to 5th May, 1869, on the recommendation of a medical board; Captain Stone, 21st brigade R.A., from 5th May, 1868, to 5th November, 1868, on the recommendation of a medical board; Assistant Surgeon Mackay, M.D., E brigade R.H.A., from date of embarkation, to England, via Egypt, to appear before a medical board; Second Captain Candy, 18th brigade R.A., from date of embarkation, to England, via Egypt, to appear before a medical board; Captain Macfarlane, 3rd Dragoon Guards, to proceed to Europe, by the overland route, for the purpose of appearing before a medical board (this officer is not available for duty with troops, and will, on arrival, report himself to the Adjutant General, Horse Guards); Conductor Jacka, of the Naval Storekeeper's Department, is allowed furlough to Europe for eighteen months, on medical certificate; Major Mackeson, Bombay Staff Corps, 2nd in Command Meywar Bheel Corps, is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months, on medical certificate; Captain Johnson, Madras Staff Corps, is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months, on medical certificate; Lieutenant Dudgeon, 2nd battalion 1st Foot, from 2nd June, 1868, to 2nd July, 1868, to proceed to Calcutta, on medical certificate, preparatory to obtaining a final certificate to Europe. The undermentioned to have charge of invalids proceeding, per Corona, to England on June 1:—Major Lindsay, 3rd Dragoon Guards; Staff Surgeon McMaster; Lieutenant-colonel Kinloch, 21st brigade R.A., will proceed to England and join the portion of his brigade stationed at Woolwich; Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals McKee, of the Bengal Medical Establishment, is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months, on medical certificate, from the 25th April last; Messrs. GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

STAFF CORPS.—PROMOTION.

Adjutant General's Office, Head Quarters, Simla, June 3.—No. 180.—In continuation of the G.O. No. 66, March 21, 1867; G.O. No. 64, Feb. 29, 1868; and G.O. No. 145, May 5, 1868, H.E. the C. in C. is pleased to publish, for the information of the army in India, the following letter from the military secretary to the Horse Guards to his address, dated April 8, 1868, together with the memo. which accompanied it:—

"With reference to my telegram of the 1st inst., requesting you to be good enough to 'make no more provisional promotions in succession to staff corps probationers,' I am directed by the Field Marshal C. in C. to transmit herewith a memorandum on the subject, which H.R.H. wishes your Excellency to promulgate in G.O. to the army serving under your command.

Your Excellency will observe that in order to carry out the regulations contained in the enclosed memorandum, and avoid complications, it will be necessary to limit provisional promotions to be announced in your G.O. to such vacancies as are caused by the transfer of British officers to the staff corps, with more than four years' service on full pay from the date of first commission, and which vacancies will, as heretofore, continue to be filled up without purchase, provisionally, in India.

"In the twelve regiments of the line, in which the purchase system does not exist, your Excellency will of course continue to carry out in your local orders provisional promotions without purchase in succession to officers transferred to the staff corps, irrespective of their length of service, as these latter will not be entitled to receive the value of their commissions on appointment to the staff corps."

Memorandum, dated Horse Guards, April 1, 1868.

"H.R.H. the Field Marshal C. in C. is pleased to notify that, with the concurrence of the Sec. of State for War, and the Sec. of State for India in council, it has been decided that officers in line regiments in which the purchase system is in force, whose permanent appointment to the Indian staff corps shall appear in the G.O. of one of the local governments of India, on a date subsequent to March 18, 1868, and who, on the date of such permanent appointment (being the date of appointment as probationers for the staff corps), shall not have exceeded four years' service on full pay, from the date of first commission, shall receive, on their names appearing in the London Gazette as finally transferred to the staff corps, the exact sum such officers would have received, under War Office regulations, had they retired from the service by the sale of their commissions at the time of joining the staff corps as probationers.

"Promotions in succession to vacancies caused by transfers to the Indian staff corps will in future be by purchase instead of without purchase as heretofore, when the officers so transferred are entitled to receive the value of their commissions."

COLLECTORS OF REVENUE.

June 6.—Under section 31, Act IX. of 1863, the Lieut.-governor is pleased to invest all collectors of revenue in the regulation districts, and all deputy commissioners in the non-regulation districts, with the powers of a commissioner of revenue, for the purposes of the said Act within the limits of their respective jurisdictions.

The Lieut.-governor has also been pleased to invest the following officers with the powers of a collector of revenue for the purposes of the above Act within the limits of their respective jurisdictions, viz.:—

All officers in charge of sub-divisions in the regulation provinces and in the province of Assam.

All officers in charge of the excise department at the Sudder sub-divisions in the regulation districts.

The senior assistant commissioner at the Sudder station of each of the districts in the province of Assam.

EXAMINATIONS FOR THE SUBORDINATE EXECUTIVE SERVICE.

Fort William, June 2.—Read again the resolution recorded by the Lieut. gov. under date Feb. 24 last, ruling that in future, as an experimental measure, appointments to the subordinate executive service will be made on a combined plan of nomination and competitive examination.

Read also a petition from certain gentlemen, residents of the Province of Behar, dated 13th ult., praying for a modification of the above resolution in behalf of those who are otherwise qualified by respectability of birth or family connections, education, and good moral character, as well as previous long and good service under Government in other capacities, to enter the subordinate executive service, but who are not likely to succeed at competitive examinations by reason of their age.

The Lieut. gov. desires it to be understood that it was not intended in the resolution of Feb. 24 last to preclude entirely the admission into the subordinate executive service of gentlemen who have served Government in other capacities for some years, and who, during such service, may have established a character which warrants their fitness for magisterial and revenue duties.

THE ORDER OF BRITISH INDIA.

June 5.—No. 551.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India, No. 144, dated April 30, are published:—

Para. 1.—I have received and considered in Council your letter No. 27 of January 23 last, upon the subject of the Order of British India, and the supposed intention of the Court of Directors of the late East India Company in its institution.

2. You observe there can be little doubt that it was desired the reward in question should be enjoyed, and the decorations belonging to it be worn, chiefly by those on the effective list, who would thus present to the eyes of their comrades, in all grades of the service, a perpetual incentive to behave so as to merit similar distinction in their turn.

5. With a view, however, of providing a remedy for the defect pointed out by you in the present system, I authorise you, should you see no objection, to carry out the plan suggested in letter from Adjutant General to the Secretary to Government, Military Department, Bombay, dated August 29, 1867, by H.E. the Commander-in-Chief at Bombay, viz.:—

1. That one effective member of the Order of British India be given for every two members who become non-effective.

2. Casualties amongst the non-effective members to lapse, so long as the total numbers of the effective and non-effective lists exceed the established number. (Signed) H. W. NORMAN, Colonel,

Secretary to the Government of India.

MUSKETRY.

No. 186.—With reference to G.O.C.C., dated June 27, 1863, the head quarters of the 5th musketry division will be transferred from Saugor to Agra. The transfer to take place during the ensuing cold season.

RULES FOR THE EXAMINATION OF DEPUTY COLLECTORS.

June 5.—No. 738.—The following rule relating to the examination of deputy collectors of the settlement department is published for general information:—

H.H. the Lieutenant governor is pleased to rule that a deputy collector appointed for settlement work is not compelled to pass the examination for assistant and deputy collectors in the regular line, but unless he does pass and until he passes, he will not be regarded as having any claims to be graded on the permanent list and receive promotion in it.

THE SUBORDINATE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

Simla, June 9.—No. 557.—The despatch from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India, authorising certain modifications in the organisation of the subordinate medical department, having been received on May 27, 1868, increased allowances will be passed, when claimable, under G.G.O. 2. In reply I have been informed that H.R.H. concurs in your views that such exchanges should not be in future permitted.

3. Further, with reference to the employment of engineer officers on the imperial list in India, that, under the conditions of General Corps Order, No. 462, dated July 1, 1862, "subject to the approval of the Commander-in-Chief, they will be allowed a tour of home duty after seven years' service in that country; but it will be optional with them whether they return to England, or remain in India, after that period of service."

CURRENCY NOTES.

June 5.—No. 223.—The following despatch is published in the Gazette of India:—

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-general of India in Council.

COUNTING SERVICE FOR PENSION.

No. 528.—In continuation of G.G.O. No. 46, dated Jan. 16 last, the following paragraph of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India No. 130, dated April 23 last, is published for general information:—

Para. 4.—Referring to my despatch No. 365, dated Dec. 9 last, I have to inform you that the rule that an officer exchanging for service out of India counts the whole time of such service for Indian pension, applies to officers of the artillery, as well as to officers of engineers.

GENERAL OFFICERS.

No. 529.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India is published for general information:—

Military, No. 140.

India-office, London, April 30, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-general of India in Council.

Sir,—It has been brought to my notice that officers of the Indian service promoted to the rank of general officer, and frequently thrown out of active employment for a season by such promotion, are, if residing unemployed in India, entitled to count such residence as service for pension, but if residing out of India, they come under the rules applicable in this respect to officers on leave.

2. I do not consider, under the altered circumstances of the Indian service, that this distinction should be maintained, and I have determined therefore, that officers on attaining to the rank of major-general shall reckon the whole of their service on the effective list, whether employed or unemployed, as service for pension, wherever they may choose to reside.

3. This ruling will take retrospective effect in the case of officers retiring from the service hereafter.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

LORD NAPIER IN THE CITY.

On Tuesday, at one o'clock, the freedom of the City of London, along with a sword worth 200 guineas, was presented to Lord Napier of Magdala as a mark of the admiration which his successful command of the Abyssinian army has evoked. Lord and Lady Napier, on their arrival at the Guildhall, were loudly cheered by the assembled crowd, and were conducted into the hall by the mover and seconder of the resolution in accordance with which the Court had assembled. Having taken his chair on the left of the Lord Mayor, the gallant general subscribed the usual oath, administered to him by the Chamberlain. The Chamberlain then delivered an address in presenting the sword and the box containing the freedom of the City. Lord Napier made a brief but very appropriate reply, expressive chiefly of the great value which he attached to the honour conferred upon him by the Corporation of the largest and most distinguished civic community in the world. He spoke with great modesty of his own share in the triumph of the Abyssinian expedition, and eulogised the conduct of the troops under his command. Every man was determined to maintain the honour of England, and to contribute to the success of the war. The conclusion of the speech was loudly applauded. There was a very numerous attendance of Aldermen and members of the Council. In the evening Lord Napier and a distinguished company, including the Duke of Cambridge, were entertained at dinner in the Mansion House by the Lord Mayor. The guests were about 200 in number. In reply to the toast of the evening,

LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA, who was received with prolonged and enthusiastic cheering, said,—My Lord Mayor, your Royal Highness, Ladies, and Gentlemen,—I cannot but feel very deeply the honour you have conferred upon me this day, in the very kind reception I have met with from the City of London, and the kind manner in which my health has been drunk this evening. These are favours and rewards so great that I feel I have done very little for them, and they lay upon me so great a burden of service to be done at some future day that I can hardly ever hope to repay the very kind welcome you have conferred upon me. It is a source of very great gratification to me and to every member of the Abyssinian Expedition to find that our services have been received so favourably by our countrymen of all classes, and that we have been considered to have done our duty. I must say that we are under great obligations to the Government of this country which supplied us promptly and speedily with everything we required. To the head of the Government of India in this country, Sir Stafford Northcote, our acknowledgments are peculiarly due, nor can I abstain from mentioning the names of the Military Committee, under Sir S. Northcote—Sir R. J. Hussey Vivian, General Baker, Captain Eastwick, and Major-General Pears—to whom we are greatly indebted for the labour, promptitude, and judgment which enabled them to point out the wants which were supplied. I am also much indebted to the Duke of Cambridge, who so promptly and without regard to precedent gave me the officers I solicited, whose skill and courage I had witnessed before, and whose services I was convinced it was highly desirable to obtain. (Cheers.) The Viceroy of India, too, came to our assistance when we were in great difficulties, and sent us camel-drivers and mule-drivers, without whose aid we would scarcely have advanced. I have also to express my acknowledgments to the Governor of Madras, my honoured namesake, Lord Napier of Merchistoun, who gave us much valuable assistance. I must also express my gratitude to the Governor of Bombay, Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, for the immense labour he bestowed on the equipment of the expedition, and the great assistance he afforded us on every occasion after we left Bombay, and whenever we required the aid of the Bombay Government. I have but one word to say in reference to the conduct of the men. The conduct of all the members of the force was exemplary in the highest degree. They vied with each other in devotion to the Queen and in the performance of their duty. This was not the first time that I had seen British soldiers labour zealously, but I never saw them labour better than on this occasion. The native soldiers abandoned all their prejudices and vied with the English soldiers in zeal. I may mention that on one occasion, soon after I arrived, I rode round the works and came upon a regiment of Bengal native troops, who knew something of me personally and something by tradition. Some Prussian officers who honoured us with their company could not think what had happened when they saw even these men, with their baskets of earth, dancing about with joy. They were expressing their delight that the Commander-in-Chief had come among them to see them at work. I cannot do too much justice to a Beloochee regiment for their devotion, and little behind them if any were the 10th Bombay Native Regiment. A great part of these men were Hindustanis, but they were as willing as any other races to do their duty, and they were an honour to the Presidency. The services of the cavalry were equally meritorious. I had on one occasion to point out some ground to a native officer of my escort. He had said he did not know where the Commander-in-Chief was going to take the cavalry. I said, "That is your plain." He replied, "Very well, Sahib, that is a beautiful piece of flat ground."

It was really a slope of a hill at an angle of forty-five degrees. (A laugh and cheers.) Of the British infantry it is unnecessary to speak. They laboured extremely hard, had to carry heavy loads, and were obliged to go from active work to picket duty. I was astonished at their endurance, but they bore up inspired by a strong hope of perfecting the task they had before them. Every man had sufficient consideration and reflection to understand the end we had in view. I was also much indebted to the officers of the Intelligence Department, who all laboured zealously. Although by their duties they were often kept in the rear when their wishes would have carried them to the front, they contributed greatly to the success of the expedition. Last, but not least, I will mention the officers and men of the navy, who assisted us in every possible way. The spirit of the commander of the navy was excellent, and it was shared by all the force. They made admirable volunteer soldiers, and accompanied us with the Rocket Brigade. None marched better, and they took excellent care of their mules. When the expedition was over I expected the greater part of them to go into the Lanciers or Artillery. I do not know whether Captain Fellowes is content to remain in the navy, but he never seemed more at home than when he was on horseback. (Laughter and cheers.) When our task was accomplished, the first news we received from home was a telegram from her Majesty the Queen, who is always the first to encourage her soldiers in their duties. (Cheers.) Immediately after her Majesty's telegram arrived one from his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge. The Secretary of State for India also telegraphed to us in warm terms of congratulation. I cannot tell your lordship how much I feel the welcome which has awaited me in this country. I cannot but feel grateful to the force under my command through whose exertions I am indebted for the favours I have received. We all did our best, but without the zeal and cordial co-operation of every officer and soldier under my command our success would not have been complete. The illustrious Duke has truly remarked that I have had the honour to serve under two gallant officers now in this room. I am proud to remember that I served in Central India under my noble and gallant friend Lord Strathnairn, a soldier who thoroughly understood that the way to defeat an Asiatic enemy is by going straight at their heads on every occasion—(cheers)—and who invariably triumphed over all the difficulties in which he was placed. I had also the honour to serve under my gallant and honoured friend Sir Hope Grant, whose command of the military forces in China was signalled by the capture of Peking. With respect to the Volunteer force I may remark that, although not a young soldier, I am a Volunteer officer of a few days old, for I have been proud to accept the command of the 3rd Regiment of the City of London Rifle Brigade. I shall ever remember with gratitude the honours conferred upon me by the City of London to-day, and the kind welcome I have received in this hall. (Lord Napier resumed his seat amid enthusiastic cheering.)

THE EUFRATES VALLEY RAILWAY.

In reply to the doubts lately expressed on this subject, by the Daily News, Mr. W. P. Andrew asks what great public work "has ever been accomplished without strenuous efforts, without a stern perseverance, a persistent energy, that only rose to a higher intensity when it encountered difficulty? Would the Continents of Europe and America ever have been united by the electric cable—would the Panama Railroad, the Suez Canal, or any of the numerous great enterprises of recent times, ever have been attempted—much less brought to a successful issue—but for the existence amongst us of spirits gifted with a noble ambition, an unflagging energy, an indefatigable perseverance, incapable of yielding disappointment or defeat?" The Abyssinian Expedition is quoted as a case in point. As it was with that so "it always will be with all great enterprises. Wherever there are difficulties to be encountered there are always swarms of croakers who endeavour to the utmost to frighten themselves and others by exaggerated descriptions of little obstacles, which, by a curious process of distorted vision, they magnify into mountains. Now the difficulties which lie in the way of the establishment of the Euphrates route to India are, I know, considerable. They are solely of a political nature, and I cannot but think that if the Government of this country would only regard the matter in a spirit free from prejudice and mistrust, it would be seen that the obstacles to be overcome are quite susceptible of removal. No empire in the world is so situate as that of Great Britain. No one of the European Powers is interested in the same degree in the Indian and China seas. Surely it is only reasonable and right that we should desire to secure the right of way which the Turks are ready to accord us through that portion of their territory which intercepts the natural highway to our eastern dominions. The Viceroy of Egypt at this moment affords us the privilege of transporting our troops across the Isthmus of Suez; and at the time of the Indian mutiny our powerful ally, the Emperor of the French, offered us the like facilities through his territory. The Turks are not only willing, but, I believe, positively anxious that we should so far identify our interests with theirs as to come to some understanding with them as to the proposed route from the Mediterranean to Bussorah. I believe that if public opinion here and in India would only make itself sufficiently felt to induce the Government to take the matter up in earnest, an arrangement might be concluded, with the concurrence of the other European Powers, which would secure for this country the object in view, without at the same time offending any of our allies on the continent. At all events, the prize is well worthy the attempt, and if negotiations failed, no disaster or humiliation would result."

"A Looker-On," in the Daily News of July 21, complains that though Mr. Andrew "has constituted himself the pioneer of this enterprise," no plan has yet been publicly promulgated. He therefore suggests a plan which would, he thinks, command the strong sympathies of the commercial and even the general public in France and England. "It is this. Form an Anglo-French Company, who shall enjoy from the Turkish Government, under a grant obtained at the instance of the English—or, if the Emperor wished it, jointly with the French Ambassador—the entire land required for the railway from India to Bussorah for a period of ninety-nine years, the line to be formed in sections. This would remove all questions as to the acquisition of the land, and place it also under the moral protection of the Western nations sanctioning the grant. For the postal and military advantages which would be conferred on England a minimum income could be easily arranged, based upon an agreed tariff, and to commence so soon as the line struck the Euphrates, or after a certain distance were complete. Then, as to the capital. Let half of the amount required for each section be raised by a debenture stock at four per cent., guaranteed by the Indian Government, the remaining capital being raised by ordinary shares, which would be entitled to the residue of the income less a sinking fund of 1 per cent., to be set apart for the redemption of the entire capital, but to be applied primarily every tenth year in discharge of the bonds with 5 per cent. premium, which would thus be entirely paid off in less than thirty years. I shall be greatly surprised if a scheme like this—brought out under the protection, as it were, of the English and French Governments—would not obtain support; or, at all events, there could be little difficulty in framing some analogous plan for raising the comparatively small sum required for the undertaking; and when adopted by some influential and well-known names public opinion might be invoked for its support. I was informed in Paris last year that a special agreement had been made with the Turkish Government as to the harbour at Seleucia, which removed all difficulties on that head; and if this be the fact, another argument is supplied in favour of immediate exertion."

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, July 20.—VOTE OF THANKS TO LORD NAPIER.—The LORD CHANCELLOR read a letter from Lord Napier of Magdala acknowledging the vote of thanks of the House of Lords on behalf of himself and the officers and men of the Abyssinian army.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, July 20.—REPLY OF LORD NAPIER TO THE VOTE OF THE HOUSE.—The reply of Lieutenant-general Lord Napier of Magdala to the vote of thanks passed to him and the officers and troops engaged in the Abyssinian expedition was read by the Clerk at the table. It expressed in his own name, and those of the other generals named in the vote, a profound sense of the honour conferred on them, and stated that he had taken steps for communicating the resolution to the officers, troops, and naval brigade employed in the service.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, July 21.—INDIAN FURLOUGH REGULATIONS.—In answer to Sir R. ANSTRUTHER, Sir S. NORTHCOTE said that it is unfortunately impossible to make any alterations in the regulations affecting furlough without, to some extent, injuriously affecting certain individuals, and this is especially the case with regard to the new Indian furlough regulations, as they affect the civil servants now on furlough. On their return to India they will not find vacancies occurring to which they may be posted as formerly, and the only way to compensate them is to provide that they shall hold acting appointments upon more favourable terms than other officers, and receive 75 per cent. of the value of the appointment, together with subsistence allowance. The expense of this arrangement will be borne by the general revenue of India, and he hoped that under it no material hardship will be inflicted.

THE 36TH REGIMENT.—In reply to Mr. OTWAY, Sir J. PAKINGTON said no news had been received at the Horse Guards or the War-office to the effect that a detachment of the 36th Regiment, on arriving from England at the commencement of the hot season at Kurrachee, in Sind, was sent into barracks which had been declared unfit for European troops, and that on one day in June last nine men, women, and children had died in the barracks of heat apoplexy. The War-office in England has nothing to do with barracks in India; but when he received further information he would refer to the subject.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.—In reply to Col. SYKES, Sir S. NORTHCOTE said he was quite ready to bring forward the Indian Budget when a day could be obtained, and he hoped a day would yet be named. In reply to Mr. OTWAY, the Right Hon. Baronet said that he would introduce the Indian Budget during the present session, but that the day should depend on the progress of public business.

Author of "The History of the War in Afghanistan," &c., &c.

Contents.

The Rev. HENRY MARTIN. Sir CHARLES METCALFE. Sir ALEXANDER BURNES. Lord CORNWALLIS. Sir JOHN MALCOLM. The Hon. MOUNTSTUART ELPHINSTONE.	Sir HENRY LAWRENCE. General JAMES NEILL. Brig.-gen. JOHN NICHOLSON. Captain ARTHUR CONOLLY. Major ELDRED TOTTINGER. Major D'ARCY TODD. Appendix, &c.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune.

"J. W. KAYE."

From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employee of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the EXAMINER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

DYSENTERY, CHOLERA, FEVER, AGUE, COLDS, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1863) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "109 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

Both may be safely and inexpensively secured by these admirable Pills, which act gently on the weakest frames, and cause no violent shock to the most sensitive system. Holloway's Pills have proved themselves competent to deal constitutionally with those infirmities, which descend from parent to offspring, which often mar the brightest prospects, and throw a constant gloom over youth. These Pills purify both the solids and fluids of the body, and by that salutary process rouse every organ to perform naturally its normal function, and strengthen every nerve for its proper duty.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 223, Piccadilly, London.

THE PEOPLE OF INDIA:

A SERIES OF
PHOTOGRAPHIC ILLUSTRATIONS OF
THE RACES AND TRIBES OF HINDUSTAN, ORIGINALLY PREPARED UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF
THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA,
AND REPRODUCED AT THE INDIA MUSEUM
BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

EDITED BY
J. FORBES WATSON AND JOHN WILLIAM KAYE.

MEMORANDUM.

In addition to the copies of this work prepared for the use of the Government, the Secretary of State for India in Council has authorised the publication of an edition for sale. The work will contain about 450 Photographs on mounts, in eight volumes, super royal 4to., and it will be issued at £2. 5s. per volume. The First and Second Volumes are now ready for delivery.

PREFACE.

During the administration of Lord Canning, from 1858 to 1863, the interest which had been created in Europe by the remarkable development of the Photographic Art communicated itself to India, and originated the desire to turn it to account in the illustration of the topography, architecture, and ethnology of that country.

There were none, perhaps, in whom this interest was awakened more strongly than in Lord and Lady Canning. It was their wish to carry home with them, at the end of their sojourn in India, a collection, obtained by private means, of photographic illustrations, which might recall to their memory the peculiarities of Indian life.

The great convulsion of 1857-59, while it necessarily retarded for a time all scientific and artistic operations, imparted a new interest to the country which had been the scene of, and to the people who had been the actors in these remarkable events. When, therefore, the pacification of India had been accomplished, the officers of the Indian Services, who had made themselves acquainted with the principles and practice of photography, encouraged and patronised by the Governor-General, went forth, and traversed the land in search of interesting subjects.

In this way the design soon exceeded the dimensions of a mere private collection; but Lord Canning felt that its importance was sufficient to warrant official sanction and development, and, therefore, placed the matter in the hands of Mr. Clive Bayley, his Home Secretary. Some of the more important results appear in the present work.

The photographs were produced without any definite plan, according to local and personal circumstances, by different officers; and copies of each plate were sent home to the Secretary of State for India in Council.

After a time, it appeared that a sufficient number of illustrations had been received from various parts of India, fairly to represent the different varieties of the Indian races. The negatives remained in India; but from the plates sent home it was easy to produce fresh negatives, the prints of which might be multiplied to any extent. The Secretary of State in Council sanctioned this operation, and the work was executed by Mr. W. Griggs, at the India Museum, under the superintendence of Dr. Forbes Watson.

In many cases some descriptive account of the tribes represented accompanied the photographs sent from India. These varied greatly in amplitude and value. But, on the whole, it may be said that they were sufficient to constitute the basis of the sketches contributed by Mr. John R. Melville, Colonel Meadows Taylor, Mr. Kaye, Dr. Forbes Watson, and others. These sketches do not profess to be more than mere rough notes, suggestive rather than exhaustive, and they make no claim to scientific research or philosophic investigation. But although the work does not aspire to scientific eminence, it is hoped that, in an ethnological point of view, it will not be without interest and value.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, June 30; Agra, June 27; Calcutta and Madras, June 25.

The prominent event of the week in India was the publication of the Revised Furlough Rules. It is asserted of the Civil Rules that they were published subject to the final sanction of the India Office, which has now been duly accorded. For the Military Rules no further reference home was needed. We have reprinted both sets of rules in another page. They differ little on the whole from the rules of which we gave an abstract in January last, and such difference is always for the better. Privilege leave for instance may henceforth be taken anywhere. A civilian on furlough will be entitled to draw half-pay, on an average of his pay and allowances for three years before coming home, so long as the half-pay neither exceeds £1,200 nor fall below £300. Some members of the Committee fought hard for a two years' average, but in vain. Few civilians on furlough however will be reduced, we imagine, to £300 a-year. The new rules came into force on the 1st July. They are said to have given general satisfaction.

THE transports were still coming into Bombay harbour from Annesley Bay. As fast as they arrive the men are shipped or marched off to their several destinations, to the disappointment of those who reckoned on a great military camp at Poonah. Among the latest arrivals was General Merewether, who immediately went up to the hot-weather retreat of the Bombay Government. The Belooch battalion had reached Kurrachee on the 18th June, and gone on the next evening to Hyderabad.

THE Bombay Bank Commission resumed its sittings on the 29th June. Mr. Prentis, appearing for Mr. Birch, a late Government director, declared that the charges of corruption brought by the petitioning shareholders against their directors were "absolutely and entirely false," so far as Mr. Birch was concerned. None of the shareholders were present themselves or through their representatives. In reply to Mr. Prentis, the President declined at that stage of the proceedings to acknowledge his right to interfere in the examining of witnesses; but promised in due time to consider any questions he might lay before the Commission, and to let him put them if need were. Mr. John Stuart, late secretary, and Mr. Rodgie, deputy-secretary of the old Bank, were under examination when the mail left. The Commissioners, foreseeing endless work before them, if they allow every one concerned to be represented by counsel during the inquiry, have so far refused all applications to that effect.

SOME of the Indian papers have been drawing on their own imaginations with regard to the alleged resignation of Sir Donald Macleod. The wish was probably father to the thought. It seems that Sir Donald and General Peter Innes have been sued by the Delhi Bank for nearly two lakhs of rupees, as sureties for some defaulting principal. The rare spectacle of a Governor appearing as defendant in a court of justice shocked the editorial Grundies of the East into calling on the victim of misplaced confidence to resign, as if he had done something to compromise his character in native eyes. He must surely resign; in fact he has resigned, said popular rumour, which found ready expression in the papers aforesaid. According to one statement, his resignation had gone in, but not been accepted. His very successor was named by more than one journal. And yet the whole story, barring the indictment in the Delhi Court, seems to be purely mythical. According to the Bombay Gazette, "it is certain that Sir Donald has not resigned."

THE little war in the Cuttack Mehals is said to be growing rather serious. We are assured that 20,000 hill men are in arms against the Rajah of Keonghur, whose house a party of them entered, carrying off his vizier and many followers. All the neighbouring tribes of Konds, Coles, Sonthals, &c., are said to be "excited and alarmed" at the movements, we suppose, of our own troops, whom the Government has marched off to the Rajah's aid and his Minister's rescue. These consist of 300 police and 100 of the 10th Madras N.I., besides a wing of the 37th Grenadiers, moved from Cuttack, and a wing of the 41st M.N.I. ordered to be ready for a march to the scene of uproar. The cause of this outbreak rests in the twilight of a dim reference to some unpopular impost levied by the Rajah; and even the extent of it has probably been exaggerated by common report.

WORKS of irrigation being the order of the day for India, new schemes for that purpose keep cropping up from time to time. The newest of these has been commended to public notice in a late number of the Calcutta Englishman. Its nameless promoters want to irrigate the Rechna Doab, that part of the Punjab which lies between the Chenab and the Ravee—that is, between Wuzerabad and Lahore. It has a better soil than the Baree Doab, and the Chenab is the largest of the rivers that water the Punjab. The local authorities favour the undertaking, and a survey of the ground has already been made. The river could be tapped at two places for two lines of canal; one starting somewhere above Sealkot, the other at Cheniot for the Southern part of the Doab. This latter could be begun and opened for some part of the way within a few months. The country between Cheniot and Lahore shows no engineering difficulties, and this section could be finished for half a million sterling, or about half the cost of the Baree Doab Canal. This would irrigate 1,714,000 acres, the gross profits of which at five shillings an acre would amount to £128,000 a-year—a very satisfactory return for the outlay. Deduct £100,000 a-year for management, repairs, and interest, and a balance of 65½ per cent. would still be available for dividend. These estimates have been framed, we learn, after careful comparison with the cost of similar works, and they exclude all reference to probable profits from mill-rents, navigation, and the sale of grass and timber grown on the canal-banks. The Southern part of the Doab is said to be well suited for the growth of cotton, indigo, and sugar-cane. Altogether the programme has a tempting look, and demands at any rate fair consideration. Promoters of great works are a sanguine race; but with all deductions for the difference between poetry and prose, a scheme like this, if wrought out with common prudence, might be found to pay. There is a great deal of waste land in this as in other parts of India, which a well-considered outlay might turn to good account. But let us have no more guarantees.

THE Madras officials are gradually winging their flight to the Hills. The Commander-in-Chief was to start for Ootacamund on the 30th June. Lord Napier however seems to prefer the Pulney Hills to the Nilgherries, being bound for the former about the middle of July. Sanitary reasons may possibly have determined his choice, for Ootacamund seems to be rivalling Simlah as an unhealthy retreat for persons in quest of health. Its bazaars are ill-built and over-crowded fever nests, its water-supply uncertain and far from wholesome, and the work of clearing away spare vegetation helps, it is said, to poison the air. Be that as it may, two young ladies have already been seized with typhoid fever, and not a few of the Madrassies have gone this season in preference to Bangalore.

DR. MONTGOMERY, secretary to the Madras Sanitary Commission, takes a cheerful view of the mortality in the over-crowded ill-smelling streets of the Black Town of Madras. Under ordinary circumstances, he says, excluding epidemics of cholera and small-pox, the health of Madras "is little in excess of that observed in localities in England of average, but not extreme salubrity."

ROUGH weather is reported from various parts of India. Several vessels have been wrecked off Kurrachee and in the Hooghly. Severe storms of rain and hail have destroyed the rice crops in some parts of North Arcot, and hopelessly ruined the ripe corn. Midnapore and Orissa are half under water, from the unusual flooding of many streams. Assam is said to be even worse off. The dawk from Cuttack to Calcutta came in nearly a week after time. The distress in the flooded districts is said to be very great, and the Government has already begun sending rice down for the use of the hapless people. There are fears indeed of a yet wider and more terrible famine than that from which poor Orissa has so lately recovered. But we can only trust that rumour and hasty panic have overstated the present symptoms.

AFTER several years lost in doing nothing, Calcutta seems likely at last to get the long desired bridge over the Hooghly. It will be a floating bridge, we understand, to be made for about £100,000, after the plans of Messrs. Granville and Leslie.

THE reports from Cabul flatly contradict each other. Now we hear that Abdurrahman Khan has taken Maimanah by storm; anon we are assured that his opponent, Yakoob Khan, has driven him off, and that Shere Ali is marching straight on Cabul. The latter story seems at once the latest and the most truthful; especially as we are told that Shere Ali has agreed to leave Abdurrahman Khan in possession of Balkh on condition of his finally deserting his uncle, Azim Khan. It is even said that the young chief has accepted the conditions.

BUT it is hard to get at the truth on the simplest subjects; such a one, namely, as the question of Dr. Boustead's difference with a brother officer, to which we referred last week. We have since learned, on authority which we cannot question, that the version unfavourable to the doctor "has not one word of truth in it" beyond the mere fact of the squabble. Dr. Boustead was appointed to Zoolla in December or early in January last, and received £30 a-month more pay than that of his regimental post. It is evident therefore that he could not have come off worst in the quarrel, and we have the best grounds for acquitting him of any blame on that point.

ON Monday night the Secretary for India had to go through the painful task of consigning his little India Bill to the tomb of all well-meant failures. He held out the hope however of getting it into committee next session. No harm after all is done by the delay. It is a question that needs more ventilating, how far the power of nominating members of the Supreme Council should be transferred from the Home to the Indian Government. The second Bill will be all the better for a longer delay. The same Minister unfolded on the same evening Mr. Massey's last Indian Budget to a large audience of twenty-five. The gist of his speech was to defend the soundness of Mr. Massey's policy, especially with regard to the license-tax, and to deprecate parliamentary interference with the Indian revenues. Of his financial statement he allowed that it contained nothing very unsatisfactory, nor yet anything to be very proud of. With regard to the opium estimates he has proposed that in future they should be reckoned on an average of several years, the actual balance of yearly loss or gain being written down to the account of public works. Mr. Laing drew a taking picture of India's general progress, and urged the Government to take irrigation works into its own hands. Colonel Sykes put in a word for the disappointed claimants to bonus compensation; and Sir S. Northcote closed the discussion with an avowal of his dislike to borrowing large sums for public works merely because money was cheap.

Suum cuique being the principle on which Lord Napier has steadily acted in serving out praise among all who lent a helping hand in the late campaign, it is not surprising that he should have come forward to disclaim, through the Times, any excess of credit for an earlier victory in which he played a less prominent part. Some remarks of Sir Bartle Frere's at the East India United Service Club dinner had seemed to an officer who had served on Sir Hope Grant's staff during the last Chinese war unfair to that commander's real deserts. In a letter to the Times he protested against adding to one man's laurels at the cost of another's. Lord Napier hastened to set every one at ease by declaring that no one could be more distressed than himself and Sir B. Frere at anything in the latter's remarks "which should have appeared to detract from the honour due to Sir H. Grant, or be calculated to hurt the feelings of his friends." Not looking on "after-dinner eulogies" in the light of history, he had hitherto refrained from noticing the matter, except by some remarks at the Mansion-house dinner in praise of his "old friend and commander," which remarks had not been fully reported in the papers. Major Anson's letter however gave him the opportunity which he gladly took of confirming that officer's statement, that the landing at Peh-tang "was the great strategical point of the campaign;" nor could anyone more willingly admit than himself that "the responsibility and success of the whole campaign belong to Sir Hope Grant." So of course they do, just as a manufacturer reaps all the ostensible credit of his workmen's skill. But Lord Napier denies nothing said by Sir B. Frere, and the greatest commander may really owe much of his success to the acts or suggestions of some able subordinate. It can hardly be doing Sir H. Grant injustice to suppose that his chief engineer, with all his experience, did nothing more than carry out the details of his chief's plan.

LORD NAPIER is still doing the lion of the season. Last Saturday he helped to give away the prizes at Wimbledon, and afterwards attended a dinner given in his honour by the Artillery at Woolwich. On Tuesday evening he again figured as a public guest at the Oriental Club, saying on both occasions just the right thing about the right people.

THE NEW FURLOUGH RULES.

INDIA-OFFICE, July 27, 1868.

THE SECRETARY of STATE for INDIA in COUNCIL having CONFIRMED the following RULES promulgated by the Governor-General of India in Council regarding Leave of Absence to Covenanted Civil Servants, publishes the same in supersession of all previous Rules and Orders on the subject.

These RULES WILL TAKE EFFECT from JULY 1, 1868, and are not intended to apply to Covenanted Civil Servants who are members of the Councils of the Governor-General, or of the Governors of Bombay and Madras, or who are Judges of a High Court.

RULES REGARDING LEAVE OF ABSENCE TO COVENANTED CIVIL SERVANTS.

DEFINITIONS.

I. In the following rules:—

"Actual Service" includes the period during which an officer is on duty, also periods spent on privilege and subsidiary leave, and periods during which an officer, not on leave, may be out of employ on subsistence allowance in India.

"Extraordinary Leave" means any leave granted otherwise than under these rules.

"Long Extraordinary Leave" means extraordinary leave extending beyond a period of three months.

"Long Furlough" means furlough extending beyond a period of three months.

"Salary" includes acting allowances.

An officer's "Station" means that station to which he stands appointed, or such other place as the Government to which he is subordinate may determine.

CHAPTER I.—FURLOUGH.

II. The maximum period of furlough which can be granted to any officer during the whole period of his service is limited to six years.

III. Subject to the above limit, one year's furlough shall be placed to the credit of each officer for every four years of actual service.

IV. No furlough shall be taken before the completion of eight years' actual service, except under Rule VIII.

V. Furlough shall not be repeated until three years from the date of last return from long extraordinary leave or long furlough, except under Rule VIII. Leave taken under Chapters II. and III., but no other leave, shall be reckoned as part of the said three years.

VI. The maximum term of furlough to be taken at any one time shall be two years.

VII. Except as hereinafter provided, an officer when on furlough shall retain a lien on his substantive appointment or on an appointment of similar character, and not less salary, and he shall be granted allowances at the rate of 50 per cent. of his average salary for the previous three years, or for the period which has elapsed since his last return from long furlough, or long extraordinary leave if that period be less than three years.

In calculating such average, the time spent and the allowances drawn under any leave, excepting privilege leave under Chapter II., shall be omitted.

Provided that no officer on furlough shall draw more than £1,200, or less than £300 per annum.

VIII. Under Medical Certificate—

(a) Furlough may be taken on the abovementioned conditions, without reference to the amount at credit under Rule III.

(b) Furlough for a period not exceeding one year may be taken, even if less than three years have elapsed since the last return from long extraordinary leave or long furlough. When on furlough under this clause, an officer will not retain a lien on his appointment, and will be entitled only to subsistence allowance, unless he has completed six months' actual service since his last return from long extraordinary leave or long furlough, and there remain some leave to his credit under Rule III., in which case the officer will retain a lien on his appointment, and will draw allowances as calculated under Rule VII., until that credit be exhausted, but in no case for a period exceeding one year.

(c) Furlough taken without medical certificate, or under clause (a) of this rule, may be extended beyond two years for a period not exceeding one year. When on furlough under this clause, an officer will not retain a lien on his appointment, and will be entitled only to subsistence allowance.

IX. Furlough taken or extended under Rule VIII. is subject to the provision of Rule II.

X. Furlough taken in India will be reckoned from the date of the officer quitting his station to the date of his return thereto. Furlough taken out of India will be reckoned from the date of embarkation to the date of return.

In the event of the furlough being taken partly in India and partly out of India, the commencement and termination of the furlough will be determined by the above rules, according as the furlough begins or ends in or out of India.

XI. For the interval elapsing between departure from his station and the commencement of furlough, and between the termination of furlough and the re-arrival at his station, an officer shall be allowed subsidiary leave not ordinarily exceeding in each case thirty days. During those periods his allowances will be calculated in the same way as his furlough allowances, but without limitation as to maximum and minimum. Provided that, if the officer has, under these rules, lost his lien on his appointment, he shall draw subsistence allowance of his rank. Subsidiary leave shall count as service and residence.

XII. Applications for furlough will, in all cases, be submitted to the Government to which the applicant is subordinate, and will be dealt with in such manner as the Governor General of India in Council may from time to time prescribe.

XIII. Subject to the exigencies of the service, both as regards the number of furloughs available at any one time and as regards individual applications, of which exigencies the Government of India, Madras, or Bombay, as the case may be, shall be exclusively the judge, furloughs will be granted under these rules.

XIV. All applications for furlough under medical certificate, in accordance with these rules, will be granted without restriction.

XV. If, owing to the exigencies of the service, it may be necessary to place any limit on the number of officers who may be absent on furlough at the same time, applications not supported by medical certificate will be granted in the following order:—

The applicant to whose credit the greatest amount of furlough remains under Rule III. shall have the preference.

If two or more applicants are on an equality in this respect, the preference shall be given to the applicant whose actual service in India is longest, reckoning in the case of an officer who has not taken long extraordinary leave or long furlough, from the date of arrival in India, and in the case of an officer who has taken long extraordinary leave or long furlough, from the date of his last return from such leave or furlough.

If two or more applicants are equal in both respects, the preference shall be given to the senior in the gradation list.

XVI. The term of residence qualifying for pension shall be twenty-one years, but no leave, except privilege leave and subsidiary leave, shall count as residence.

XVII. The term of service qualifying for pension shall be twenty-five years.

CHAPTER II.—PRIVILEGE LEAVE.

XVIII. Subject to the exigencies of the State, an officer who has completed eleven months' continuous duty may take privilege leave for one month without deduction from his salary, retaining a lien on his appointment, whether substantive or officiating. Provided that, in the case of his holding an officiating appointment, such lien and his acting allowance will cease on the resumption of charge by the officer to whom the substantive appointment belongs.

XIX. In the same manner and under the same conditions two or three months' privilege leave may be taken when an officer has completed continuous duty of twenty-two or thirty-three months respectively.

XX. Privilege leave may, at the discretion of the local Government, be taken in separate instalments. No second instalment shall be taken until after the completion of six months' continuous duty from the expiry of the first instalment. In this case the eleven months qualifying for fresh privilege leave will be reckoned from the expiry of the first instalment, the period of the second instalment being omitted from the calculation.

Provided that the whole privilege leave taken at any one time shall not exceed three months, and that no accumulation of privilege leave beyond that period shall be admitted.

XXI. If an officer shall overstay his privilege leave, he shall forfeit all salary during the time of his remaining so absent; and if he shall so continue absent for more than one week, his office shall become vacant.

XXII. Privilege leave shall be reckoned as residence and service.

CHAPTER III.—SPECIAL LEAVE.

XXIII. Special leave, on urgent private affairs, may be granted at the discretion of the Local Government for a period not exceeding six months. In respect of retention of a lien on appointment of allowances drawn during the leave, and of subsidiary leave, the conditions of special leave shall be the same as those prescribed for furlough. Special leave shall not be reckoned as residence.

XXIV. Rule XXI. shall, mutatis mutandis, apply to an officer overstaying special leave.

XXV. Special leave may be repeated without allowances after intervals of at least six years' actual service.

CHAPTER IV.—GENERAL.

XXVI. Furlough, privilege leave, and special leave shall not be taken as such in continuation of each other; but if an officer absent on one of these classes of leave be allowed to change it for another, the whole period of his absence shall be held to be under the class of leave for which it was changed.

XXVII. Subject to considerations of State, there will be no restriction as to the places where an officer may reside when on leave.

CHAPTER V.—TEMPORARY RULES.

XXIX. Whatever aggregate amount out of the three years' furlough and three years' sick leave, under the rules until now in force, at present remains to be taken by an officer under the said rules, shall remain to be taken by him under rules now promulgated.

XXX. Any officer now in the service shall, when next proceeding on furlough, elect whether he will draw allowances at the higher minimum rate of £500 per annum (not exceeding his total salary at the time). If he shall so elect, he will, in any future furlough, be limited as to allowance to the lower maximum rate of £1,000 per annum.

XXXI. Any officer now absent on leave, who has no appointment, may, on his return and until he again holds an appointment carrying equal pay to that of the substantive appointment which he last held, draw the subsistence allowance of his rank, together with 75 per cent. of the pay of any appointment in which he shall officiate. Provided that the total salary so drawn by him shall not exceed the pay of the appointment in which he is officiating. This rule shall apply to any officer who may have already returned from furlough.

XXXII. Any officer now absent on furlough, or under medical certificate, may elect whether the remainder of his leave shall be taken under these rules from the date of their promulgation. If he shall so elect, Rule XXX. shall not apply to him.

RULES REGARDING ACTING ALLOWANCES.

I. An officer holding a substantive appointment and officiating in an appointment of a higher grade or class, shall draw acting allowance calculated at 30 per cent. on the first Rs. 2,000, and 20 per cent. on the remainder of the pay of the appointment in which he is officiating.

Provided that, if the acting allowance so calculated do not amount to two-thirds of the difference between the pay of the two appointments, it shall be raised to two-thirds.

Provided further that in no case shall the whole salary so drawn exceed the pay of the appointment in which the officer is officiating.

II. An officer holding no substantive, but only an officiating, appointment, shall, subject to the provisos in Rule I., draw, in addition to the subsistence allowance of his rank, 50 per cent. of the pay of the appointment in which he is officiating.

III. In the case of an officer officiating in an appointment, the pay of which is progressive, his acting allowances shall be calculated on the mean pay of the said appointment, provided that the whole salary so drawn shall not exceed the minimum pay of the said appointment.

CLINTON.

THE NEW MILITARY FURLOUGH RULES.

Simla, June 19.—No. 613.—Under sanction from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, the following rules relative to the absence of military officers on leave are substituted for those hitherto in force, and will be applicable to all officers who elect to adopt them and who belong to the several Indian Staff Corps and to the Indian army, as well as to those officers of her Majesty's British forces in India who are holding permanent staff appointments not of a regimental nature.*

Her Majesty's Government will be requested to decide how far the rules may be considered to apply to other officers of her Majesty's British forces serving in India:—

I. The distinction with respect to allowances hitherto drawn between furlough on private affairs and sick leave is abolished, both kinds of leave being included under the general term furlough, provision, however, being made for the obtaining of furlough, under medical certificate, without all the restrictions applicable to furlough, when taken without medical certificate.

II. Leave taken under the rules now prescribed will not involve forfeiture of appointment, except in the cases herein specially provided for.

III. The rules now prescribed do not affect the provisions of Act 33 of George III., cap. 52, section 70, but an absentee cannot retain his appointment and draw absentee allowances, except under the rules now prescribed.† Nor do they affect the regulations by which general officers can only obtain limited periods of leave without forfeiting their commands.

IV. Leave of absence will, in future, be of three kinds, viz.:—1, furlough in or out of India; 2, general leave on private affairs, or sick certificate in India, or short leave to sea; 3, privilege leave.

CHAPTER I.—FURLOUGH.

V. An officer drawing staff pay, in addition to pay of rank, proceeding on furlough, will be allowed pay at the rate of 50 per cent. of the salary of his substantive office. But an officer on civil employ, or drawing consolidated salary, will be allowed 50 per cent. of the average salary drawn by him for three years prior to his proceeding on furlough. No absentee shall in either case draw more than £1,200, or less than £250 per annum. The term salary will signify the total amount drawn by an officer, whether as consolidated pay or staff allowances in addition to pay, but will not include any extra or special allowances. It is to be clearly understood that an officer absent on furlough, who may be transferred to another office during his absence, shall be entitled for the entire period of his furlough to pay at the rate sanctioned to him when leaving India, provided that an officer whose term of office shall lapse during his furlough shall cease to draw his half staff salary, from the date of such lapse. An officer will also be entitled to the benefit of his promotion to a higher staff corps or regimental rank while on furlough, subject to the maximum limit.

Officers not in staff employ will receive half the Indian pay of their rank, provided that in no case will an officer entitled to furlough receive less than the above minimum of £250 per annum.‡

* The provision in Rule XI. by which furlough pay is to be given to officers absent on furlough on urgent private affairs not having been before the Secretary of State is to be considered to be altogether subject to his approval.

† The section referred to is quoted below:—Section 70.—“And be it further enacted, that no person who shall have held any civil or military station whatever in India in the service of the said United Company, being under the rank or degree of a Member of Council or Commander-in-Chief of the Forces, and who, having departed from India by leave of the Governor-general in Council, shall not return to India within the space of five years next after such departure, shall be entitled to any rank or restoration of office, or be capable of again serving in India, either in the European or native corps of troops or in the civil line of the Company's service, unless in the case of any civil servant of the Company, it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Court of Directors that such absence was occasioned by sickness or infirmity, or unless such person be permitted to return with his rank to India by a vote or resolution passed by way of ballot, by three parts in four of the proprietors assembled in General Court, specially convened for that purpose, whereof eight days' previous notice of the time and purpose of such meeting shall be given in the London Gazette, or unless, in the case of any military officer, it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the said Court of Directors and the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India that such absence was occasioned by sickness or infirmity, or some inevitable accident.”

‡ The annual allowance of £50 heretofore granted in certain cases to subalterns will cease to be drawn with reference to the amount fixed as the minimum of furlough pay.

VI. All grants of furlough on private affairs are subject to the exigencies of the public service, of which exigency the Government is to be exclusively the judge, and to any regulations that may be found necessary for limiting the number of absentees.

VII. The maximum amount of furlough on private affairs to be taken at any one time, carrying pay and retention of appointment, will be two years.

VIII. A period of at least three years' service after return from last furlough of not less than one year's duration must be completed before furlough can again be taken unless obtained under medical certificates (see Rules XIII. and XIV.).

IX. An officer will be eligible for two years' furlough on the completion of eight years' actual service in India, for a third year after six years' actual service from the date of his return to duty, and for a fourth or fifth year after similar intervals of six years. The grant of furlough to an officer eligible for it will be subject only to the conditions specified in Rule VI. The fact of having taken furlough on medical certificate will not affect the grant of these furloughs, except as to the condition laid down in Rules VIII., XIII., and XVI.

X. An officer eligible for furlough need take the whole amount to which his service entitles him, but may apply for any portion thereof as an instalment; and in that case the balance will remain at his credit in any future computation of the amount of furlough to which he may be entitled.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(I.) An officer who has served nine years in India is entitled to two years' furlough. He takes only one year, and after his return remains in India for five years. He is then eligible for two years' furlough, as follows:—Total service in India, 14 years; furlough due on that service, 3 years; furlough already taken, 1 year; balance for which he is eligible, 2 years.

(2.) An officer who has served 20 years in India without taking furlough is entitled to four years' furlough. He can only take, however, two years at one time carrying pay, the balance remaining at his credit in any future computation of furlough to which he may be entitled. He can take that balance after completing three years' service from the date of his return from the first instalment.

XI. Furlough on urgent private affairs for six months, with pay equivalent to the British regimental pay of his rank, to be extended to a year, if necessary, may be granted, when the officer is not eligible for ordinary furlough. The said period may form part of the periods of eight and six years referred to in Rule IX.

XII. Subject to State considerations, there will be no restriction as to the places to which an officer may resort during furlough.

XIII. Absence on medical certificate for a longer period than two years at one time, or departure on such furlough within three years of the date of return from a previous furlough of not less than one year, will involve forfeiture of appointment. Such furlough may, however, be extended to a third year on English pay.

XIV. An officer not entitled to furlough, whose health may necessitate his taking it, may, under the usual medical certificate, obtain such amount as may be duly certified to be necessary for the restoration of his health, but will only receive English furlough pay.

XV. An officer entitled to furlough, whose health may necessitate his absence from India, will be compelled to take leave as furlough under Rule IX., but without forfeiting any special advantages of passage money, &c., to which he would be entitled now, if proceeding on medical certificate. Any extension of this furlough beyond the period to which he may be entitled under Rule IX. will be regarded, in all respects, as furlough on medical certificate. Such extension will not be allowed to take effect until the officer shall have exhausted the entire amount of his available furlough on private affairs.

XVI. The aggregate amount of furlough, with pay and retention of appointment, whether on private affairs or on medical certificate, that may be granted to an officer during his service, will be limited to eight years.

XVII. If taken in India furlough will be reckoned from the date of the absentee quitting his station to the date of his return thereto; if taken out of India, from the date of the sailing of the vessel in which he may have embarked to the date of his disembarkation in India.

XVIII. Preparatory leave to embark for Europe or elsewhere on furlough will be granted for any period not ordinarily exceeding thirty days. Leave to the same limit, to enable him to rejoin on his return from furlough, will be granted from the date of his disembarkation from India.

XIX. Furlough allowances shall be payable monthly if payment is taken in India, and quarterly if payment is taken in England.

XX. Advances of furlough pay will continue to be made in India to those officers who desire it, for three months from the date of embarkation. Payments in continuation will be made in England on the expiration of six months from that date.

XXI. The last pay certificate issued to each officer who may be granted furlough, whether on private affairs or on medical certificate, will specify the rate of the pay and staff salary of his last substantive appointment, and the rate to which he will be entitled in Europe in virtue of Rule V.

XXII. An officer acting in India for an absentee will be restricted for the entire period of such acting to the half staff salary of the appointment in which he may be acting, in addition to the full pay of his rank, and the half staff salary of his own appointment if he possess one. The staff salary granted to an acting officer will, however, in no such case be less than Rs. 100 per mensem.

XXIII. The privilege heretofore granted to military officers of counting the proportion of leave noted in the margin (two years in twenty years, three years in twenty-five years, four years in thirty years) as service for pension is retained. The periods of service qualifying for pension remain unaltered.

ILLUSTRATION OF THE MODE OF COMPUTING SERVICE FOR PENSION IN ANY CASE.

Total service from date of arrival in India, say 30 years. Leave—In Europe, say six years, seven months; in India, three years, five months; equal to ten years, of which he can reckon four years; remaining to be deducted, six years and six months; service counting for pension, 24 years.

XXIV. In computing the furlough on private affairs to which an officer who has already enjoyed some portion of such furlough will be entitled under these rules, it will be necessary to deduct the total amount of the furlough on private affairs of which he may have availed himself during his service, from the total periods to which, under Rule IX., he can lay claim. The balance will represent the leave to which he will be entitled on the expiration of not less than three years from his last return to duty.

ILLUSTRATION.

(1.) An officer, who had obtained under the existing rules two years' furlough after ten years' service, returns to India on the date on which this Order is promulgated. He accepts its conditions, and serves four years longer in India. On the expiration of that term he can take one year's furlough, thus:—Total service in India, 14 years; leave to which that service entitles him, three years; already enjoyed, two years; balance, one year.

(2.) An officer of two years' service has proceeded on sick certificate to England for 20 months, extended afterwards to two years. He returns, serves six years in India, takes two years' furlough, and returns to India about the time of the promulgation of these rules, which he accepts. He must serve six years before he can take an additional year's furlough, thus:—

Total service up to return from furlough, 12 years; total service in India, eight years; furlough enjoyed on that service, two years; further period of service to entitle him to one year's furlough, six years.

CHAPTER II.—GENERAL LEAVE ON PRIVATE AFFAIRS AND SICK CERTIFICATE IN INDIA.

XXV. An officer will be eligible, as at present, to take leave on private affairs or sick certificate in India, for any period not exceeding six months, at the discretion of H.E. the C. in C., or of the Government under which he may be serving. During the entire period of his absence on this account, the officer will be entitled, as at present, to his full pay, and a moiety of his staff salary. Leave taken under this rule will form no part of the eight years' aggregate furlough. If this indulgence should be taken advantage of for a third year consecutively, the officer will lose his staff appointment.

XXVI. Leave on sick certificate for a period exceeding six months, capable of extension, under renewed medical certificate, to a limit of one year, may be granted to any officer who, in the opinion of a medical board, may require it. Leave of this nature, taken after the promulgation of these rules, will be held to constitute a part of the maximum period of eight years' leave of absence to which an officer is entitled in his entire period of service, but will not be regarded as furlough, nor will it affect the intervals entitling to furlough laid down in Rule IX. During this leave the absentee will draw a moiety of his staff salary in addition to the pay of his rank.

XXVII. Short leave not exceeding three months on private affairs or sick certificate may also be taken to sea, on the above condition, but absence from India for any longer period will be treated as furlough.

XXVIII. All general leave taken in India counts as part of the leave reckoning against service for pension.

CHAPTER III.—PRIVILEGE LEAVE.

XXIX. Privilege leave may be granted, as at present, for 60 days in each year, to all officers in military employ, without deduction from the salaries and emoluments drawn by them. General leave, in extension of privilege leave, can only be granted on the ground of sickness, or some other serious emergency which could not have been foreseen when the officer proceeded on privilege leave. Privilege leave may, however, be converted into general leave with the sanction of the Commander-in-Chief or the Government.

XXX. In the case of the stations noted in the margin (Assam, Shillong, Erinpore, Deolee, Khairwara, Khotra, Bunnoo, Dera Ismael Khan, Dera Ghazee Khan, Rajanpore, Jacobabad), privilege leave may, as at present, be granted for 90 days to officers of local corps, or of corps which are usually in one or other of the districts named.

XXXI. An officer is at liberty to proceed wherever he may desire on privilege leave, provided he can insure his return before the expiration of his leave.

XXXII. Privilege leave cannot be taken in continuation of furlough, nor can furlough be obtained in continuation of privilege leave. If furlough be obtained by an officer while absent on privilege leave the privilege leave will be converted into general leave, the officer for that period sacrificing a moiety of his staff salary.

MILITARY OFFICERS IN CIVIL EMPLOY.

XXXIII. Military officers in civil or political employ taking leave in India come, as respects periods of leave obtainable, and amount of pay to be granted, under the "Civil Leave Rules." When they take leave out of India they come under the "Military Leave Rules."

SUBSIDIARY RULE.

XXXIV. Officers of the Indian military and medical service will be required generally to notify their intention to accept these rules, or to adhere to those now existing, on the first occasion of their taking furlough or general leave after the publication of this order. Officers who may determine to abide by existing rules will be allowed to proceed on furlough on the conditions laid down in Rules VII., VIII., and XIII., to the extent to which they may be entitled under the furlough regulations of 1854, and on the rates of pay contemplated in those regulations, but retaining their appointments. The principle laid down in Rule XV. must, however, be applied in those cases.

The foregoing rules will take effect from the 1st of July, 1868, as respects retention of appointments and terms under which leave will be granted, but half staff allowances will not be available for officers now on leave in cases where the acting officer has already come into receipt of the full staff salary.

H. W. NORMAN, Colonel,
Secretary to the Government of India.

[The Government have now under consideration the rules of their chaplains; these, doubtless, will be published immediately. Those for the uncovenanted service are also under discussion, and will shortly follow.]

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers have leave of absence for the season:—Lieut.-col. Smith, Staff Corps (Comdnt. 18th Bengal Cav.), to Murree and Cashmere, from July 15 to Oct. 15, in extension. Major Grant, 25th Foot (doing general duty at Futtehghurh), to Almorah and hills north of Dehra, from June 23 to Aug. 21, in extension. Major Williams, 93rd Foot, to Mussoorie and adjacent hills, from June 15 to Oct. 15. Lieut. Mainwaring, 1st Wing Subaltern 35th N.I., to Simla, from June 1 to Oct. 15. Staff Asst. Surg. Fatigan, attached to the 11th Hussars, for two months, from the date of availing himself of the same, to Nynce Tal, on medical certificate. Surg. Major Kelly, in medical charge 11th N.I., to Kumaon and the hills north of Dehra, from May 19 to Nov. 19, on medical certificate. Capt. Baker, Wing Officer 38th N.I., to remain at Simla, from June 14 to Oct. 15, in extension. Capt. Nash, attached to the 2nd Goorkhas, to Simla, on private affairs, from July 10 to Oct. 15. Lieut. Harden, 1st Wing Subaltern 22nd N.I., to Mussoorie and Simla, from July 4 to Oct. 15, in extension. Major Bailey, doing duty at Allahabad, to the hills north of Dehra, from May 26 to Sept. 26, on medical certificate. Lieut. Apperley (Adj. 15th Bengal Cavalry), to Cashmere, from July 5 to Aug. 10, in extension of privilege leave. Cornet Barrow, 2nd Dragoon Guards (2nd Squadron Subaltern 1st Bengal Cavalry), to remain at Simla, from June 5 to Aug. 4, in extension.

FURLONGS.—The following officers obtained furlough in the course of June last:—Leave of absence to Europe, on medical certificate, for eighteen months, to Mr. Rennie, Assistant Engineer, with effect from June 2. Mr. Prinsep, C.S., is permitted to proceed to Europe on furlough for one year from the date of embarkation. Mr. Elliot Macnaghten, C.S., is permitted to proceed to Europe on furlough for a period of three years from the date of embarkation. Second captain Stone, R.A. (No. 1 Battery 21st Brigade), to England, from date of embarkation, to appear before a medical board. Lieut. Wade, 55th Foot, to Calcutta, from June 3 to 7, and thence to England, for fifteen months, from date of embarkation, on private affairs. Lieut. Taylor, 25th Foot, to England, via the Cape, from date of embarkation, to appear before a medical board. Leave for one month to Capt. Johnson, 2nd in command, 3rd Cavalry Hyderabad Contingent, from such date as he may avail himself of it, to visit Bombay preparatory to applying for a furlough to Europe on medical certificate. The undermentioned officers have reported their departure on the date specified opposite to their names:—Lieut.-col. Twysden, of Infantry, Lieut. Vyvyan, of the General List Infantry, and Lieut. Newington, of the General List Infantry, Mooltan, June 9.

SIR DONALD MCLEOD'S REPORTED RESIGNATION.—The Lucknow Times tells us, on the authority of "the Lahore journals," that Sir Donald Macleod has tendered his resignation of the Lieutenant-governorship of the Punjab, in consequence, as is supposed, of the Delhi and London Bank having taken legal steps against him for the recovery of a debt of Rs. 1,95,000. We gather, from what our contemporary says, that Sir Donald Macleod is liable for this amount in common with General Innes, the two having been security to the bank for some third party or parties not named. "Two more unfortunate victims of misplaced confidence than the above gentlemen we have never," says the Times, "seen in our lives. Sir Donald lost a round lac of rupees as shareholder of the Agra and Masterman's Bank, when the grand smash took place in 1866. Peter Innes was destined from his cradle to be taken in and done for by his best friends, and was no sooner out of one security scrape than he was pretty certain to put his foot in it again for somebody else—a piece of amiable weakness which he shares largely with Sir Donald, and one that has endeared them to all their friends at much sacrifice to their pockets. It certainly is no business of anybody's how a gentleman elects to spend his own money, but what we have to deal with at present is, whether such a proceeding as that of being made defendant in a suit for the recovery of money should make it imperative on a high official to resign a lucrative and honourable berth. We reply, most certainly not, and we therefore are of opinion that the Viceroy should not accept Sir Donald's resignation, on the principle that people should not be punished for what they did when in another position in life, and for what is in itself nothing prejudicial to their character or even honour."

SCIENTIFIC.—We observe by a notification of the Government of the North-West Provinces that Dr. J. G. Pilcher, superintendent Central Prison, Allahabad, is appointed to officiate as Chemical Examiner to Government, in addition to his other duties, during the deputation of Dr. W. Walker.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

CHESNEY ON INDIAN POLITY.—II.

MAJOR CHESNEY'S Third Book deals in seven chapters with the whole Civil Administration of British India. The district being the administrative unit, the scheme of district organisation is first brought under review. Each province is divided into districts, which correspond with the French "departments." In Madras the average district is a good deal larger than Yorkshire, and the largest ones contain over 12,000 square miles—that is, more than the whole area of Belgium. In Bengal and the North-West the districts average a larger area than that of Devonshire, but are more populous in comparison than those of Madras; the average in all three provinces being a million souls, against three-fourths of a million in Bombay, and half a million in the Punjab and Central Provinces. At the head of the district stands the Collector-Magistrate, whose functions, here concisely detailed, combine, let us say, those of a Commissioner for Inland Revenue, of the Quarter Sessions, and of the County Sheriff, besides one or two minor functionaries. Under this officer come in their several degrees the Joint-Magistrate and Collector, the Assistant-Magistrate and Collector, the Deputy-Collector, and so on, to the native tehseeldar or talookdar at the head of each of the six or eight tehseels or talooks into which the district is divided. In Bengal the tehsildar is represented by a deputy magistrate. Of late years the control of the police has been transferred to a separate superintendent, often a military officer, with a staff of inspectors, mostly taken from the army.

Over the Collector-Magistrates, except in Madras, stand the Commissioners of Division, whose sway extends over five or six districts, and who in their turn are controlled by a central Board of Revenue. For judicial purposes each district is ruled by a Civil and Sessions Judge, below whom are the Principal Sudder Ameen, the Moonsiffs, and the Small Cause Court Judges; while the High Court of each province overrules all. The system now established makes justice open to all classes, but, according to Major Chesney, the freedom of appeal which forms one of its chief and most necessary features, tends to "promote a spirit of reckless gambling in law," through "the apparently capricious way in which the judgments of each Court often appear to be upset by the next." A stricter legal training on one side and a little more regard for truth on the other might go far, we imagine, to counteract this evil in a system otherwise fair enough.

A chapter on the Non-Regulation Provinces, which now embrace more than half British India, and answer in some respects to our Crown Colonies, shows how steadily the old distinctions between Regulation and Non-Regulation Provinces are passing away, as each of the latter gradually develops its own code of laws and scheme of government. All these nebulae, one might say, will in due time be resolved into regular stars.

After a short explanatory chapter on the central departments of Customs, Opium, Forests, Education, and so on, we come to a well-considered chapter on the Covenanted Civil Service, whose members fill nearly all the higher posts in the administration, from a lieutenant-governorship to a joint-magistracy. The chief part, indeed, of the work of government is done by "the little knots of officials scattered over the country at distances of forty, fifty, and, in some cases, a hundred miles apart." For the mass of the people in each district the government is, in fact, represented by the Collector-Magistrate, his two assistants, and the District Judge. On the efficiency of these men depends the right working of the whole administrative system. Finance, education, public works, are quite secondary questions in comparison. That the people of the country should be lightly taxed, secure in life and property, and free to follow their own pursuits, these are the main conditions of good government for India; and they cannot be ensured without peace, a wise and impartial application of useful laws, and a strong check on official oppression. The very readiness of the people to be governed "creates, in itself, one of the greatest difficulties in the way of good government," by encouraging misrule on the one hand, and servility on the other.

So far, however, as we may judge by results, it is clear that the course of English administration has steadily improved since the days of Lord Cornwallis, and that even then "it was vastly better than the best native government which it superseded." If our rule be unpopular with the upper classes, what of that? Popularity is no test of good government, for the most conservative class in England, the agricultural labourers, has most reason to be dissatisfied with things as they are. All things fairly considered, it is impossible to deny that the Indian Civil Service "is the most able, as it is the most important, official service in the world." Such a result has been owing not to the methods by which it has been recruited, but to the practical education of Indian official life. The extent and nature of his duties, the demands on his personal energies, the wide responsibilities of his position, the careers open to his ambition, have made the civil servant what he is, and not the process by which a number of nominees, "chosen at random," passed through college without any serious effort. The new system of competition, if it has failed to attract the best men from our Universities, has at any rate secured the absence of thoroughly stupid and uneducated persons. Nor are the new men a whit inferior to the old in respect of physical or social conditions, for many of them come from the Universities, most of them have no morbid excess of brains, and the bodily prowess of the old school was due not to their Haileybury, but to their Indian training.

Major Chesney points out by the way the chief defects in the present system of examination. The mathematical test is so severe that few candidates care to take up mathematics at all. On the other hand, a very small knowledge of physical science or of the Eastern languages is allowed to go a very long way. Thus it happens that the education of the Civil Service is practically thrown into the hands of a few crammers, who take the place originally intended for the public schools. Moreover, the competition for entrance is now fixed at too late an age, at an age when young men are already seeing their way to better themselves by staying at home. Major Chesney would catch his candidates younger, by examinations held in the chief public schools and colleges, in the subjects of study therein pursued. The time for subsequent study might then be lengthened to three years, special regard being paid withal to the study of jurisprudence and the Oriental languages. A college might also be established at one of the Universities, wherein students would have more than all the advantages of Haileybury without any of its drawbacks. The first appointments should be offered to every school that could show a liberal course of studies and a fair average of successful scholars.

In the next chapter the author justifies the employment of military civilians in the Non-Regulation Provinces, as a cheap way of utilising the services of able officers, sons of Indian officials who are seldom able to find an opening for their children at home. He then proceeds to sketch the rise and progress of the Uncovenanted Civil Service, showing how it has grown up as it were by accident, unrecognised by law till a few years back, and still lacking its due place in the official honour-list. He points out the absurdity of having the same set of leave and pension rules for the native clerk and the English gentleman, whose real home is in England. The time, indeed, has come, he thinks, and very justly too, for displacing the old distinction between the two services by a division into departments, with a broad line drawn as in England between the upper and lower grades in each. Native officials in the Revenue and Judicial Departments are now most unfairly treated in respect of pay and chances of promotion, as compared with their English rivals in the Covenanted Service. You must raise their pay in order to improve their morals, and you must open some avenues to high office, as a means of tempting native gentlemen of rank into the service of the State. The history of native States shows how fit the natives are for most kinds of administrative work. In short, the Civil Service should be thrown open both to natives and to European members of the Uncovenanted Service. "The invasion need not be carried far. . . All that is wanted is the assertion of the principle, that merit in the subordinate ranks shall not be unrewarded." With the objections likely to be raised to such proposals the author deals effectively enough.

The Third Book closes with a chapter on the Judicial Service, in which Major Chesney pleads for a further separation of the judicial from the other branches of the administration, at least in the upper grades. A Judge may become a Commissioner: even one of the High Court Judges may be appointed lieutenant-governor or member of council. Thus, experienced officers are taken away from their proper sphere, and it becomes very hard to maintain a full bench of able judges.

In the Fourth Book Major Chesney treats of the Indian army, its rise and development, the formation of the Staff Corps which supplies officers for every kind of duty but that of a true staff, the regimental officers of the native army, the native armies themselves, and their native officers. It is curious to observe that in 1856 there were only two more battalions of Queen's Infantry in India than the twenty serving there in 1808. Major Chesney points out the evils, which came to a head in the days just before the mutiny, in the old system of draining half the officers of a native regiment into staff and civil employ, the remainder being left to do double duty in a discontented spirit, which told upon the men also. Nor does he forget to show how the gradual limiting of the commanding officer's powers tended to loosen the bonds of military discipline.

With regard to the new Staff Corps the author insists that, in spite of its better features, it cannot be long maintained on its present footing. Half of its members are virtually civilians with military rank, which has no practical value in an age when service tends more and more to run in departmental grooves. The present system will in time swamp England with colonels and generals who have never commanded a company; and it already clashes with the rules of the British army regarding rates of promotion. In future all officers on civil employ should be transferred to a civil list, and a Staff Corps, if retained at all, should be retained only for military uses. The present mode of officering native regiments involves frequent change of officers with consequent loss of union between the officers and men. The bad effects of this were seen in the Bhotan campaign. There is no need however of returning to the old system. Convert the native army into regiments of four battalions each, and place the officers of each regiment on a seniority list. One of the four battalions would remain as a depot in the province where the regiment was raised, while the rest in war time would recruit their strength from that one at need, whether in officers or in men. Each regiment should have eight field officers to ten captains, and as many subalterns. Officers removed for a time to the military staff would count as supernumeraries in the cadres of their regiments. The whole native army would be divided into four army corps, each with its due complement of English troops under a lieutenant-general, who should obey the orders of one Commander-in-Chief for all India. Each army should be recruited from and remain in its own province; and each regiment should have if possible its own recruiting district, and be composed of men of one caste or creed. The commissioned ranks should be opened freely to deserving natives on other conditions than that of long service in the rank and file.

The Fifth Book treats of Public Works in three full chapters on Roads, Railways, and Irrigation. Some of our readers will be surprised to hear that few roads worthy of the name were known in India twenty-five years ago. Mr. Thomason gave the first impulse to road-making during his government of the North-Western Provinces. Lord Dalhousie bettered his example in the Punjab, with the help of his chief engineer, the present Lord Napier of Magdala. He too was the first to form a separate department of public works, not only for the central Government, but for each province. Since the first year of his rule the outlay on public works has grown from £600,000 to more than £7,000,000 a-year. The want of good roads in Bengal is explained by the utter lack of stone or other materials for paving them. At the present rate of outlay about 8,000 miles of good road will be laid down throughout India every ten years; a small result in comparison with her actual wants.

In view of the growing cost of making and repairing roads, it has been proposed to defray the cost of repairs from local revenues, new roads being still to be paid for out of the Imperial Treasury. But the local funds would never meet the demand on them without a great enlargement of the taxing-powers of the local governments.

With regard to railways, in spite of the control wielded over them by the Government, a good deal of public money has been wasted in their construction. The guarantee system weakens the responsibility of railway shareholders and their agents, without securing the proper amount of Government supervision. It is at best but a poor substitute for direct management of the railways by the State, and its faults become more apparent as more railways are opened to the public. At present the State cannot compel the companies to lower their fares, to run more trains, to accommodate the public by bridging over the Hooghly, for example. Nor can it ensure the cheap construction of the best lines that could be selected. The one good feature of the present system is, that it ensures the steady application of capital to railway works. It would be easy to retain this special advantage of joint-stock agency by handing a railway over to the Government after its completion, not before. As each railway gets finished, the State should buy it from its constructors. Boards should be substituted for the consulting engineer, with a central board in London to manage all the English business of all the lines together.

In the chapter on Irrigation, the author argues against leaving to joint-stock companies the management of works in which their interest is directly opposed to that of the public, and their modes of procedure tend to the annoyance of those they profess to benefit. Irrigation works moreover in the hands of private companies can never, he thinks, become a paying investment, however profitable they may prove to the State, and necessary as safeguards against the worst effects of famine. Of late years the Indian Government has become alive to the duty of extending these works over all parts of India as quickly as may be. Major Chesney shows the different conditions under which such works have to be carried out in different provinces, Madras, for instance, as compared with the Gangetic Doab, or Bombay.

The chapter on Finance deals chiefly with the taxes lately imposed or contemplated. Starting with the financial crisis of 1859, the author examines the financial experiments of Mr. Wilson and his successors to the present day. Those experiments have ended after all in a return to the financial system of 1858. The Indian revenues are now in a flourishing condition, for the seeming deficits in the yearly revenue are due to the practice of charging remunerative public works, such as canals and some military buildings, against income instead of capital. In his final chapter the author discusses questions of Indian currency—has a word to say in favour of a gold coinage which might be made to harmonise with that of most European countries—but prefers for the present a large extension and improvement of the paper currency, by the doing away of merely local issues of notes, and establishing “one universal note,” ranging from the value of a rupee upwards for all India. We have thus followed the author through a work full of condensed information nowhere else furnished in an equal space, and crowded with suggestions which, if seldom quite new, and sometimes open to much debate, are always worth examining, either by themselves or as parts of one well-considered and thoroughly workmanlike scheme.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

CHANGES IN HINDU SOCIETY.

The Som Prokash, a native paper, declares that day after day Hindu society is undergoing various changes. If we count and look into all the reforms that have taken place from our boyhood we are lost in wonder and admiration. Ten years ago, it was a general reflection, when one entered a village, that the Bengalees were created only to waste their time in play and idleness. From boys to elderly men, every one in the village was fond of play. The boy had no instruction. The young took no concern in business; and the old found no other employment but communicating slander, story-telling and play. But the same villages, when entered now, do not present the same appearance. The children are engaged in study. The adults and grown-up are walking hither and thither, busy in their employments. And, seeing and hearing of this, even elderly men have shaken off much of their pristine listlessness. As formerly every one used to spend his time in gaming and laziness he had to suffer the effects attendant on that line of conduct. Most of them failed to supply the wants of their families. Far from enjoying worldly pleasures and entertainments, many found difficulty in procuring food and clothing. But times are altered. Now-a-days, neither the husbandmen nor the day-labourer utter mournful cries for bread. Only those few, who, bragging of their caste, are averse to labour, and waste their time in laziness, are now suffering. Generally speaking, the villages are now more prosperous in many points than formerly. The diffusion of education, the advancement of trade, and the construction of railway lines are the three causes of this revolution in villages. These three can be fairly traced to the British Government. But as to the British Government we can ascribe all our blessings, so the intercourse with the English and their example have generated some deadly evils. To enumerate these also is of importance. In the first place, drinking intoxicating liquors has made very rapid strides, and concomitant evils also have made their appearance. Secondly, many have turned libertines. This must be attributed to the decay of faith in Hinduism. So little faith have they now in Hinduism that we observe very little attention to the religious ceremonies enjoined in the Hindu Shasters, and many again have reduced it to the merest formality. At present no prayers at the three stated periods of the day, incantations, nor religious burning of the clarified butter present themselves to our sight. The copper-scooped utensils for religious purposes have disappeared from some houses, and the stone deities, now foul and dirty from want of regard, have been locked up in chests. Pernicious habits are contracted without hesitation; but none is forward in a measure which is essential to the progress of Hindu society and good to the country. The abolition of early marriage is a benevolent measure; but few individuals seem thus far to have made a stand for it. Two correspondents of the Shome Prokash have uttered bewailings after witnessing the marriages of two boys. Early marriage is a mine from which spring numerous and great evils. That we are so sadly deficient in bodily vigour and lively spirit is attributable not only to the enervating influence of the local climate, but also, and mainly, to the system of early marriages. Bengalees do not wait for maturity, and are therefore a physically weak race. How can such a race be expected to attain vigour and longevity? That the natives cannot prosecute any business with perseverance to an advanced age must be traced to this system of early marriage, which induces also early decay. The system of early marriage prevalent among the Deccan Beidic Brahmins of this country is a most harrowing case. Generally their betrothal takes place even before their birth. Marriage is consummated when they are but ten or eleven years old. The evils resulting from this system must be patent to every one. Their difficulties cannot be well expressed. Education stops after their marriage. Many are beset with perils by having a large family to maintain. At those periods of life when other nations enter on family life, after adopting a partner, the Beidic Brahmins, surrounded as they have been with grandsons and great-grandsons, are encompassed by difficulties and hardships. Then it is impossible for them to give due sustenance to their large family, or education to their children. The head of the family or household is little more than an animal. Knowledge and wisdom he has none; nor has he magnanimity, nor experience of good, nor the capacity of gaining money. He is deprived of everything by his early marriage. Nor is this the limit of the evil. Contrary to the usual order of things the women usually get the upper hand in their conjugal relations, a course not conducive either to the progress or the happiness of the race. And while these evils are evident to the senses, it appears strange that none attempt to abolish the cause, and to remove the evil from amongst them. This of itself is another proof of the pernicious results of early marriage, that the manhood of a nation or a class may become subverted. This might be done without the loss of caste, and yet when the subject is named, its consideration is avoided, or the most learned or the most ignorant give the stereotyped answer that “their fathers did it.” What an extraordinary deference to ancestors! Where lie those fathers when intoxicating liquors are drunk and noxious drugs taken! In these and other vicious indulgences do these people think of, or defer to the customs of their ancestors?

FOREST CONSERVANCY.

The Englishman observes that the absolute necessity that exists for forest conservancy has now been felt all over Europe, and is being felt all over India. The lower provinces of Bengal have at length been taken in hand, following the lead of other provinces. Though too late to save forests of incalculable value from almost total destruction, there is yet time for the saving of much valuable forest country, and it is to be hoped that Government will support with all their authority the measures considered necessary to retrieve past, and arrest further destruction of their forest property. Local pressure will necessarily arise against conservancy on the part of the public, and complaints from the indigenous inhabitants of districts whose free use of timber standing in the forests will be interdicted, groundless though they will appear on examination, nevertheless, receive support until the real necessities for conservancy are understood. When it is considered that the wisdom and foresight of European statesmen were not of a nature to apprehend the destruction of forest property which was going on, until many districts and lands which had formerly been thickly populated and covered with rich forests, had been converted into bare rocks and arid plains, which cannot now support life in a few herds of cattle or flocks of sheep, it is scarcely to be murmured at that in India similar destruction has taken place, and is even now going on. A special department is being organised to carry out operations connected with the protection of forests, their reproduction, and the regulating of timber operation. Its duties are responsible and arduous; they are also of such a nature as must in some degree make them unpopular, but as the objects sought become better understood, petty opposition to an important Imperial measure will gradually disappear. It will not be long before the scandalous destruction of timber on tea estates, the consequence of shameful ignorance, will cause the owners to feel that which they are now only first beginning to think may come upon them, viz., want of wood for their tea boxes. When this time comes they will change the views they now hold regarding the value of standing timber, begin to understand what Government has been doing for the general good, and feel grateful, perhaps, that their future wants, among others, have not been overlooked.

RUSSOPHOBIA.

The Times of India holds that if there is one folly in India which more than another merits contempt it is this Russophobia. There is about as much serious intention at St. Petersburg of invading this Indian empire as there is in London of invading Russian Tartary. Every now and again a vehement effort is made by the Calcutta press to galvanise into vitality the old and worn-out belief in a Russian advance upon our north-west frontier. That Russia is accomplishing a mission of great importance to humanity in Central Asia, in spite of blunders in her course, and the interested motives of her agents, is as certain as that we ourselves are engaged in such a mission here. Instead of frankly recognising the fact, and hailing each step of her progress as a gain to civilisation, these Calcutta gentlemen regard her every advance but as a mere menace to ourselves! In their stupid terror they are ready at one time to advocate the occupation of Cabul, and at another of the moon, to guard the way to India! While the English mind remains thus stupidly sensitive upon this point of Russian advance in Asia, we furnish that power with the means of indefinite annoyance, by merely playing upon our cowardice with sham intrigues. Let Russian statesmen once see that their conquests in Central Asia no longer create alarm amongst Englishmen, and they will cease to use them as a weapon of diplomacy. It is our own fault that we have not long since come to a frank understanding with Russia as to the real nature of her projects in Central Asia. If we were in any reasonable doubt of it, the right course would be to have a British officer at Russian head-quarters to inform us of every movement in Russian territory, where we now choose to be dependent upon such respectable sources as native newsmongers at Cabul and elsewhere. Our attitude upon this whole subject must be intensely ludicrous in the eyes of Russian statesmen, and is deservedly so.

AN IRONICAL CONTRAST.

The Umritu Bazar Putrika asks, who will not acknowledge that the English are in every way better than the Bengalees? The physical power and courage of Englishmen is uncommon; the natives of this country are noted for their weakness and timidity. The learning of Englishmen knows no bounds; our learning is of a very meagre description. The English have by science and art reached the summit of prosperity; the sons of Bengal are for want of these still at the foot of the hill. The rules of English society are very beautiful; our rules and customs are very disgraceful. English food, dwellings, and clothes are good; ours are exceedingly bad. Therefore, on comparison being drawn between the two races, it is evident that English power and rank are a thousand times more praiseworthy than ours. When there is such a vast difference between the two races, it is proper and only in accordance with reason that there should be some difference in their comforts. The Calcutta municipality are zealous in upholding this difference. That, too, is divided into two parts—the English quarter and the Bengalee quarter. The former resembles the residence of India, the sovereign of the gods; the latter is most disgusting. The roads in the English quarter are well watered morning and evening; who looks at the dust in the streets of the Bengalee quarter? In the hot weather a windy day fills Bengalee houses with dust; but what distresses us is that Englishmen are subjected to great hardships when they have to traverse the streets in the Bengalee quarter of the town. The drains in the English quarter are perfectly clean; devils would flee from the smell which exudes from the drains in the Bengalee quarter. This is no small good fortune in our lot. In the English quarter, let ever so much filth be thrown out of gentlemen's houses, it is instantly conveyed away. If there is any delay in its removal the Saheb has but to pen one letter and straightway the scavengers and road chupprassies are fined; and they cannot find means and ways sufficient to convey away the filth. If a Bengalee's house is thoroughly cleared out and a little extra filth thrown out on the roadside, unless a present is made to the scavenger and chupprassie, there is no likelihood of its being easily removed. If, with reference thereto, a petition be submitted, an investigation is instituted and the householder is proved to be in fault and mulcted in sums of not less than Rs. 50. What does this betoken? The comfort of Englishmen and the discomfort of Bengalees. Let our impartial readers decide whether the English deserve much comfort and whether unfortunate Bengalees are undeserving of the same or not. Some ignorant Bengalees say, "We pay our house tax and police and lighting rates the same as Englishmen, why should we suffer so?" To such we reply—First, be what the English are, then seek the comfort Englishmen enjoy! In fact, the municipality, in observing this distinction, display strict impartiality. There is not a doubt that we are yet unfit to tread roads free from dust, or to appreciate the necessity of a healthy atmosphere.

FEARS OF FAMINE IN THE TWENTY-FOUR-PERGUNNAHS.—A gentleman who has ample means of knowing the state of the country described thus writes to the Indian Daily News:—"A famine in the 24-Pergunnahs! Absurd!—impossible! Well, perhaps so, but some gentlemen, with no mean opportunity of judging, are of opinion that in over 400 square miles of country immediately to the south of the capital of the Indian empire there will be great want of food among the day labourers within a fortnight, wide-spread distress within a month, and absolute famine long before the last day of 1868. This may be sudden and unlooked for bad news, but so is the destruction of a fine promising rice crop sudden and unlooked for, and as sure as the one sad calamity is a reality the other must be apprehended and ought to be prepared for. The Government officers will no doubt be busy enough for a few days in getting accurate knowledge of the state of the country that is flooded, and the public will do well to open its ears to hear that trouble is at hand. There is no need to open a subscription list just yet, but as soon as the public get to know what is already known to a few, subscriptions will issue from sympathy as effect from cause. Meanwhile the Orissa Famine Fund Committee and the Cyclone Relief Fund Committee had better make up their balance-sheets so as to be ready to answer questions that may be asked about any unexpended balances with them. There is no need for hurry, and as little need for delay. The fact is before us; fifteen days' rain has ruined the crop of rice in the southern part of the 24-Pergunnahs, where the peasantry have no other crop, and the opinion is offered that great scarcity of food in those parts will very soon be manifested to all. Let it not be said hereafter that there was no warning."

STATION TALK.

ALLAHABAD, June 16.—Our general is gone on privilege leave to the hills, to recruit himself for a prolonged stay among us. Conciliatory in manners to all under his command, everything in the military circle is progressing satisfactorily. Colonel Reid, of the Royal Artillery, commands the station during the absence of General Beatson. His Honour the Lieutenant Governor leaves this in a day or two for a four months' residence at Nynee Tal; a good number from the "upper ten" have also gone up hill to enjoy themselves in that romantic region. The Government at last has sanctioned quarters for the officers in the new military cantonments, so that by the time the 58th regiment arrives it is expected the barrack will be completed. The fault which I have frequently observed in respect to house building is erecting them on too small a scale to be in every respect suitable. I trust the Royal Engineers, who are engaged in the present estimates, will bear in mind that while they act prudently in not needlessly wasting the Government money, they should endeavour to have the barracks for the officers so constructed as to give satisfaction to the new comers. This is a remarkable station for subscriptions and charitable associations; one hardly knows when he has paid enough, and that it is time to draw in the reins of this mode of charity. Subscription lists seem to me to be always in circulation; more funds needed it may be for the erection of native schools, Santal and Zananah missions, and the like. Then come subscription lists for the Bible Society, Tract Society, and I don't know how many other societies, all of which expect some aid from the Christian public. So far as I am able to trace, the end and object of all these homogeneous societies is to educate the native from the pockets of the European sojourner. I must, however, not state these facts too freely, as I may be branded as a hardened heretic, who deserves little or no commiseration. To come to the point, it would be a relief to many of us if our good padrees made one general list for the several purposes for which pecuniary assistance is required monthly, and headed this charity list with the amount they have contributed. This arrangement, I believe, would be a good one, as it would supply an index from which the public would be able to judge for themselves the necessity of aiding in a special manner in the furtherance of a good cause. After several days of cloudy weather we have had some pleasant showers, which have made an agreeable change.

AGRA, June 18.—"One Sunday eve in leafy June"—alas! that the charm which surrounds a Sunday eve in June at home should be so ruthlessly destroyed in India by the thought of punkahs, a sweltering atmosphere, of prickly heat, and enervation both of the body and the mind; that parched plains and the hoarse shriek of the hungry crow, half dead from the heat of the preceding day, should destroy our ideal of emerald meadows, of laughing fields, and blooming hedges, whence the robin and the thrush in joyous notes bid the parting day farewell and invite the wanderer to devotion and praise of his Maker; that heat almost beyond endurance should lead man to sin and curse his hard lot—one Sunday eve in June, while taking my ride after a suffocating day, my olfactory nerves were stretched to the utmost of their tension by a smell arising from a drain which runs in front of the Baptist and the Roman Catholic chapels in cantonments. This, I believe, is used as a means of carrying off the dirty water from the plunge bath used by the men of the 41st Regiment. Owing to the unevenness of the bed of the drain the water collects here and there in small pools; these again receive and retain leaves, &c., from which emanates a foul smell, painfully suggestive of miasma and its concomitant evils, cholera and malarious fever. The rains being at the door, too much attention cannot be paid to a proper and effective drainage of the station, upon which the health of the troops and others depends so greatly. Cholera is said to lurk even behind compound walls, is it not just possible that it may find a more convenient hiding place in cesspools and sites set apart for excreta? I believe in every station in India, at least in this Presidency, there is entertained and paid for by the public a conservancy establishment, consisting of a sergeant and a number of sweepers with conservancy carts, which latter are supposed to call daily at every compound for the removal of all dirt and nastiness. I say the carts are supposed to call, for I am far from believing that they do call at every compound, except those owned by big-wigs, such as the Girmile Sahib, the Birgid major, &c. The jemadar jee, even though he holds only the comparatively low position of a head, or buck-sweep, as they very strikingly call it in England, yet never fails to impress lesser folks with a notion of the dignity of his situation, which he considers so much above their status that it would be derogatory to him to call upon them, and they are therefore obliged to have their servants lying in wait until his mightiness's equipage shall pass; and even then a certain amount of playful badinage, the galce of the Indian vocabulary, has to be gone through between the contending parties before the coachman can be induced to guide his horned steeds and odoriferous vehicle into the compound of the "low European." A representation to the barrack-master, who in many instances is imbued with notions of his dignity almost as high as those of his jemadar sweeper, may result in an assurance that he will "see to it," but in most instances is met by a rejoinder that the "jemadar says" the carts call regularly, &c., and in both cases has the same, that is no result, for if the barrack-master does not "see to it," or if the jemadar jee, just to show people who he is, does not obey his orders, one is not likely to trouble so consequential a personage again—and, on the other hand, who could gainsay that jemadar jee? Why, he'd have the whole brigade of sweepers from his own and three or four neighbouring stations collected to swear that black is blue and blue no colour at all.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

SIMLA, June 18.—The Bombay civilians are in luck. One recent amendment in the Civil Rules will prove of great importance and benefit to the juniors of that presidency. A collector in Bombay draws at present something like Rs. 2,333 a month, and, under the new rules, may go home for two years on the half of his average salary during the preceding three years. Under the existing regulations the assistant who would act for this collector would draw a deputation allowance of Rs. 400 a month, plus some small allowances amounting to Rs. 33. These sums, added to his substantive salary of Rs. 800, entitle an assistant acting as collector to draw a gross monthly allowance of Rs. 1,233. The committee proposed this should be increased to Rs. 1,466, including a deputation allowance of Rs. 666; and so stood matters when the rules went before the Viceroy in special Council on Monday last. There, however, a great change for the better was made. It was resolved that no acting incumbent should draw less, in addition to his substantive salary, than two-thirds of the difference between the amount of that salary and that of the incumbent on leave. This is liberal to the service throughout India, but will tell with greatest effect in the Bombay presidency, where there are no intermediate grades between the assistant on Rs. 800, and the collector on Rs. 2,333. An assistant acting for a collector will, therefore, under the new rules, draw as follows:—

Substantive pay	Rs. 800
Allowance for acting for collector at the rate of two-thirds of difference	1,022
Total per mensem	Rs. 1,822

or Rs. 589 more than an assistant now acting for a collector draw. It is more than likely that the Hon. Mr. Maine will not go home next year, as has been said, and as, I believe, was at one time the hon. gentleman's intention.

June 19.—Your correspondent has good news to send, greeting. There has been ordered the construction of a line of telegraph, in prolongation of that along the line of the G. I. P. Railway through Nursingpore and Nurbudda valleys to Jubulpore, where it will be "tailed on" to the line from Calcutta to the latter place. There will thus be no less than three separate and independent lines between Calcutta and Bombay, viz., that via Agra, that via Madras, and that via Jubulpore. The latter, I need hardly observe, will, by a long way, be the shortest and most direct. With the Jubulpore line, Saugor is to be connected by means of a branch line, and this will give Bombay an alternative line to Madras, far shorter than the round via Calcutta. These new lines are not "under contemplation;" they have been sanctioned.

June 22.—You will have published both sets of furlough rules ere this reaches you. The secret of their early promulgation, when, up to the 16th instant, everybody believed they would have once again to be referred home to the Secretary of State, is, I believe, as follows:—The Viceroy considered himself under an implied obligation not to sanction any amendments of the rules likely to create additional expenditure, without the previous assent of the home Government. There have been amendments, and very important ones, too, made since the rules have been returned from England; but as the Council, on the 16th, were of opinion that those amendments would not eventually involve extra expenditure on the Government, and as all were convinced that further delay would give rise to great dissatisfaction, the Civil Rules were sanctioned "subject to confirmation by the Secretary of State;" the military, in which little alteration had been made, finally disposed of "with the sanction" of that personage. There is no doubt that the Civil Rules will give satisfaction at home, and will be confirmed. The Financial Minister's emphatic opinion is that, though they are likely to be hailed by the service as a great boon, they will not have the effect of making that service more costly to the State. Nevertheless, neither set of rules would now be before the public but for very hard work on the part of the Council and secretaries. The Council which disposed of them was a special one, and sat all day; and for the two or three days intervening between it and last Saturday, it was, with the secretaries, a case of work from early morn to after night-fall. Hard work and no arrears, is, however, the order of the day in every department here, and it is a fact that the officials say they could not render the same amount of work in the same time in Calcutta or on the plains. A splendid feature in both sets of rules is, that on privilege leave an officer may go wherever he pleases. Any military man of the Bombay Presidency will, under this rule, be able to have a week or ten days in England should business of an urgent private nature demand his presence there, without any deduction from pay or service. He will be able to do this in the sixty days, and should he overstay he may contrive to get his privilege sixty days turned into three months' general leave on urgent private affairs.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

RESIGNATION OF THE MEDICAL SERVICE.—The Commander-in-Chief in India has accepted the resignation of his commission by Veterinary-surgeon J. Pile, 18th Brigade Royal Artillery, subject to approval by her Majesty.

SUICIDE AT PESHAWUR.—Sergeant Johnston, of the Sappers and Miners, on duty at Peshawur, shot himself through the head during a fit of mental aberration on the 16th inst. Death was instantaneous.—Delhi Gazette, June 23.

OFFICIAL.—The Delhi Gazette hears from Lucknow that Mr. Stuart Reid had gone to Allahabad to officiate for Mr. Thornhill. Major Chamier officiates as Commissioner of Lucknow, until Mr. Gore Ouseley returns from privilege leave, when Mr. Capper takes up the Commissionership.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—At extra charge having recently been entailed on the State by the irregular appointment of a medical officer to a Bengal Cavalry Regiment, in excess of the Establishment, the Commander-in-Chief prohibits such appointments in future, and enjoins officers concerned to exercise great care in issuing orders creative of expense not provided for by regulation.

LOSS OF EQUIPMENTS.—The Commander-in-Chief directs the attention of officers commanding regiments and detachments to G.O.C.C. dated Dec. 28, 1861, which decides that "commanding officers are responsible to Government for all losses of regimental property incurred by omission on their part of the necessary measures to secure its safety. This rule is equally applicable to quarters and to camp, and to Government property, whether regimental or otherwise, entrusted to an officer's charge."

LATEST NEWS FROM TURKESTAN.—Letters of June 10 state that the main body of the Russian forces is close to Samarcand and a detachment is located at a place eight *cos*s from Bokhara. But they have not yet meddled with the city. The Ameer, as I have told you, is reported to have gone on a hunting expedition. No news has since been received of his proceedings. I have heard the names of two Russian officers. The General's name is Oeskun-tatiyous, and his subordinate is a Colonel Stephanoff. These two were friendly with Feroze Shah when he was in Turkestan.

PENSIONS.—Conductor Robert Saunders, of the Army Commissariat Department, having been declared by a medical committee to be unfit for further active service, is transferred to the pension establishment, with permission to reside and draw his stipend in India. The undermentioned non-commissioned officer of her Majesty's service is permitted to reside and draw his pay in India as an out-pensioner of Chelsea Hospital, in accordance with the Royal Warrant of the 23rd July, 1864, pending a reference to the home authorities as to the amount of his pension:—Quartermaster Sergeant John Brown, 24th brigade, Royal Artillery.

COMMISSION OF THE PEACE, CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The undermentioned officers in the Central Provinces are invested with the powers described in Section 1 of Act XV. of 1862 to be exercised within the limits of their respective districts:—Colonel W. H. Crichton, C.B., Deputy Commissioner, Hoshungabad; Colonel J. B. Dennys, Deputy Commissioner, Scone; Colonel R. T. Snow, Deputy Commissioner, Baitool; Major H. F. Waddington, Deputy Commissioner, Nursingpore; Major A. B. Cumberlege, Deputy Commissioner, Sunbulpore; Captain W. B. Thomson, Deputy Commissioner, Belaspore; Captain E. R. H. Twyford while officiating as Deputy Commissioner of Raepore; Major J. C. Wood, Deputy Commissioner, Saugor.

GLOOMY NEWS FROM BHUDDRUCK.—A private letter from Bhuddruck gives a rather gloomy account of the effects of the late heavy rains. The writer says:—It is apprehended that the famine will prevail again in this place in consequence of incessant heavy rain and high wind since June 5. Country round Bhuddruck, as far as can be seen, under water, and the river and roads impassable. Dak and telegraphic communication with south stopped. Pilgrims in great distress for want of shelter. Rice is selling at seventeen seers per rupee, and salt at four annas per seer in the bazaar. No prospects of crops this year. A few cholera cases have come into the hospital, and it is feared the pilgrims will suffer from it most dreadfully.—Indian Daily News.

THE PUNJAB CHIEFS AND THE ORISSA FAMINE RELIEF FUND.—According to the Pioneer, the contributions from the Punjab chief to this fund were much less parsimonious than the Gazette would lead one to imagine. Thus six of the most powerful of the Cis-Sutlej chiefs alone contributed the sum of Rs. 20,800—Puttiala making the handsome donation of Rs. 10,000; Nabah, Rs. 3,000; Jheend, Rs. 2,500; and other chiefs in proportion. These contributions do not appear in the detailed statement published by the Punjab Government, though a donation of Rs. 200 from the Nawab of Dogana, of Rs. 50 from the Khan of Loharo, and of Rs. 50 from the Nawab of Loharo, are mentioned with the contributions of some other chiefs.

SHIPPING DISASTER.—The first officer of the Cunning, from the Mauritius, has arrived in town from that ship, and reports that she went on shore on the Balcherry Sand, near the mouth of the Muthah, on Thursday last. She subsequently floated, and is now lying in a dangerous position, embayed in three fathoms water, waiting for a steamer. We hear the Celerity has been sent to her assistance. From different sources it appears that the weather had been very bad in the vicinity of the sandheads for the past fifteen days, up to a few days since; and as there were no pilots on the station during the gales, it is to be feared that other casualties may have happened.—Englishman, June 23.

EXAMINATIONS.—The undermentioned officers have passed separately the requisite examination in the Vernacular in the North-Western Provinces. Junior Civil Servants.—Messrs. J. D. LaTouche, C. J. Lyall, F. W. Porter, T. F. Harkness, W. H. Hudson, H. F. Evans, and R. S. Aikman. Cantonment Magistrate.—Lieutenant H. B. Sanderson. Police Officers.—Lieutenant F. E. Wiggins, Messrs. S. A. Campbell, F. W. Court, and Foster. Mr. H. Walkis, Assistant Engineer, 2nd grade, Rawul Pindie Division, Punjab, has passed the Colloquial Examination in the Native Language prescribed in paras. 8, 9, of Government of India Circular No. 62, dated the 4th of July, 1867.

ORDERLY ROOM CLERKS.—It appears from a notification of the Bengal Government, dated May 28, that some small improvement in the pay of orderlies has arisen. "With reference to G.G.O. No. 1,035, dated Simla, November 1, 1867, it is notified that the higher rate of pay therein laid down for orderly room clerks of infantry corps is admissible as heretofore after three, instead of after seven, years' service, as erroneously entered." Appended to the above order is a table of the pay of non-commissioned officers and soldiers of Royal Horse Artillery and Royal Artillery serving in India, after deducting 5d. per diem for rations. The pay on re-engagement for a second term of service for a month of thirty-one days for a Sergeant major Royal Horse Artillery as now settled is Rs. 66-1-10; Quartermaster Sergeant Royal Horse Artillery, Rs. 58-8-4. The pay in these grades for the Royal Artillery is—Sergeant-major, Rs. 63-9-4; Quartermaster Sergeant, Rs. 55-15-10. The pay throughout the grades of non-commissioned officers is somewhat less in the Royal Artillery than in the Royal Horse Artillery.

POLICE VIGILANCE.—A native was, a few days ago, discovered by a chowkeydar of police lying in an empty pukka built house in Tolly-gunge. On being questioned, he replied that he was ill, that he had no friends or relatives in Calcutta, that he came from the famine districts, and had made up his mind to die in the house in question. A conveyance was looked for to remove him to hospital, but before one could be obtained he expired. It was then decided to get a dooly or a few domes to convey his corpse to the dead-house, but neither could be obtained. The chowkeydar was left to watch the body while the lance corporal of the local thannah went to inform his superiors of the circumstance. On his return he found that a portion of the corpse of the deceased had been eaten away by jackals, and learnt that the chowkeydar, instead of attending to the body, had gone to a neighbouring shop to enjoy the "hubble bubble." We have not been further informed regarding the result of this gross negligence. A native having been concerned in it, the probabilities are that no further steps have been taken in the matter. Why should it be so?—Indian Daily News.

AN AGED "JULIET."—A Lahore paper records a singular elopement case which occurred lately. A Hindoo bearer, aged sixteen, eloped with a Mussulman Ayah, who had reached the mature age of sixty-five, was a great grandmother, and the two retired to Hoosh-yarpore to spend their honeymoon in strict seclusion. So ardent was the young lover's attachment that he not only left house and home, but abjured the faith of his fore-fathers to become a follower of the Prophet. But the course of true love never did run smooth, and as usual stern parents interfered to destroy the new born happiness. When the happy pair returned to look after their few household goods, the young lover was seized and detained by his father and mother, who cruelly refused to allow him to return to his disconsolate partner. The feelings of the venerable Juliet, when she heard of her Romeo's fate, may be more easily conceived than described; and we are given to understand that when she met her mother-in-law, she gave vent to her indignation and despair in a manner that is more generally employed by the sterner sex. Our readers will be charmed to hear that the pains of separation have not lessened the ardour of their attachment, and that the youth intends to flee to the arms of his ladylove as soon as he can escape from paternal bondage.

NEWS FROM CABUL.—The Englishman has news from Cabul to 7th June. The report is confirmed of the defeat of Sirdar Abdool Rahman Khan before Maimanah. He is said to have fled towards Balkh. Consequent on this event the army of Ameer Shere Ali has made a general forward movement from Candahar and Khelat, and has encamped at Mokur. They have also made preparations for pushing on hostilities against the forces of Ameer Azim Khan. It is reported from Bonair that Shahzadah Feroze Shah was recently so very sick that a report was current in Swat that he had died. Persons recently arrived say he was attacked by a violent fever, from which, however, he is fast recovering. On his being pronounced out of danger, Moulvie Hyder distributed large sums in charity, and to the Moulvies. There are no longer any armed forces of the Bokhariots in the field. As far as I can gather, it seems to me that that report is true which affirms that the Russians have not yet entered Bokhara. They certainly have not looted it. This is in consequence of their friendship for the Ameer. There is no certain news of the Ameer's whereabouts. The disturbed state of the intervening country prevents the transmission of news. The roads to Cabul are full of disorder; no fresh merchandise is sent forward, and that which has been already despatched, remains at its last halting place, the Kajilas not daring to go forward until some settlement is arrived at between the contending parties.

ECCLESIASTICAL.—Lieutenant-colonel Arthur Loftus Steele, Madras Staff Corps, and Captain Joseph Beatty, R.E., to be lay trustees of the chaplaincy of Vizagapatam, vice Mr. Master and Captain Isacke.

DEATH OF LIEUT. E. SERLE.—We regret to announce the death of Lieut. Edward Gambier Serle, of H.M.'s 46th Regiment, which melancholy event occurred at this station on Saturday last. The deceased was interred with full military honours yesterday morning. —Deccan Herald, June 22.

ARRIVALS FROM ABYSSINIA.—The P. and O. steamer Bengal arrived in the Madras roads from Zoulla on the evening of the 20th June, bringing with her the following passengers for Madras :—Major Heysham, Capt. Chrystie, Capt. Wood, Rev. Mr. Goodhart, Lieut. Tabuteau, 1 commissariat clerk, and 150 coolies.

EMBARKATION OF TROOPS.—On the 17th June four companies of H.M.'s 45th Regiment embarked at Bombay for Madras on the steamer T. A. Gibbs. On their arrival here they will be quartered in the barracks at the Fort. The officer commanding in the centre division has made arrangements for landing them.

MILITARY MOVEMENT.—The Head-quarters and Right Wing of H.M.'s 3rd battalion 60th Rifles, garrisoning Fort St. George, have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to proceed to Bangalore, and to be located at that station as a temporary measure, till the marching season opens, when they will be sent by rail and marches via Tadpatry to Bellary.

ARRIVALS FROM ENGLAND.—The undermentioned officers have returned to their duty, by permission of the Home Government, without prejudice to their rank :—Captain F. G. Rideout, Cadre 43rd Regiment Native Infantry, arrived at Madras on the 18th of June, 1868; Lieutenant O. M. Bradshaw, Staff Corps, arrived at Bombay on the 12th of June, 1868.

EXCHANGE OF REGIMENTS.—H.R.H. Field-marshal Commanding-in-Chief has approved of the undermentioned officers being permitted to exchange to the battalions specified against their names, provided the public be put to no expense by the arrangement, and that both officers join their respective battalions without delay :—Lieutenant Perkins, 21st Foot, to the 1st battalion; Lieutenant Robinson, 21st Foot, to the 2nd battalion.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers have obtained leave of absence :—Lieut.-colonel Place, Staff Corps, doing duty under the orders of the officer commanding centre division, from July 1 to December 1, 1868—Neilgherries and Mysore division, private affairs; Captain Aitchison, Staff Corps, 1st wing subaltern 31st N.I., from May 2, or date of departure, to August 8, 1868—Waltair, medical certificate; Staff Surgeon Farmer, Medical Service, from June 8, or date of departure, for four months—Neilgherries, medical certificate.

POSTINGS.—H.R.H. the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has approved of the undermentioned officers being posted on their recent promotion to the battalions of their regiment specified opposite their names :—Major Brooke, to the 3rd Battalion, 60th Regiment; Captain Turle, to the 2nd Battalion, 60th Regiment; Lieut. Forster, to the 2nd Battalion, 60th Regiment. Captain Wood, Royal Engineers, Executive Engineer of the 3rd Grade, is posted to Bangalore; Assistant-Surgeon Fergusson, M.D., to 24th N.I.

BLOWING UP OF THE "SAINT BERNARD."—The third attempt made by Mr. F. Doderet, assisted by Sub-assistant Surgeon R. Harvey, assistant to the professor of chemistry in the Medical College, to blow up the hull of this vessel, was a success. Two canisters of gunpowder were this time placed in the hull, and two copper wires coated with lead and gutta percha were connected with the electric battery. The battery was a powerful one. The operation took immediate effect, and the result was the deck, port quarter, and the port bow of the vessel were blown up.

COURT-MARTIAL ON CAPT. CAMERON.—From a reliable source we learn that Capt. Cameron, Staff Corps, and attached to the 12th Madras N.I., was tried on four separate counts. The prosecution lasted through Monday and Tuesday, June 15 and 16, and the prisoner applied for two clear days to prepare his defence. He addressed the court on the 19th, and the finding and sentence were arrived at on the same day. We have reason to believe that Capt. Cameron has been acquitted on two charges, but there is every probability that the court will be reassembled. —Deccan Herald.

FURLOUGHS.—The following officers have obtained furloughs (in une), and are permitted to proceed to Europe :—Captain Mottet, of the Staff Corps, Assistant Superintendent 2nd Class, Nuggur Division, Mysore Commission, on medical certificate for twenty months, under the furlough regulations of 1854, and to embark from Madras; Lieut. Robinson, of the Staff Corps, Quartermaster 27th Regiment N.I., on medical certificate for twenty months, under the furlough regulations of 1854, and to embark from Madras; Captain Malet, 18th Hussars, to England, overland, from date of embarkation, to appear before a medical board.

LEGAL.—Under the provisions of Section 196 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, Mr. John Sturrock, Acting Head Assistant, and Mr. Francis Edward Hall, Assistant to Collector and Magistrate of South Canara, are authorised to take down evidence in English.

POLICE POWERS.—Under the provisions of Section 81 of Act XIII. of 1864 the Governor in Council is pleased to authorise the undermentioned Inspectors of the Madras Police to institute all prosecutions under the said Act for offences committed beyond the limits of the town of Madras :—Northern Range, Ganjam District, 2nd Class Inspector Smith; Vizagapatam District, 4th Class Inspector Simpson; Godavery District, 1st Class Inspector Murray, 3rd Class Inspector Doyle; Krishna District, 2nd Class Inspector Forster, 5th Class Inspector Jamieson; Central Range, North Arcot District, 1st Class Inspector Urquhart, 4th Class Inspector Leigh; Kurnool District, 2nd Class Inspector Williamson, 3rd Class Inspector Judge, 4th Class Inspector Thorp, 6th Class Inspector Joseph; Southern Range, South Arcot District, 1st Class Inspector O'Connell, 2nd Class Inspector Thomas; 3rd Class Inspector Walters, 4th Class Inspector Smith; 4th Class Inspector Stahlman, 6th Class Inspector Collins; Madura District, 4th Class Inspector Godfrey; Tinnevely District, 1st Class Inspector Drake.

THE P. AND O. STEAMER "SURAT."—This magnificent vessel has been very unfortunate during the short time she has been on the Madras line. On her first return voyage she got upon a reef near Aden, and for several months was under repair at an enormous outlay. On her last voyage, three days after leaving Galle, serious damage was done to her by one of the fans of the screw breaking and driving in an iron plate at the stern of the ship, which caused a zigzag gap of about three feet long and six inches wide. This was about eight A.M. on the 5th June in a very rough sea, the ship having encountered bad weather ever since she had left Galle. At first the water came in so rapidly that serious apprehensions were entertained for the safety of the vessel, and the captain ordered all the boats and necessary stores to be got ready for the transhipment of the passengers. The praiseworthy and strenuous efforts of the captain, officers, and crew, in which they were zealously assisted by the gentlemen passengers, were at last successful in stopping the leak, and the Surat got back under sail to Galle on June 7, where she landed all her passengers, some of whom went on by the French boat and others by the Mooltan, the Surat herself being taken back under sail to Calcutta, where she will go into dock. —Madras Athenæum.

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, June 17.—The transports India and Arabia arrived from Abyssinia last evening with General Malcolm, C.B., and the 1st Belooch Battalion, from field service. The General landed this morning under a salute of eleven guns. He resumes command of the division from this date, a division order to this effect having been issued by Major-general Skinner, who purposes leaving for Bombay by next Saturday's mail. The Beloochees are not to be kept at Kurrachee. Instructions have been received from army head-quarters to send them direct to Hyderabad, owing to their families being at that station. They will, therefore, be disembarked this evening and forwarded by rail to Kotree, whence they will proceed to Hyderabad, where Colonel Rose, the commandant, has been requested to receive the brave fellows with every demonstration of welcome. The officers with the corps are :—Major C. F. Hogg (who is now in command, owing to Major Beville having gone home from Zoulla on leave), Capt. J. H. Castell, Lieut. P. A. Browne, Lieut. M. H. Nicholson, and Assistant-surgeons Sexton and Banks. The weather has been very stormy since the 14th inst., and I hear there will be several mishaps down the coast. Intelligence of the stranding of one unfortunate vessel has already been received. The James Child, Capt. Sheen, commander, which was chartered by Messrs. Shoojwoodin Tyabji and Co. to carry merchandise to Marseilles, is high and dry about twenty or twenty-five miles below Wagoda, not very far from Khetty. Commander Giles, the master attendant, and the quarter-master-general of this division, Capt. Campbell, went to her assistance in the steam-tug Dagmar, but were obliged to return without effecting their object, owing to the strong gales from the south-west, and huge heavy breakers near the western mouth of the Indus. Fortunately our collector, Major Lambert, sent a lot of fellows by land to the scene of disaster, and through their exertions a few of the crew and the chief officer of the vessel managed to come into Kurrachee last Monday. On the evening of the 20th inst. a sad disaster occurred not far from Munora. The ship Alicia, Master Sawyer, laden with coals, &c, struck on the bar as she was entering the port, and in a short time became a total wreck. There is scarcely a vestige of her now visible. Providentially all hands have been saved through the prompt assistance afforded by our Master Attendant, Commander Giles, who, accompanied by a few gentlemen, went to their rescue in the steam-tug Dagmar. The conduct of Commander Giles on the perilous occasion cannot be too highly commended. Had it not been for his coolness and decisive action, perhaps not a man belonging to the vessel would now be alive. Conspicuous among those who aided the gallant sailor were Major Tyrwhitt, Political Superintendent of the Thur and Parkur districts, and Captain R. Campbell, our Assistant Quartermaster-general, both of whom exerted themselves in a manner that deserve the highest praise. I find that the James Childs, 755 tons burden, Master Peter Sheen, which lately went ashore off one of the mouths of the River Indus, is not insured. I learn also, that no harm is likely to befall her in her present position. There is, however, no possibility of getting her afloat before the termination of the monsoon.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE MUNICIPAL COMMISSION, BOMBAY.—Mr. A. T. Crawford, Civil Service, and Surgeon T. G. Hewlett are reappointed respectively Municipal Commissioner for the City of Bombay, and Consulting Officer of Health, for the term of three years, from the date of the expiry of their present tenure of these offices.

FURLONGS.—The following furloughs were granted in June last :—Lieutenant-colonel J. B. Dunsterville, Staff Corps, Commissary-general, is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months, on medical certificate; Lieutenant G. F. Blowers, Staff Corps, Adjutant Malwa Corps, is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months, on medical certificate.

DEATH OF ENSIGN D. DRURY.—We regret to announce the death on June 15th of Ensign Edward G. Drury, of H. M.'s 1st Royal Regiment. The deceased was trying a pony in the street of Nassick a few days previously, when he was thrown heavily into a gutter faced with masonry, and received severe internal injuries that terminated in his death. He was buried with military honours at the Nassick Cemetery, the funeral being attended by all the European residents of the station.—Times of India.

A PROBABLE VISITOR TO INDIA.—It seems that Bombay is likely to have a visit during the next cold season from Mr. H. C. E. Childers, late Under Secretary of the Treasury, and at present member for Pontefract. Mr. Childers is the new chairman of the G. I. P. Railway Company, and tells the shareholders that on accepting office "he had determined to go out to India as early as political matters would permit, with a view to make himself thoroughly acquainted with the Railway and works of the company." Mr. Childers is one of the rising men of the Liberal party, says the Times of India, and we trust his visit to India may be sufficiently protracted to allow of his doing something more than merely "making himself acquainted with the affairs of the railway company."

THE EXTREME HEAT IN SIND.—The following official report on the subject, by the Inspector-general Medical Department, Sind Division, was yesterday placed at the disposal of the press :—"I beg to report the fatal result of two days of extraordinary hot weather. The heat was due to the prevalence of land winds, arising from exceptional causes—atmospheric disturbances at some distance from this place. Friday (June 5) was excessively close and sultry; the wind N.W., lightning in the north; Saturday was oppressive in the morning, the wind north, shifting to a light sea breeze at noon. The wind went round to N.W. and north in the evening, and continued so all night; on Sunday, the 7th, the wind, from north, shifted to east, and a strong fiery blast continued till seven P.M., when it lulled; on Monday the wind blew S.E. to south. The effect of this unexpected heat was that many people were struck down with heat apoplexy, and many weakly people died from exhaustion, the deaths among the European population from the 6th to the 9th being twenty-six."—Times of India, June 30.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The undermentioned officers have obtained leave of absence :—Lieutenant-colonel C. Oldershaw, E Battery 14th Brigade R.A., from June 15 to July 14, to remain at Mount Abou, on medical certificate; Lieutenant F. Roberts, 5th Brigade R.A., from June 15 to July 14th, to proceed to Ghizree Sanitarium, on medical certificate.

PRESENTATION TO A SHIP'S CAPTAIN.—A gratifying presentation was made to Captain Ballantine, of the B. I. S. N. Co.'s steamer Arabia, on the 24th June, by the Superintendent of the Bombay Marine. Some months since Captain Ballantine rescued nineteen officers and seamen belonging to the United States frigate Sacramento, who were floating on a raft in the Bay of Bengal after the loss of their ship. The services thus rendered by Captain Ballantine became known to the President of the United States, who, to mark his sense of their importance, forwarded as a present from himself to Captain Ballantine a handsome chronometer. The present was sent from America to the Board of Trade, and by that Department was transmitted to the Bombay Government. In making the presentation Captain Robinson made some appropriate and congratulatory remarks, which Captain Ballantine suitably acknowledged.—Times of India.

THE COMMISSARIAT DEPARTMENT.—With the sanction of Government, the following promotions are made in the Commissariat Department :—Sub-Conductor Archibald Bartleman to be Acting Conductor, and Sergeant Robert Elder to be Acting Sub-Conductor, from the 14th of September, 1867, vice Wild, proceeded on Field Service to Abyssinia; Sergeant James Walsh to be Acting Sub-Conductor, from the 7th of October, 1867, vice Crowe proceeded on Field Service to Abyssinia; Sub-Conductor John Crumley to be Acting Conductor, and Sergeant John Glancy to be Acting Sub-Conductor, from the 18th of October, 1867, vice Henderson proceeded on Field Service to Abyssinia; Sub-Conductor George Louis D'Emden to be Acting Conductor, and Sergeant William Rust to be Acting Sub-Conductor, from the 18th of October, 1867, vice Lee, proceeded on Field Service to Abyssinia; Sub-Conductor Patrick Leonard to be Acting Conductor, and Sergeant Nathan Walters to be Acting Sub-Conductor, from the 23rd of January, 1868, vice Pearson proceeded on Field Service to Abyssinia; Sergeant Michael Hogan to be Acting Sub-Conductor, from the 15th of February, 1868, vice Maggs, proceeded to Europe on medical certificate. This cancels G. O. C. No. 259, 24th of March last.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

THE MILITARY FUNDS.—PASSAGE ALLOWANCE.

No. 607.—The following financial despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 179, dated April 23, 1868, is published for general information:—

Financial (Military Fund) No. 179.

India-office, London, April 23, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-general of India in Council.

Sir,—I have considered in Council the position of those officers now of the British, and lately of the Indian service, who being now provided with passage allowance from Government, under G.O.G. of July 21, 1863, are debarred by the regulations of the Military Funds from drawing an allowance for that purpose, although the sum they could have claimed would, in most instances, have been larger than that allowed by Government.

2. Certain officers of the R.A. having represented that they are entitled, under the Parliamentary guarantee, to all the existing privileges of the funds, notwithstanding any order that may be made to the contrary, I have decided that all those officers who, under the rules of the several military funds, would have been entitled to a larger sum than £87, shall receive the amount allowed to them by Government and draw the difference between that and the larger sum from the military funds, as well as a sum sufficient to pay the deductions made from them on account of messing during their voyage.

3. In cases, however, when such officers, instead of receiving a money allowance, are provided with a free passage, they will be considered, in accordance with the rules of the military fund, not entitled to any allowance whatever, beyond repayment of the usual deduction made on account of messing, under the terms of the Royal Passage Warrant of 1865.

4. I request that this decision may be notified to the army in G.O.—I have, &c., (Signed) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

THE PURCHASE SYSTEM.—INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

Simla, June 17.—No. 695.—The following paragraph of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 166, dated May 21, 1868, is published for general information:—

Para. 2. I have at the same time to inform you that, having considered in Council your letters No. 303 of October 31, 1866, and No. 91 of April 8, 1867, I have resolved, with the concurrence of the Secretary of State for War, and of H.B.H. the Field Marshal C. in C., who has issued the necessary notification to the army, that officers of line regiments in which the purchase system is in force, whose permanent appointment to the Indian staff corps shall appear in the general orders of one of the local Governments in India, on a date subsequent to March 18, 1868, and who on the date of such permanent appointment (being the date of appointment as probationer for the staff corps) shall not have exceeded four years' service on full pay from the date of first commission, shall receive, on their names appearing in the London Gazette as finally transferred to the staff corps, the exact sum such officers would have received under War Office regulations, had they retired from the service by the sale of their commissions at the time of joining the staff corps as probationers.

No. 606. H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to announce that the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India has sanctioned the consolidated salary of the military secretary to H.E. the C. in C. in India being fixed at Rs. 1,500 per mensem, with effect from Jan. 1.

C. in C., with the concurrence of the Sec. of State for India in Council, has been pleased to direct that in future exchanges between captains on the Indian lists, and officers of the same rank on the imperial list, can only be permitted when the latter officers have served for some considerable time in India."

THE VICTORIA CROSS.—The Gazette of Tuesday night contains a notice issued from the War-office to the effect that the Queen has been pleased to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross upon two of the men of the 33rd Regiment for gallant conduct in Abyssinia. These two men are Drummer Michael Magner and Private James Bergin, and the decoration is conferred upon them for their conspicuous gallantry in the assault of Magdala on the 13th of April last. Lieutenant-general Lord Napier reports that, whilst the head of the column of attack was checked by the obstacles at the gate, a small stream of officers and men of the 33rd Regiment, and an officer of engineers, breaking away from the main approach to Magdala and climbing up a cliff, reached the defences, and forced their way over the wall, and through the strong and thorny fence, thus turning the defenders of the gateway. The first two men to enter, and the first in Magdala, were Drummer Magner and Private Bergin, of the 33rd Regiment.

Home.

NEW BISHOP OF BOMBAY.—The Very Rev. H. A. Douglas, M.A., Dean of Capetown, has accepted the vacant see of Bombay, Dr. Harding having resigned.

SUICIDE OF LIEUT. H. A. G. TODD.—At Dover, on the 24th inst., Mr. Sydenham Payn held an inquest at the officers' quarters, Citadel Barracks, on the body of Henry Arthur Gray Todd, lieutenant and adjutant of the 1st battalion 4th Regiment, quartered in this garrison, who had put an end to his existence by shooting himself with a revolver on the same morning. It appears that the deceased was invalided from India towards the end of 1867, suffering from climatic debility and chronic rheumatism. His mind was very much depressed about his state of health just before he embarked. He had been considerably better since rejoining the regiment, but his health was not reinstated to the degree that was anticipated. Colonel Cameron read a copy of a letter he had addressed to the War Office in respect to the deceased's claims to promotion. He bore testimony to the high character of the deceased officer. The jury returned a verdict of temporary insanity.

COMMERCIAL BANK CORPORATION OF INDIA AND THE EAST.—In the Rolls Court on Friday last an application was made by creditors of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East that the official liquidator might be directed to pay a further dividend out of the funds—said to be about £300,000—in his hands. The application was opposed by some of the contributories, who alleged that many of the creditors claiming a dividend were not entitled to rank as creditors, a recent decision in the case of Captain Felix Jones having established that depositors of what was termed the China Loan might, under certain circumstances, have to claim against the predecessor of the Corporation—namely, the Commercial Bank of India. Lord Romilly, however, directed payment of a dividend of 2s. 6d. in the pound, or of such further amount as the liquidator should think proper, security to be taken from those creditors whose claims are objected to, for repayment of the money, if the appeal now pending should decide that they are not to be included in the list of creditors.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The chartered troopship St. Lawrence, which has been taken up for the conveyance of reinforcements of cavalry and Royal Artillery for India, embarked at Gravesend on Saturday detachments for Calcutta:—25 non-commissioned officers and men of the 4th (Queen's Own) Hussars, and 35 non-commissioned officers and men of the 11th (Prince Albert's Own) Hussars, from Canterbury; and 140 non-commissioned officers and gunners of the Royal Artillery, from Woolwich and Sheerness; together with 49 soldiers' wives and 46 children. The following officers embarked with the troops:—Captain J. M. K. Macintyre and Lieutenant H. B. Hellard, Royal Artillery; Captain H. T. Butler, 4th Hussars; Cornet L. G. Mundy, 11th Hussars; and Assistant-Surgeon C. H. Y. Godwin, in medical charge. The embarkation of the troops was effected under the superintendence of Brigade-Major W. W. Lynch and the officers of the staff at Chatham garrison. The Norcastle, Indiaman, French master, sailed from Portsmouth on Saturday for Calcutta, with detachments of troops on board, under the command of Major Maclean, of the Rifle Brigade.

WILL OF THE LATE RAJAH BROOKE.—Sir James Brooke, K.C.B., Rajah of Sarawak, by his will, dated April 15, 1867, devised his sovereignty of Sarawak to his nephew, Charles Johnson Brooke, and the heirs male of his body; and, in default of issue, the Rajah devised his said sovereignty unto her Majesty the Queen of England, her heirs and assigns for ever; and the Rajah appointed Miss Angela Georgina Burdett Coutts, Thomas Fairbairn, Esq., and John Abel Smith, Esq., M.P., trustees of his will, to see the purposes aforesaid carried into effect. The Rajah bequeathed to his nephew, Charles Johnson Brooke, all his real and personal estate in Borneo and England, and constituted him his residuary legatee; and the Rajah directed his nephew, Charles Johnson Brooke, to furnish to his executors from his property in England, and out of the debt which was due to him from the State of Sarawak, sufficient funds to raise legacies to Arthur Crookshank, Esq., and Mr. George Brooke, and liberal annuities in favour of his servants; and the Rajah appointed as his executors Spenser St. John, Esq., her Britannic Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Hayti; Alexander Knox, Esq., of 91, Victoria-street, Westminster; and John Gillan Booty and Richard Butt, of Gray's-inn, solicitors.

OUDE AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—The report of the directors of the Oude and Rohilkund Railway Company (Limited) has been issued. It states that the amount of additional capital, to the extent of £1,000,000, was offered in the first instance to the proprietors rateably, and the balance not taken by them, with the exception of a small number of shares which the board thought proper to reserve, was readily placed. The Government committee have recommended the extension of the open line from Cawnpore to Lucknow, as far as Byram Ghat, on the River Gorga; and the construction of a line of railway from Dilserai on this extension to the city of Benares, together with a branch line to Fyzabad on the Gorga. On the recommendation of the consulting engineer, the Supreme Government has permitted the commencement of such works on the Byram Ghat extension as may be approved of by the local administration. The revenue for the half-year shows gross earnings £9,959. 8s. 11d., and gross expenditure £6,586. 14s. 1d., leaving a balance to profit of £3,372. 14s. 10d. The statement of capital account exhibits a total receipt of £760,815. 10s. 5d., and a total expenditure of £388,286. 2s. 7d., leaving a balance in hand on the 31st December, 1867, of £372,529. 7s. 10d. At the ensuing meeting the directors will submit a resolution for the purpose of creating and issuing, from time to time, amounts of debenture stock as may be required.

CONSUL CAMERON.—On Saturday Consul Cameron arrived at Liverpool from Alexandria, and soon after left the northern seaport for London. The Liverpool Mercury says:—"Consul Cameron, who is apparently about forty years of age, and wears the general aspect of a soldier who has seen much service in the tropics, is at present suffering severely from the cruel treatment to which he has been subjected. Tall in figure and strong in frame, Consul Cameron was fitted to endure almost any amount of privation and hardship; but no human being could undergo the trials which he experienced during the last six months of his imprisonment without serious physical consequences. Chained hands and feet together, he was deprived of all exercise, and for nearly six months was in a recumbent position from which he could not escape. This confinement, together with other indignities, scarcity of food and clothing, and the uncertainty as to the termination of his fate, told upon his iron frame and reduced him to a state of weakness. The wonder is that any of the prisoners, with the knowledge which they possessed of the blood-thirsty character of King Theodore, and the almost inaccessible nature of their place of confinement, did not die of sheer despair. It was not, however, until Consul Cameron was released that the full extent of his injuries was known. Immediately his chains were knocked off and the victorious army commenced its return home, he was compelled to ride on the back of a mule in stages of about eighteen or twenty miles. The effect of this somewhat violent exercise upon his frame was too great, for a few days after leaving Magdala for the sea-board his lower limbs became paralysed, and it became necessary to convey him to Annesley Bay in a litter. The voyage from Alexandria has had a beneficial influence, and Consul Cameron is now enabled, by the aid of a stick, to walk short distances, and hopes, with the medical treatment which he shall now be able to procure, soon to enjoy a perfect restoration to health. The only attendant on Consul Cameron is a shrewd, intelligent Abyssinian youth, about seventeen years of age, who has left his native home to follow the fortunes of his master in the capacity of manservant or valet."

SERVICES OF LORD NAPIER.—Sir R. Napier, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., is the son of Major C. F. Napier, of the Royal Artillery, by Catherine, daughter of Codrington Carrington, Esq., of Blackmans, Barbados. Born 1810. He was educated at Addiscombe Military College, and entered the Bengal Engineers 1827, became captain 1841, served throughout the Sutlej campaign of 1845-6, was Chief Engineer at Moodkee (horse killed) and at Ferozeshah (where he was severely wounded (horse killed)); Brigade-major of Engineers at Sobraon, and in the subsequent advance on Lahore, for which he received a medal and clasps, with the rank of brevet-major, 1846; was appointed Chief Engineer to conduct the siege of the hill-fort of Kangra the same year, and received the special thanks of Government for his services in the transport of the siege-train to that place. Was Chief Engineer during part of the siege of Mooltan 1849, and was severely wounded. Commanding Engineer of the right wing of the army of the Punjab at the battle of Gojerat, and in Sir Walter Gilbert's pursuit of the Sikh army, for which service he received a medal and clasps, with the rank of brevet-lieutenant-colonel. As Chief Civil Engineer of the Punjab organised and initiated an extensive series of public works, which were honourably acknowledged by the late Lord Dalhousie. Commanded a column which defeated the Hussanzie tribe on the Black mountain in Hazara 1852; was present with the expedition against the Boree Afreedees 1852-3, and received the special thanks of Government. Chief of Sir James Outram's Staff 1857, and was present in the several actions leading to the first relief of Lucknow, Mungulwer, Alumbagh, and Charbagh; commanded the troops in the rescue of the siege-train which had been surrounded and cut off in the suburbs, the sortie for the capture of Phillip's Garden Battery, and other separate operations; was present as chief of the staff in the later operations at the Alumbagh, and Brigadier and Chief Engineer at the siege of Lucknow 1858, in which year he was made a C.B.; commanded a brigade at the capture of Gwalior; defeated Tantia Topce at Joura Alipoor, and captured twenty-five guns; when in command of the Gwalior division, bombarded and reduced the fort of Powrie; after five days close pursuit, surprised and defeated, with a squadron of the 14th Dragoons, Ferozeshah's force at Ranode. Commanded the 2nd Division of the China Expeditionary Army in the action of Sinho; was present at Tanko. With his division and the whole of the Artillery, in conjunction with the French Division of General Collineau, directed the operations ending in the storm of the North Taku Fort, advance on and occupation of Peking; twice received the thanks of Parliament; was a member of the Supreme Council of India 1864-5, and was made a K.C.B. in the latter year, a G.C.S.I. 1867, a G.C.B. 1868. Was appointed to the chief command of the Abyssinian Expedition 1867, which he has so recently conducted to a successful issue. Created 1858.—Debrett's Illustrated Baronetage and Knightage.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, July 24.—SALE OF GIRLS IN INDIA.—In answer to Mr. BAZLEY, Sir S. NORTHCOTE said he could not find that any information has been received to the effect that sales of girls take place at the bazaar of Manickgunge, in the Burdwan Zillah. (Hear, hear.)

HOUSE OF LORDS, July 27.—THE ABYSSINIAN ENVOYS.—Lord HOUGHTON asked whether it is the intention of her Majesty's Government to recognise in any especial manner the services and sufferings of her Majesty's envoys to the late King of Abyssinia? The noble lord called especial attention to the services and sufferings of Mr. Rassam and the members of his mission.—The Earl of MALMESBURY said that the Government had not yet received any official report which would enable them to decide what steps it would be right and expedient to take in this matter. Mr. Rassam is now engaged in drawing up such a report, but unfortunately his papers have been sent to Aden, and from this cause a delay has taken place. The House might, however, be assured that after what they had already done for the captives the Government would not now desert them.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, July 27.—THE PUNJAB IRREGULAR FORCES.—In reply to Mr. KINNAIRD, Sir S. NORTHCOTE said that no decision had as yet been come to with regard to granting a frontier service medal to the Punjab irregular forces and regular troops, European and native, engaged against the Hill tribes. The matter rested rather with the Indian Government than the Secretary of State, but if such a proposal came before him he would give it a favourable consideration.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.—Sir STAFFORD NORTHCOTE went over the budget estimates of the Indian Finance Minister for the past and the present year. He saw no reason to take a gloomy view of the state of affairs in India, nor to entertain any apprehensions as to the future. The general result of the figures which he quoted was, that while, including expenditure of all sorts, there was last year a deficit of £1,106,000, the deficiency would this year, it is estimated, be reduced to £1,026,000. In both these instances, however, the apparent deficiency was occasioned by charging against the income of the year the "extraordinary" expenditure upon public works, which might more properly be charged to capital. The deduction of this expenditure would in each case turn the apparent deficit into a surplus. At the opening of his remarks Sir Stafford warmly acknowledged the services which had been rendered to India by Mr. Massey, and his regret that that right honourable gentleman (who occupied a seat under the gallery) had been compelled to return to this country.—Mr. LAING took even a more favourable view of the position of our Indian Empire than that expressed by the Secretary of State. He maintained that since the year 1862 an equilibrium had been established in the finances of India, and asked for a more liberal expenditure upon public works, especially the carrying forward of a railway to Peshawur, and the completion of great works of irrigation. The discussion that followed was not prolonged to any great length, but it ranged over a considerable variety of topics, and was closed by a brief reply from Sir S. NORTHCOTE, who gave some important information as to the intentions of the Indian Government with reference to the construction of railways and works of irrigation. He could not accept the principle of borrowing £20,000,000 merely because money was cheap, but the money for public works would be borrowed according to the need for it.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT AMENDMENT BILL AND GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA BILL.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE moved that the order for going into committee on this Bill be discharged on account of the advanced period of the Session. He thought good had been done by the discussions on the Bill. After some further observations from the right hon. baronet, he regretted the necessity for the discharge.—Mr. AYRTON and Colonel SYKES made some observations, and the order was discharged. The order for going into committee on the Governor-general of India Bill was also discharged.

A STEAMER ON SHORE.—We regret to hear by telegram that the steamer Shahazada, from Bombay to this port, is on shore at Cox's Bazaar, near Chittagong. How she could have been driven so much out of her course we are at present unable to say; probably being short of coals the late gales have driven her to the leeward, as she was bearing up for Chittagong or Akyab. We are happy to learn she has not a very valuable cargo on board. Her cargo is, we believe, almost entirely composed of salt.—Englishman.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

SOUND LUNGS.—Unless the blood be purified from the foul matters which enter it in its passage through the chest, the strongest lungs will often be inconvenienced, and the delicate chest will assume positive disease. Holloway's remedies exert the most wholesome power in cleansing the air tubes, dislodging accumulated mucus, and cleansing the blood. When there is any congestion of the chest, stitch, or heavy pectoral pain, some of this Ointment well rubbed over the seat of suffering will speedily remove the evil, and certainly prevent worse consequences. In common colds, shortness of breath, wheezing, and chronic or spasmodic coughs, Holloway's Ointment and Pills will give present comfort, and avert future danger.

FRAUD.

CROSSE and BLACKWELL'S, SHAIK BACHOO was sentenced by the Suburban Magistrate at Sealdah to TWO YEARS' RIGOROUS IMPRISONMENT.

Purchasers are recommended to examine all goods carefully before taking delivery of them. The GENUINE Manufactures of Messrs. Crosse and Blackwell may be had from EVERY RESPECTABLE DEALER in India.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

“There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering.”—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Wren's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, “Dental Mechanics and Surgery,” which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, July 7; Agra, July 4; Calcutta July 2; Madras, July 1.

The last of the transports from Abyssinia reached Bombay on the 1st July, with a detachment of the 25th N.I. on board, who embarked from Zoolla on the 18th June. That morning, when the rear-guard was going its rounds on shore in quest of stray followers, Zoolla "presented quite a desolate appearance," deserted by every one save a few Egyptian soldiers, camp-followers, and English sailors. About twenty transports cleared out that day, including the Queen of the South, which carried the head-quarters of the 25th N.I. The weather at Zoolla was intensely hot, and remained so until after passing Socotra, when a strong south-west wind blew the vessels on towards Bombay. The returned soldiers are reported to be looking well, but most of the horses had lost much flesh in the wars and the homeward voyage. Colonel Merewether had spent some days in Poonah, but was about to leave at once for Kurrachee, to take up his post as Commissioner of Sindh.

A GOOD deal of evidence has come before the Bombay Bank Commission in the five sittings already reported. Mr. Hore, one of the solicitors acting for the Bank, admitted that, in the original draft of the Bank Charter, money might be advanced "on Government securities, or on the securities of shares in such of the incorporated Indian railways or other public companies in India as hold a guarantee from the Government with regard to payment of dividends on interest." This saving clause was afterwards struck out by order of the directors. Mr. Foggo however remembers nothing about this particular omission, or about any discussion over the new draft, for "the directors were all agreed," and he looked on the power of lending money on shares of any public company as one which, discreetly exercised, could have done no harm. It seems indeed from the evidence that the power in question was seldom used until ruin was already close at hand. In 1863 and 1864 loans to any amount were advanced by the secretary, under general instructions from the directors, to almost anyone who chose to offer his promissory note as sole security. In due time these notes had to be renewed, and then it was that the directors were driven to take security for them in the shape of worthless shares which might possibly rise in value if things would only take a more hopeful turn. Even in 1865-66 advances of 12 and 16 lakhs seem to have been made, remarks Sir C. Jackson, "on no security whatever." One witness, Mr. Lidderdale, admits that even in March, 1866, the directors must have been ignorant of the extent of their secretary's powers, and that the latter had exercised "very much larger powers" than Mr. Lidderdale had supposed him to possess. This gentleman underwent a very searching examination, which lasted through more than three sittings. Having been a director from 1864 till the latter part of 1866, his evidence goes over some of the worst transactions connected with the old bank. Sir C. Jackson pressed him hard touching the advances made to Premchund Roychund on his own unverified statement, at a time when he was known to be largely indebted to several other banks in Bombay. Mr. Lidderdale could only plead that all the banks had an "interest" in Premchund's solvency, that "his failure would have caused much ruin in Bombay," and that what was done to help him was done for the good of the shareholders, among whom was Mr. Lidderdale himself. This witness was obliged to own that some part at any rate of the large loan to Premchund was paid over without any written agreement, before the Bombay Government had been made aware of what was done. Sir Charles Jackson for his part seems fully equal to the task of eliciting unpleasant truths, without excessive harshness towards the subjects of his experiments.

THE Times of India is very angry at the notion of comparing the commercial failures in Bombay with those of Calcutta in past years, because the Bombay Bank directors, however otherwise culpable, forbore from feathering their own nests. This may or may not be true of the English directors; but how about some of the native, and was it speculative, madness which brought about the disasters in both cities? Calcutta has probably been the greatest criminal, but the events of late years seem to show that like temptations produce like results in all countries. Bombay, no doubt, is ashamed of its unusual folly, and resents the share taken by its Government in hurrying it down the slope of wild speculation. But there is no use in bandying words over a lamentable past, though it is hard, we allow, to hear a neighbour of once doubtful reputation crowing over his superior virtue.

AMONG other items of Bombay news the most noticeable are the appointment of two new members to the Legislative Council, and the opening of the new viaduct on the Bhore Ghaut incline of the G. I. P. Railway. The names of the new members are Mr. A. H. Campbell, once M.P. in England, and a merchant of eminence in the firm of Ritchie, Steuart, and Co.; and Mr. David Sassoon, c.s.r., a native gentleman of wide fame for his charities and enterprise. The new viaduct, an iron girder bridge of two spans, has been put to a severe test, which seems to have established its claim to be considered equal to any need. Trains have already begun to pass over it.

AT Calcutta the Justices have held a meeting to consider the question of a bridge over the Hooghly. The result was a resolution in favour of a floating bridge at or near Armenian Ghaut, which could be constructed in eighteen months from the plans of Mr. Granville, whereas a bridge at Cossipore, as proposed by Government, would delay for at least another generation the building of a proper bridge at Calcutta. Mr. Field's amendment proposed that the promoters of the floating bridge "should agree to merge their interest in a permanent road and railway bridge," to be built at or near the same place for the purpose of connecting in one scheme "the railway, some organised system of docks and warehouses, the town of Howrah, and the city of Calcutta." But Mr. Roberts's original resolutions were carried by a large majority. After all these discussions it is to be hoped that some practical beginning will be made during the next cold season.

THE Indian papers give us nothing new about "the little war in Keonghur," except that it is beginning to cause uneasiness among the neighbouring tribes. But that is a story which we are always hearing from one part of India or another. The Times of India however attempts to throw some light on the origin of this little war. The mother of the present Rajah is said to have induced a party among his subjects to take up arms against him, on behalf of a pretender who claims to be the late Rajah's adopted son. This gentleman is the son of a neighbouring Rajah with whom the late ruler of Keonghur stayed once on his way to Pooree. His claim having been disallowed by the Civil Courts, he is supposed to have hatched the present outbreak against the lawful sovereign.

THE inquiry into the railway accident at Samnuggur has brought out no revelations of horrors such as those which have been haunting the fancies of native dreamers. Instead of 300 corpses thrown into the river, it seems certain that no more than twelve were killed and a score or so injured. In an angry letter from the native President of the Railway Passengers Society the President of the Committee is informed that the writer "does not think it worth while to take the trouble of collecting further evidence" for the Committee, because certain witnesses were not examined one day after being kept "in the grilling heat from 6.30 A.M. to 8.30 A.M."

THERE is nothing new from Central Asia, and next to nothing from Afghanistan. It is still uncertain whether Abdurrahman Khan had taken Maimanah by force, or been allowed to hold it as an ally of Shere Ali. The latter however, having regained his health at Herat, was again moving towards Cabul.

THE floods in Lower Bengal seem by all accounts to have been very bad indeed. Cuttack, Balasore, and Pooree, in fact all the country west of the Bhagirutty has been laid under water. Communication with Cuttack was interrupted for eight days. The Byturnee rose eighteen inches above its highest level. The Grand Trunk Road was injured, and much cattle and grain destroyed. At Chittagong fifty-six inches of rain fell in eighteen days, but owing to the good drainage not much damage had been done to the crops in that neighbourhood. South-east of Calcutta, however, some four hundred of square miles of rice-fields were so many days under water that the rice-crop must be entirely ruined. Mr. Grey however was at his post, setting an example of energy which his subordinates were not slow to follow. Rice was being imported into Cuttack, and the ruined fields were being sown afresh. Even the Board of Revenue was alive to its duty.

THE ex-Nawab of Tonk has a great desire to come to England, that he may plead his cause in person at the India Office. But the Viceroy in the exercise of a wise discretion will take good care to keep him safe at Benares. In the present state of English feeling towards native princes, so illustrious a criminal might succeed in enlisting a dangerous amount of undeserved sympathy.

WE are glad to see that so far there is not a word of truth in any of the stories concerning Sir Donald Macleod's resignation of his lieutenant-governorship. Absurd as the notion seemed to us from the first, it was caught up so eagerly in some quarters, that even the name of Sir Herbert Edwards was quoted as that of one who might have replaced him if he would. It is now certain that up to the latest dates from India he had never even offered to resign. And why should he? What has he done to lower his character or compromise the dignity of his office? His whole offence consists in having stood surety for an officer who, for some reason or another, has since failed to meet his liability.

ISAAC WATTS used to warn us in our childhood how Satan found some mischief still for idle hands to do. Time must of late have been hanging heavy on the hands of the Commander-in-Chief of Madras, if we may judge by an item in the news brought by the last mail. General McCleverty, for want of nobler excitement, has waged war against the soldiers' beards. They are all henceforth to pass under the razor. What an excellent thing for the barbers of Madras, but what an absurd trifle for a rational being to make such a fuss about! Is the wearing of hair on one's chin so very unsoldierly a practice? or is it that the Commander-in-Chief cannot bear to see one man's chin smooth and another's bearded? We know that military martinetism is disturbed by such things as the difference of a hair, and that regulation whiskers are or were expected to be of a certain exact length and pattern. But for the life of us we never could see the principle of uniform shaving; and of late years the beard had regained that social position which it ought never to have lost. Has the Major-general no bowels of compassion, or is he envious of a well-grown beard? He might at any rate have been content with ordering the men to keep their beards trimmed, for decency's sake, as short as the hair upon their heads. The barber might still have found work to do with the scissors instead of the razor.

THE New Furlough Rules seem to have given general satisfaction in India. The Civil Service at any rate can have little left to complain of. Some few flaws in the first working of their new rules may possibly turn up; but on the question of furlough pay nothing can remain to desire. Five hundred a-year on first furlough with the prospect of another on £1,000 a-year does away with the objections raised at first to what is now the optional minimum of £300 a-year. For military men the new minimum of £250 a-year must be an immense boon, in comparison with the wretched pittance drawn by subalterns in former days. The military rules still wait the final sanction of the India Office, and so our various correspondents must be good enough to wait for an answer to their queries, or else try to get them answered in the right official quarter. As they now stand however, the new military rules would "take effect from the 1st July," but "half staff allowances will not be available for officers now on leave, in cases where the acting-officer has already come into receipt of the full staff salary." This may involve a little hardship in certain cases, unless the home Government agrees to make up the difference to those concerned.

MR. JULAND DANVERS, Government Director of Indian Railways, has just issued his yearly report thereon. The opening of 349 miles of new railway in the year raises the total mileage to 3,943. More than £9,000,000 have been added to the capital account, which now reaches £76,579,016. During the past year £7,000,000 were spent on railways, including the unusual outlay of £1,000,000 at home for materials sent out to India. For the current year the estimated outlay is £5,177,000. The whole amount of Government aid in lands, exchange on rupees, &c., raises the total outlay up to this time from 75 to 81 millions. The revenue for last year was only £32,337 more than the year before, owing to the recent check received by the trade of the country. Still in the last two years the revenue had increased by more than a million sterling. The working expenses were £2,537,812, and the net receipts £2,337,300. In 1867 the number of passengers, mostly third-class, was 13,746,354, against 12,867,000 the year before. The passenger fares were £1,376,812, and the goods traffic amounted to £3,320,607, showing a large increase on former years. Last year Government paid little more than £700,000 on guaranteed interest, against £2,500,000 paid by the companies. The Government, retaining the guarantee system for "commercial" lines, will take up the "political" on its own account in future.

THE NEW FURLOUGH RULES.

INDIA-OFFICE, July 27, 1868.

THE SECRETARY of STATE for INDIA in COUNCIL having CONFIRMED the following RULES promulgated by the Governor-General of India in Council regarding Leave of Absence to Covenanted Civil Servants, publishes the same in supersession of all previous Rules and Orders on the subject.

These RULES WILL TAKE EFFECT from JULY 1, 1868, and are not intended to apply to Covenanted Civil Servants who are members of the Councils of the Governor-General, or of the Governors of Bombay and Madras, or who are Judges of a High Court.

RULES REGARDING LEAVE OF ABSENCE TO COVENANTED CIVIL SERVANTS.

DEFINITIONS.

I. In the following rules :—

"Actual Service" includes the period during which an officer is on duty, also periods spent on privilege and subsidiary leave, and periods during which an officer, not on leave, may be out of employ on subsistence allowance in India.

"Extraordinary Leave" means any leave granted otherwise than under these rules.

"Long Extraordinary Leave" means extraordinary leave extending beyond a period of three months.

"Long Furlough" means furlough extending beyond a period of three months.

"Salary" includes acting allowances.

An officer's "Station" means that station to which he stands appointed, or such other place as the Government to which he is subordinate may determine.

CHAPTER I.—FURLOUGH.

II. The maximum period of furlough which can be granted to any officer during the whole period of his service is limited to six years.

III. Subject to the above limit, one year's furlough shall be placed to the credit of each officer for every four years of actual service.

IV. No furlough shall be taken before the completion of eight years' actual service, except under Rule VIII.

V. Furlough shall not be repeated until three years from the date of last return from long extraordinary leave or long furlough, except under Rule VIII. Leave taken under Chapters II. and III., but no other leave, shall be reckoned as part of the said three years.

VI. The maximum term of furlough to be taken at any one time shall be two years.

VII. Except as hereinafter provided, an officer when on furlough shall retain a lien on his substantive appointment or on an appointment of similar character, and not less salary, and he shall be granted allowances at the rate of 50 per cent. of his average salary for the previous three years, or for the period which has elapsed since his last return from long furlough, or long extraordinary leave if that period be less than three years.

In calculating such average, the time spent and the allowances drawn under any leave, excepting privilege leave under Chapter II., shall be omitted.

Provided that no officer on furlough shall draw more than £1,200, or less than £300 per annum.

VIII. Under Medical Certificate—

(a) Furlough may be taken on the abovementioned conditions, without reference to the amount at credit under Rule III.

(b) Furlough for a period not exceeding one year may be taken, even if less than three years have elapsed since the last return from long extraordinary leave or long furlough. When on furlough under this clause, an officer will not retain a lien on his appointment, and will be entitled only to subsistence allowance, unless he has completed six months' actual service since his last return from long extraordinary leave or long furlough, and there remain some leave to his credit under Rule III., in which case the officer will retain a lien on his appointment, and will draw allowances as calculated under Rule VII., until that credit be exhausted, but in no case for a period exceeding one year.

(c) Furlough taken without medical certificate, or under clause (a) of this rule, may be extended beyond two years for a period not exceeding one year. When on furlough under this clause, an officer will not retain a lien on his appointment, and will be entitled only to subsistence allowance.

IX. Furlough taken or extended under Rule VIII. is subject to the provision of Rule II.

X. Furlough taken in India will be reckoned from the date of the officer quitting his station to the date of his return thereto. Furlough taken out of India will be reckoned from the date of embarkation to the date of return.

In the event of the furlough being taken partly in India and partly out of India, the commencement and termination of the furlough will be determined by the above rules, according as the furlough begins or ends in or out of India.

XI. For the interval elapsing between departure from his station and the commencement of furlough, and between the termination of furlough and the re-arrival at his station, an officer shall be allowed subsidiary leave not ordinarily exceeding in each case thirty days. During those periods his allowances will be calculated in the same way as his furlough allowances, but without limitation as to maximum and minimum. Provided that, if the officer has, under these rules, lost his lien on his appointment, he shall draw subsistence allowance of his rank. Subsidiary leave shall count as service and residence.

XII. Applications for furlough will, in all cases, be submitted to the Government to which the applicant is subordinate, and will be dealt with in such manner as the Governor General of India in Council may from time to time prescribe.

XIII. Subject to the exigencies of the service, both as regards the number of furloughs available at any one time and as regards individual applications, of which exigencies the Government of India, Madras, or Bombay, as the case may be, shall be exclusively the judge, furloughs will be granted under these rules.

XIV. All applications for furlough under medical certificate, in accordance with these rules, will be granted without restriction.

XV. If, owing to the exigencies of the service, it may be necessary to place any limit on the number of officers who may be absent on furlough at the same time, applications not supported by medical certificate will be granted in the following order :—

The applicant to whose credit the greatest amount of furlough remains under Rule III. shall have the preference.

If two or more applicants are on an equality in this respect, the preference shall be given to the applicant whose actual service in India is longest, reckoning in the case of an officer who has not taken long extraordinary leave or long furlough, from the date of arrival in India, and in the case of an officer who has taken long extraordinary leave or long furlough, from the date of his last return from such leave or furlough.

If two or more applicants are equal in both respects, the preference shall be given to the senior in the gradation list.

XVI. The term of residence qualifying for pension shall be twenty-one years, but no leave, except privilege leave and subsidiary leave, shall count as residence.

XVII. The term of service qualifying for pension shall be twenty-five years.

CHAPTER II.—PRIVILEGE LEAVE.

XVIII. Subject to the exigencies of the State, an officer who has completed eleven months' continuous duty may take privilege leave for one month without deduction from his salary, retaining a lien on his appointment, whether substantive or officiating. Provided that, in the case of his holding an officiating appointment, such lien and his acting allowance will cease on the resumption of charge by the officer to whom the substantive appointment belongs.

XIX. In the same manner and under the same conditions two or three months' privilege leave may be taken when an officer has completed continuous duty of twenty-two or thirty-three months respectively.

XX. Privilege leave may, at the discretion of the local Government, be taken in separate instalments. No second instalment shall be taken until after the completion of six months' continuous duty from the expiry of the first instalment. In this case the eleven months qualifying for fresh privilege leave will be reckoned from the expiry of the first instalment, the period of the second instalment being omitted from the calculation.

Provided that the whole privilege leave taken at any one time shall not exceed three months, and that no accumulation of privilege leave beyond that period shall be admitted.

XXI. If an officer shall overstay his privilege leave, he shall forfeit all salary during the time of his remaining so absent; and if he shall so continue absent for more than one week, his office shall become vacant.

XXII. Privilege leave shall be reckoned as residence and service.

CHAPTER III.—SPECIAL LEAVE.

XXIII. Special leave, on urgent private affairs, may be granted at the discretion of the Local Government for a period not exceeding six months. In respect of retention of a lien on appointment of allowances drawn during the leave, and of subsidiary leave, the conditions of special leave shall be the same as those prescribed for furlough. Special leave shall not be reckoned as residence.

XXIV. Rule XXI. shall, mutatis mutandis, apply to an officer overstaying special leave.

XXV. Special leave may be repeated without allowances after intervals of at least six years' actual service.

CHAPTER IV.—GENERAL.

XXVI. Furlough, privilege leave, and special leave shall not be taken as such in continuation of each other; but if an officer absent on one of these classes of leave be allowed to change it for another, the whole period of his absence shall be held to be under the class of leave for which it was changed.

XXVII. Subject to considerations of State, there will be no restriction as to the places where an officer may reside when on leave.

CHAPTER V.—TEMPORARY RULES.

XXIX. Whatever aggregate amount out of the three years' furlough and three years' sick leave, under the rules until now in force, at present remains to be taken by an officer under the said rules, shall remain to be taken by him under rules now promulgated.

XXX. Any officer now in the service shall, when next proceeding on furlough, elect whether he will draw allowances at the higher minimum rate of £500 per annum (not exceeding his total salary at the time). If he shall so elect, he will, in any future furlough, be limited as to allowance to the lower maximum rate of £1,000 per annum.

XXXI. Any officer now absent on leave, who has no appointment, may, on his return and until he again holds an appointment carrying equal pay to that of the substantive appointment which he last held, draw the subsistence allowance of his rank, together with 75 per cent. of the pay of any appointment in which he shall officiate. Provided that the total salary so drawn by him shall not exceed the pay of the appointment in which he is officiating. This rule shall apply to any officer who may have already returned from furlough.

XXXII. Any officer now absent on furlough, or under medical certificate, may elect whether the remainder of his leave shall be taken under these rules from the date of their promulgation. If he shall so elect, Rule XXX. shall not apply to him.

RULES REGARDING ACTING ALLOWANCES.

I. An officer holding a substantive appointment and officiating in an appointment of a higher grade or class, shall draw acting allowance calculated at 30 per cent. on the first Rs. 2,000, and 20 per cent. on the remainder of the pay of the appointment in which he is officiating.

Provided that, if the acting allowance so calculated do not amount to two-thirds of the difference between the pay of the two appointments, it shall be raised to two-thirds.

Provided further that in no case shall the whole salary so drawn exceed the pay of the appointment in which the officer is officiating.

II. An officer holding no substantive, but only an officiating, appointment, shall, subject to the provisos in Rule I., draw, in addition to the subsistence allowance of his rank, 50 per cent. of the pay of the appointment in which he is officiating.

III. In the case of an officer officiating in an appointment, the pay of which is progressive, his acting allowances shall be calculated on the mean pay of the said appointment, provided that the whole salary so drawn shall not exceed the minimum pay of the said appointment.

ARMY REFORM.

THERE can be no doubt that every year is bringing us nearer to some great reform in the organisation of the British army. A Parliament elected by householders will not long refrain from setting our military systems in order. The time must shortly come when the British army will have to be remodelled in accordance with the spirit of a democratic age. The knell of promotion by purchase is striking at the very moment when the principle of purchase has been introduced into the youngest regiments of her Majesty's service. The double government of the Horse Guards and the War Office looks as if it might last for ever, and yet the first gust of popular feeling will in all likelihood shake it down. Flogging has already become a thing of the past. We have just been lengthening the term of a soldier's service, as if in wilful blindness to the growth of circumstances which inevitably tend to shorten it. Promotion from the ranks has been growing less and less frequent in face of the growing tendency of the times to lessen the old gulf between officers and men. The middle class element in English society still finds no sufficient place in the British army. English officers are still, as a rule, about the worst instructed in Europe; and the whole constitution of the English army belongs far more to feudal than to modern times.

Sir Charles Trevelyan's pamphlet on the British Army may therefore be welcomed as a useful aid towards the construction of a good working army of the future. * The subject is one on which he has some right to speak, as an intelligent enquirer of many years' standing. Without being himself a soldier, he probably knows more about the main facts of our military system than nine-tenths of the officers who could pick holes in his knowledge of small details. It is with the army as with other professions; if its peculiar merits are best known to military men, outsiders are apt to be the best judges of its general worth and of its main shortcomings. It is so hard for a professional critic to look from a neutral stand-point at things concerning his profession. Reform in most cases comes from without, and the army shows no exception to the general rule. No change, however plainly for the better, readily commends itself to the military mind. It is always convinced that something dreadful will happen, if the system that worked in one age be altered to meet the requirements of another. It is greatly exercised just now about the abolition of flogging, although for many years past discipline has maintained itself without the lash. It cannot see the use of doing away with promotion by purchase, or believe in the possibility of raising an increased proportion of officers from the ranks, or realise the advantage of short terms of enlistment over long terms.

And yet these are the directions in which reform is likeliest to come. On each of these questions Sir Charles Trevelyan has something practical to say. How to make our army really popular and self-sustaining forms the first subject of his enquiry. The army, he thinks, should be made really to represent the nation. "It should be neither more aristocratic nor more democratic than the rest of English society." At present it retains the old feudal spirit, which set a great gulf between the officer and the private. Let in the middle classes to whom England owes so much, and then "the British army will become emphatically a popular army, and our recruiting difficulties will be at an end."

We must begin however by abolishing purchase and improving the officer's pay. The purchase system now rests on nothing but the difficulty of compensating those who would suffer by its abolition. Its best friends have ceased to defend it as a general principle, and would limit its action to the lower ranks of officers. But there is no use in abolishing it by halves. This is just one of those cases in which, as Bacon said, "it is safer to change many things than one." The mere cost of the change will not be formidable. For a few years you would have to pay about three quarters of a million yearly for officers selling out. But each year under the amended system the inducements to sell out would weigh less and less against the inducements to stay on. Meanwhile the cost of increased pay for all grades of officers serving would be defrayed by reducing the proportion of officers to men. If one officer to forty-nine men is enough for the Prussian army, one to forty for the Austrian, and one to thirty-five for our own artillery, why should we keep up the present excessive proportion of one to twenty-eight?

The army should be officered in two ways, by men trained in a military college and by men promoted from the ranks. These last would also have among other things to prove their fitness by an examination, and a fixed proportion of all commissions should be reserved for soldiers thus qualified. We should thus get a body of officers thoroughly acquainted with their work, instead of gentlemen who know little about it and usually care less. The regimental ranks might be cut down to four. Mr. Childers's scheme of retirements on a graduated scale for the scientific branches could be made the basis of an amended scheme for the whole army, on the principle of compulsory retirement after a certain length of service in each grade. Lieutenants should rise to captains by seniority; field-officers being chosen by proven fitness alone. The number of field-officers of high rank will bear large reduction, and the consequent saving in money would help to make up for the increased pay to those who remain.

With regard to the term of enlistment, Sir Charles once more explodes the notion that old soldiers are the best. The best soldier, said even the Duke of Cambridge, is a man after three years' service, and onwards to "about twelve or fourteen." Twelve years however seems to be the general limit of excellence, after which the soldier falls off. But the present term of enlistment is too long for a volunteer army like ours, and far too long to ensure a steady supply of new recruits of the right quality. Reduce the term to seven years, and men who wished to marry and to return to civil life would still be plenty young enough to do so, while a few of the most promising soldiers might be tempted to re-enlist on higher pay, with free permission to marry, and a good pension in prospect. In this way we should save a large outlay on pensions, bounty, and extra pay for the numbers who now get one or the other. The re-engaged men might be bound to ten years' service in the reserve. As for the militia, they should be engaged and drilled thoroughly for one year, after which they might serve for seven in the line, or for ten years in the reserve.

There are many other useful hints in this pamphlet which all who are interested in our military efficiency would do well to ponder. It is easy to sneer at them as the crude ideas of a civilian; but it must always be remembered that spectators can see more of a battle than most of those engaged in it, and that the army is only one of many institutions which exist not for their own particular benefit, but for the interests of the whole nation.

"THE STORY OF MAIRWARA."

Now that the policy of annexation has lost its charms for Englishmen there seems to be a danger of our running into the opposite extreme. By way of penitence for past sins in one direction we are ready to commit any amount of follies in another. Having forsworn the policy which made us masters of British India, we would prove the sincerity of our new convictions by yielding up one after another of our former conquests to any claimant of dark complexion and a princely pedigree. It was not enough to take Dalhousie down from his pedestal: we would set up in his stead an idol borrowed from the Hindu Pantheon. In the present rage for native princes we are apt to overlook the claims of native peoples. It may have been a proper act of self-denial to forego our title to the ownership of Mysore, albeit there was much to say in behalf of our right to hold that province as a forfeit fief. But if Mysore must go, why should we part with other territory which has become ours by right of long prescription and good government, merely because some native prince would fain possess it for himself? Of what crime are the people of Mairwara guilty, for example, that we should transfer them from our humanising rule to that of some native neighbour whose claims they utterly disavow?

It is necessary to ask these questions, because the surrender of Mysore seems to have started a new crowd of native claimants to whatever they can get, and because the chiefs of Meywar and Marwar have already set up a claim to a large portion of British Mairwara. Their agent, Colonel Taylor, came last year to England to plead their cause with the kind masters who had shown themselves so easy in the matter of Mysore. What their chances of success are we cannot say; but a little book now before us has been published as a kind of counter-appeal on behalf of the country and people we are asked to yield back to their lawful rulers.* "The Story of Mairwara" was worth the telling for its own sake, and will probably read quite fresh to a great many persons who, having lived some years in India, are of course supposed to know all about the history of that many-peopled region. Some of them may have heard it told once before by Colonel Dixon, whose "Sketch of Mairwara" appeared in 1850, and furnished Mr. Kaye with matter for some pages of his subsequent book on the East India Company's administration.

* "The Story of Mairwara; or, Our Rule in India." London: Longmans and Co. 1868.

But the present work, besides bringing the story down to latest dates, seems written with the twofold object of doing justice to Dixon's predecessor among the Mairs, and of pleading for the right of that interesting people to remain under British rule.

General Hall, the founder as it were of British Mairwara, was one of those able men whose deeds form the very salt of our Indian history. To him, at any rate, belongs the praise of having tamed the wild nature of the mountaineers who fell under our rule in 1822. In thirteen years he did as much for the people as a man in his position could have done; suppressing slavery, wife-selling, infanticide, establishing Panchayats on fixed principles, and encouraging the people to make up for the drawbacks of their dry climate by forming tanks, sinking wells, and using other means of maintaining a due supply of water for their thirsty fields. Seven large tanks were finished under his auspices. During Colonel Dixon's rule down to 1847 the number of these increased to two hundred and ninety. This officer, working in his predecessor's spirit with larger means, raised Mairwara into a model province. He built the town of Nya Nuggur (new city), established an annual fair there which drew traders from all the surrounding country, opened roads, and founded a number of village schools. At his death, in 1857, the Mairs were a happy and thriving people, perfectly contented with the rule which had made them what they were. During the troubles of that year their loyalty was never called in question, and their troops helped to maintain order in the neighbouring districts. Since then their condition has steadily improved. Nya Nuggur maintains a thriving trade with Bombay in cotton and several other staples; and the missionaries have lately established a dozen schools in and around Beawr, with a daily attendance of nearly five hundred children. Altogether these simple Mairs have reason to feel satisfied with the blessings of British rule.

And they have not the least wish, we are told, to exchange those blessings for the privilege of serving a native master. Whatever may be the truth about Mysore, it seems certain that these people dread the notion of being transferred to any of the chiefs who are now claiming sovereignty over this or that part of Mairwara. They spurn the idea of having ever known a master before they yielded to the might of British arms. Up to that time the chiefs of Meywar and Marwar had rather less claim to lord it over them than Edward I. had to demand homage from a King of Scotland. Unluckily, after the conquest, their claims were too readily allowed, and part of Mairwara has ever since been held by us in trust for its pretended owners. But the Mairs themselves have always scouted those claims. "Our lands," says the Memorial of 1832 from the Mair Zemindars of Shamgurrh, "were given to us by no one. At one time King Akbar took our ancestors to Delhi, rendered us his subjects, and gave us those towns. From those days to this no government has been established in Mairwara." The petitioners declare that, so far from yielding to any Rajah or Bhoomeah, their forefathers invariably drove the troops of any invader out of the country. Why should they pay revenue now, they ask, to chiefs from whom they used to levy it? The British alone are their "original kings?" from them alone have they derived at once their injuries and the countervailing benefits; to them alone will they pay revenue, and not to the Thakoor of Kurwa or Mussooda.

Thus spoke the Mairs ten years after their subjection, and thus, we believe, they feel and speak now. Eleven years later, when the question of a transfer was again mooted, Colonel Dixon declared that he had received numerous petitions, "all breathing the same painful and heartbreaking sentiments; extreme despondence that they should be transferred to States to which they only paid a nominal allegiance." The English, they said, had weaned the people from their old lawless habits, and taught them the arts of peaceful industry. They were living happy and secure, in the full belief that their children would continue to enjoy the blessings of British rule. All that would be over if they were transferred to other masters. "The Kamdars would treat them with haughtiness and tyranny, fleece them of all their hard earnings, and ultimately drive them to desperation."

These remonstrances decided the Government to put off the evil day for the Mairs. Only a few villages were then made over to the Rajah of Marwar, and their subsequent decay has proved the justice of the fears so touchingly expressed by the Mairs of that time. In 1846 Colonel Sutherland raised his voice also on behalf of the threatened people, declaring that "it would amount to almost a breach of faith, to give them over in their present comparatively helpless condition, to be plundered by persons whom they hate." He foresaw from such a proceeding the worst results, ending in Mairwara's relapse into its old state of lawlessness and barbarism. And yet no man of his day had a more enlightened sympathy with natives of all classes than the sometime Political Agent for Rajpootana. If the Mairs be still as loth as ever to exchange masters, they would be even more likely to fight the question out at once with the neighbouring chiefs than to accept the prospect of a slow but sure decay under the new yoke. For the old stuff must still be in them, in which case they would think it better to die fighting than to live enslaved by men whom they utterly despise; and we could hardly have the cruelty to cut them off from that last resource of desperate men.

What, then, is to be done? Must the Indian Government keep to the letter of agreements made under a false impression of the facts? If the original claims of Meywar and Marwar rest on nothing better than statements flatly denied by their old opponents, it can hardly deem itself bound to a bargain founded on the seeming justice of those claims. And even if they did rest on some ground of historical truth, is it for Englishmen who believe in the rights of nations as well as of kings to yield up a whole people against their will to a sovereign whose claims they have steadily disowned? Anyhow, a popular vote would help us out of the difficulties raised by a fine sense of honour. Let us decline to yield up a single village in all Mairwara until the people themselves have declared by their suffrages under which sovereign they would rather live.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE ARMIES OF NATIVE STATES.

The Bombay Gazette would have us compel, by a friendly pressure, the abolition of the army of cut-throats which every native prince keeps in his employ, or its conversion into an efficient police force; and to insist upon a fair contribution towards the maintenance of the Indian army, with a view of relieving, to a just extent, the tax-paying millions of British India. The contribution to the British Government would be less than the amounts at present spent upon the useless but highly dangerous bodies of armed retainers which every prince keeps in his pay, and which are said to amount to not fewer in all than 170,000 men. The existence of such an army in the pay of the native princes operates injuriously upon British India in two ways. First, inasmuch as it is regarded as a reason for exempting them from contributing to the maintenance of the real bona fide army of India, and for leaving that burden entirely on the shoulders of the inhabitants of the territory under direct British rule. Secondly, it compels the tax-payers of British India to maintain a larger army to checkmate and watch that enormous force of cut-throats than would be otherwise necessary. An amicable revision of the treaties would, no doubt, accomplish all we are arguing for. It seems to us undeniable that Government has the most ample grounds for making the demand we suggest. The interests of two-thirds or three-fourths of the population of the peninsula suffer by the present unjust relations of British India proper and the native States. Upon any theory these States are bound in justice and fairness to contribute their quota. If they are regarded as British territory, as in fact they are, the obligation is clear; and if we regard them as independent States the duty is not less obvious, for they are not entitled to be supported out of the pockets of the ryots and tax-payers who live under British rule. The disjointed pecuniary relations to which we have been adverting demonstrate how anomalous it is to attempt to preserve the figment of a system of independent principalities in India; if they are to exist at all it should be under the conditions of a confederation in which each member of the federative body should be called upon to discharge the full complement of its federative duties.

THE INDIAN LAW OF ADULTERY.

The Englishmen asks who wanted this law, and for what object? If it was intended, as has been said, to prevent the occurrence of crimes of vengeance among the natives of this country we, in the first place, totally deny that it was necessary for this purpose. Not only is the crime of adultery rare in respectable native society, but we have no reason to believe that it is more frequently the cause of violent crime among them than among other races. What kind of natives, too, have availed themselves of the law? Has any respectable Hindoo prosecuted the seducer of his wife in a criminal court? Is any respectable Hindoo likely to do so? But suppose it had been necessary to enact such a law for the prevention of violent crime among the natives of India, what has that to do with Englishmen and wives of Englishmen? While conceding the general equity of the principle that a man should be tried by the laws of the country in which he resides, is there not something most anomalous and unreasonable in the fact that an act which, as between two subjects of the same sovereign, is no crime when committed in one part of her dominions, should be a crime between the same two subjects in another part of her dominions? Are Englishmen and Englishwomen in India so much more depraved than Englishmen and Englishwomen in England that they should be subjected to special terrors in the former country to restrain them from acts from which the civil courts in their own self-respect are considered sufficient to restrain them in the latter? Might we not with as much reason go a little further, and make that which is punishable by imprisonment in Calcutta punishable by death at Simla? A no less strange anomaly is the fact that this extension of the sphere of the criminal law has taken place at a time when the general tendency of legislation and of public opinion is to contract it. Viewed as it concerns the duties of man towards man, marriage is a civil contract. Why should the criminal courts be called in to punish a breach of that contract? If, on the other hand, the rite of marriage be viewed in its religious aspect, what have the criminal courts to do with a breach of man's duties towards his God? But viewing marriage as a contract at all, the still greater anomaly is that the accessory only is punishable, and not the principal; the woman who made the contract, and who breaks it, goes scot-free, while the man, who is not a party to the contract, is branded as a felon. If it were proposed to make the law just, and punish the woman equally with the man, every Englishman who deserves the name, and every Englishwoman would cry out against it as totally opposed to all English notions. Yet this law, which appears to us to treat womankind very much as kittle-cattle—without moral responsibilities, and incapable of protecting themselves—has been enacted at a time when women are proud to claim a footing of equality with men, and when the more advanced sociologists of both sexes are agitating to confer on them equal rights, social and political. Is there, we would ask, any Englishwoman who would defend such a law as Section 497 of the Indian Penal Code, notwithstanding the immunity it grants her? It has been argued that the law is not so unequal as it seems; that although the Criminal Court cannot punish the wife, society does. Now, we are not going to enter into the question of how far society acts kindly or justly in closing the door of repentance against a frail woman, in piling mountains across the path of virtue for the weak woman, instead of endeavouring to strengthen her. Somehow or other it has always been so. From her that hath not, shall be taken away even that which she hath. Women, it may be, have more to answer for in this than men. But it is strange justice for the law to make a man a felon, because society chooses to think him a venial offender.

BOMBAY'S SHARE OF THE OUTLAY ON PUBLIC WORKS.

The Times of India complains that, after providing handsomely for its own wants out of money chiefly contributed by Bombay, the Supreme Government has generously doled out just seven lakhs of rupees for the requirements of the place in the way of new public offices. The impression seems to be that the Bombay people ought themselves to provide the empire with a new post-office and custom-house and hospital, and we know not what else the place wants. Towards the purely local wants of the 800,000 people which form our community the Government allots just Rs. 1,40,000! Now, there is no excuse for this conduct. Money is offering in London in any quantity at 3 to 3½ per cent.; and were Calcutta not destitute of the most ordinary financial provision the crying wants of this place would have been looked fairly in the face, and a loan of two, three, or four millions taken up to meet them promptly and fully. The propriety of such a step is demonstrable, for the loan could be extinguished with certainty and ease in the course of a dozen or fifteen years, simply by charging a rental for each new building at 12 per cent. upon the outlay. The simple truth is, there is no financial wisdom at Calcutta, and there never has been any, while a very considerable amount of paltry jealousy of this presidency has lent an accession of dulness to the general obtuseness of the place. What course will Sir Richard Temple take? We counsel him to try a fall with the stupidity around him, and to cast himself upon the other provinces of the empire for support.

POSTINGS.—Official notification has been received of the under-mentioned officers having, on promotion in 1867, been posted to the battalion of their regiments specified:—Lieutenant F. W. Douglas, 7th Foot 1st battalion; Captain F. Watson, 11th Foot 2nd battalion.

STATION TALK.

CALCUTTA, June 20.—As you are interested in native improvement and the progress of civilisation amongst the people of this country, I am able to send you one item of a rather peculiar character. When Miss Carpenter came to India she was accompanied by a young native who had been to England to qualify for the bar, Baboo Monomohun Ghose. This young man always speaks well of the treatment he experienced in England, and considers the English at home a better order of beings on the whole than Englishmen in India. There are reasons for this opinion which I need not enter into. Baboo Monomohun, though probably not much in love with the gods of his fathers, has not accepted the one of his instructors-in-law. But he has seen much and admired much of our Western civilisation, and seen and compared our system of social life with that of India. He has seen the difference between the condition of women in India and in England, and evidently prefers the grace and intellect of Western civilisation to the degradation of the sex in his own land. It is said that, so far as he is concerned, he desires to remove this disparity. Of course, like most of his countrymen, he is married—married before he knew that he wanted a wife; but having contracted the obligation he wishes to fulfil its duties. It is said that under the advice of Mr. Justice Phear, Baboo Monomohun Ghose has placed his wife in charge of the superior of the Roman Catholic convent in Calcutta to receive such an education as may fit her for a different position to that usually occupied by Hindu ladies. She has not, and probably does not, intend to abandon the religion of her fathers any more than her husband has done; but she will receive such instruction as may fit her for the duties of higher society as we understand them—to leave the seclusion of the zenana and to become an ornament to society, and, like a virtuous woman, a “crown to her husband.” Her husband, by-the-way, is said to be likely to be crowned in another way, by being appointed a police magistrate of the southern or European division of Calcutta, the present occupant, Mr. Branson, being appointed temporary Professor of Law in the Presidency College, and from thence intends practising at the bar of the High Court. This is only report, but it may become a fact in deference to the opinions recently expressed in high quarters as to the appointment of natives to higher offices in the public service.

NYNÉE TAL, June 22.—It appears that the American Presbyterian missionaries here intend opening a school at this station for boys and girls. For this purpose they have purchased the large house formerly belonging to General Richards, situated near the church, and are at present engaged in fitting it up as a school-house. I hear too that they have engaged the services of a professional teacher, who has come out either from England or America, and is now, I hear, in Nynée Tal. It is said that he is under an agreement to serve the mission for a certain number of years, and this is probably true. The Lieutenant-governor arrived here last Saturday, the 20th inst. Colonel Ramsay, the Commissioner, went down to Kalleedoonjee to meet his honour, leaving Nynée Tal for this purpose on the evening of Friday, the 19th inst. The two secretaries to Government arrived two or three days before Sir William Muir. The secretariat appears to be the only office which intends coming up this year. Neither the Inspectors-general of Police nor Prisons, nor any of the heads of the subordinate officers, have yet entered an appearance, nor do I think they intend doing so. A good many people have arrived here during the past week, and strange enough all those to whom I have any opportunity of speaking have, without exception, complained of the great heat here. This seems a strange complaint on the part of those who have just arrived from the plains during the heat of the latter end of June. But truth is ever stranger than fiction. Even natives who have just arrived here are making similar complaints. Nearly every night during the last week we have had a heavy storm which did not cease until next morning. About two o'clock on the morning of last Thursday, the 18th inst., the station was visited by an earthquake, which made the houses shake over the heads of their inhabitants. Fortunately the convulsion did not last long, else the houses would most undoubtedly have done something more than simply shake.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

SIMLA, June 24.—The gold currency question is not yet mature. I have heard that circulars have been sent to the various Governments, and possibly to the commercial Chambers and others for opinion on certain points; but for the complete accuracy of this statement my informant could not vouch. At any rate, you may rely on this, that the question has reached such an advanced stage that “Government in the Financial Department” considers it necessary to be reticent on it. When this is the case with reference to a question of such universal public interest, the logical inference is that the beginning of the end is at hand, and that the public will soon be authoritatively informed of all that has been decided on, or is to be done. The “soon” I have italicised might have been written very soon, but that I suppose there must be a reference to England. But no matter for that; if we are to have a gold currency, all about it will have been before the public some time before the “Christmas” you alluded to the other day. If I were asked to guess, and I could do no more, what is likely to be done, I should reply:—“Gold in the form of English and Australian sovereigns, and in that of a new Indian coin, is likely to be admitted, though not to be declared legal tender.” And I would, more confidently, add:—“Whatever is done, I think the public may feel assured they will not have inflicted on them the evils of a double standard.” The paper currency arrangements have been engaging gubernatorial consideration. They may be allowed to remain as they are, which would not be unwise; for it may, with the utmost safety, be affirmed that the Indian paper currency has been as successful as the state of inland trade and commerce will admit, which is about the same thing as saying “as successful as could be.” Still there has been a clamour for a universal note, and though that is felt to be an impossibility, there is a readiness to give the utmost consideration to the question of the practicability of presidency notes, that is, notes encashable on demand at every currency or quasi-currency office in each presidency. On this subject I may have more to communicate. For the present let it suffice that there is a net profit of at least fifteen lakhs of rupees a year from the paper currency, and that there is no unwillingness, but, on the contrary, a desire to devote this to giving the public greater facilities for making remittances in paper currency, and, by so doing, increasing the confidence of the native community in the “note.” Troops have been ordered from the small stations of Chota Nagpore and Cuttack to the disturbed hill state on the south-west frontier of Bengal Proper, where the police have been worsted. The affair is of no great consequence.—Times of India Correspondent.

BERAR, June 22.—The quick changes which have of late taken place in the Residentsip of Hyderabad have been rather remarkable. While the query, who is to be Resident? was being agitated last year, this year during the same months as those of the former the identical question was again raised, and surmises have been quickly cut short by the appointment of Mr. Saunders. The old Berar officials of the subordinate grades are quite jubilant at the return of an old, tried, and valued friend in the capacity in which he now returns; for apart from his urbanity towards those under him, his disposition is such that he has earned the blessings of many. In fact, I cannot speak of him in too eloquent terms. Mr. Roberts had made himself very popular with all classes of the community at Hyderabad, and was characterised for the quiet and steady manner in which he got through work. He had nothing of the bustle of Sir Richard Temple about him, and was much better liked for his amiable qualities. Though Sir Richard's administrative acumen is undeniable, yet somehow or another he does not appear to have left Berar in a very quiet state. Certainly he had no time to put all his views into force, and those which he had partially brought into operation were left to others to be carried out. Anything smacking of a hybrid production has not a sound ring about it, and therefore when we come to consider some of the rotten institutions in Berar we can, by being able to trace their origin, at once pronounce a valid opinion as to the cause of the poverty of intellect with which certain measures have been framed. The policy of posting up natives in high authority has found a ready and cordial support in Berar at least, for all uncovenanted servants rising from the lower grades to extra assistant commissionerships are to be debarred the great privilege of exalting themselves, through their own exertions, as assistant commissioners. Alas! for the uncovenanted: when will they be fairly dealt with? Now that we have so conscientious a man as Mr. Saunders with the ribbons of Berar in his hand, we trust that with his full appreciation of the just he will be instrumental in making men of worth, intelligence, and aspiration realise partially, if not wholly, the dreams of prosperity which force them to labour on in their cause. On the 26th current Major Millett will reassume charge of his office from Lieutenant Lane, who has in a most praiseworthy and efficient manner conducted the onerous duties of Inspector General of Police. The Major, I believe, contemplates taking furlough shortly. Government will be wise if it re-appoint Lieutenant Lane to officiate; he has every recommendation, and is indubitably the “square man in the square hole.”

SEHARUNPORE, June 28.—We had very naturally been led to the belief that the rains were close at hand, not merely from the advanced state of the season, but from the appearance of black clouds which came down from the Himalayas and the entire absence of even a breath of air; but somehow or other these welcome messengers of a copious shower have been invariably supplanted by high winds from the north-west, and in some instances the clouds have moved off with but a slight sprinkling, leaving the station very unhealthy. For the last two days the atmosphere has been impregnated with very fine dust, which the natives assert is a visitation from Heaven; however, whatever it may be, I can vouch for the choking sensation it produces not being over agreeable. A great portion of the railway station has been completed; all that now remains is the roof, which cannot be put on until the foreman, at present finishing off the Hindun Bridge, is at leisure to superintend the riveting together of the girders. On the whole, the progress on the new line has been very rapid, notwithstanding the numberless blunders that have been repeatedly made, together with the delay caused in the conveyance of material. The bridging of the Katha Nuddee in the Mozuffernugger district is about the only piece of work that has been and still will be a matter of time, owing greatly to the treacherous bed of the stream. Great complaints are rife against the license-tax, especially among railway officials, some of whom are liable to dismissal at short notice, and hence don't at all see the justice of being taxed on their annual incomes. Our worthy magistrate, Mr. Webster, has gone on leave.

ALLAHABAD—July 1.—We are sadly in want of rain; a smart shower the night before last has not tended to make the weather pleasanter. You will see in the last Government Gazette an able minute by the Lieutenant-Governor about the compilation of historical, statistical, and other information for a gazetteer of the N.W.P. Sir William Muir's views are very comprehensive, but I doubt if he will realise his anticipations in getting volunteers for the rather difficult work he has laid down; a paid servant would do it better. Dame rumour has it, and I rather fraternise with the old woman, that Mr. R. Simson goes into the board as Mr. Thornhill's substitute, and Mr. H. S. Reid, lately of Oude, but whose services have been transferred to the N.W.P. Government, officiates as Secretary to Government. If this be true, Sir William has clinched the right nails. Rumour says Mr. Simson is expected back to Allahabad very shortly. Cholera was rather severe in the city, but owing to the late fall of rain reports tell that it has abated.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

SIR W. MANSFIELD.—According to the Pioneer, there is nothing in Sir W. Mansfield's health to cause apprehension that he will be unable to complete his term of office as Commander-in-Chief.

BANK OF BENGAL.—The Bank of Bengal has declared a dividend at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum for the half-year ended 30th June.

NAGPORE.—The monsoons have fairly set in in Central India; the troops have taken to woollen clothing, and the air is said to be cool and pleasant.—Central India Times, June 27.

THE ASSAMESE LANGUAGE.—Lieut. M. O. Boyd, Bengal C.S., is declared to have passed by the second standard of qualification in law and Assamese, and is subject to a further examination in Bengali.

THE MAGISTRACY.—The following deputy magistrates and deputy collectors are posted to the districts mentioned, viz.:—Mr. J. R. Hand, Moorsheadabad; Mr. C. E. Bailey, Patna; Mr. L. B. Roberts, Shahabad; Mr. H. B. Beames, Rajmehal, Sonthal Pergunnahs.

REGISTRARS OF ASSURANCES.—The following officers to be sub-registrars of assurances of the sub-districts mentioned against their names, viz.:—Mr. J. E. B. Jeffrey, Berhampore; Mr. L. DaBreu, Motecharee; Lieut. H. J. Peet, Seebaugor; Mr. H. Luttman-Johnson, Kishnaghur.

RESIGNATION.—Mr. William McChlery has been permitted to resign the Civil Service at the expiration of his three years' furlough, which commenced on the 22nd March, 1866. It is said that Mr. McChlery has joined a commercial firm in the city of London.—Pioneer.

THE MEDICAL SERVICE.—The general orders relating to the Medical Service that have been issued during the last four years have been published by Messrs. Wyman Brothers, and doubtless those interested in these orders will be glad to have them in so compact and complete a form.

TELEGRAPHS IN BURMAH.—We hear from Rangoon that the King of Burmah has again expressed a desire to have the Indian system of telegraphs extended to his dominions. The work will be a Royal monopoly. Having regard, however, to its difficulty and character, his Majesty is said to have resolved to commit the construction of the lines to Europeans.

MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS.—The following gentlemen are nominated members of the municipal committee of Dalhousie, to represent the interest of visitors:—Major F. S. Bigge, the Reverend J. R. Lewin. The undermentioned gentlemen have been appointed Municipal Commissioners of Simla for the year 1868-69:—Mr. F. Peterson, Colonel S. B. Faddy, Messrs. P. Mitchell, J. Walker, D. S. Henry, W. H. Carey, Moulvi Abdullah, and Lala Gulab Singh.

LIONS AND TIGERS KILLED BY THE OFFICERS OF THE 2ND CENTRAL INDIA HORSE.—A party out with Col. Gibbard from the 9th April to the 1st of June bagged twenty-four tigers, three panthers, and one bear. We are given to understand that the officers of the 2nd regiment of Central India Horse for the past two years have bagged from thirty to forty tigers; last year they killed thirty-six, and during the time the regiment has been stationed at Augur and Goona they have shot from 300 to 350 lions and tigers.

THE SACRIFICE OF HUMAN BEINGS.—Meriah sacrifices in the wild districts along the boundary between Bengal and Madras have not yet wholly ceased. The chiefs have been induced to set their faces against the practice, but the people abide by the ancient custom, and appear to take any opportunity for carrying it into effect. We hear, for instance, that the Khonds of Toamool recently attempted to perform a Meriah sacrifice. The unfortunate Meriah was, however, rescued, and the whole affair reported to the Rajah of the district, who, acting up to his engagements, had taken measures to have the parties concerned apprehended.—Englishman.

WOLVES IN THE WURDAH DISTRICT.—We (Central India Times) have just heard that a hungry wolf attacked and maul'd, more or less severely, a company of eleven travellers in the Wurdah District. This is the first time we have heard of the presence of wolves in the plains, their depredations having heretofore been confined to the hill districts.

THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—The want of feeder roads to the Chord Line and to the Jubbulpore branch of the E. I. Railway has, at the instance of the traffic manager, been brought by the Board of Agency to the notice of Government, as it is impossible to expect the local traffic on these lines to be developed without roads from the principal places of trade in the interior. The Government of India have, we believe, asked the Governments of the N. W. P. and the C. P., as well as the Native States concerned in the Jubbulpore branch, to report the progress in making feeder roads.—Delhi Gazette.

PROBABLE MOVEMENTS OF THE VICEROY.—Sir John Lawrence, (says the Indian Daily News) may visit the Punjab before he goes to England. He has received an invitation from the chiefs of the province. His Excellency is however certain, should the works be complete by then, to open the Umballa and Delhi section of the Lahore Railway in October next. This will place a railway terminus within less than ninety miles of Simla, and less than fifty of the base of the hills. The remaining portion of the line, that between Umballa and Lahore, will, we believe, be ready for opening next year.

NEW BRIDGE OVER THE HOOGLY.—At a special general meeting of the justices held in Calcutta the following resolutions, proposed by Mr. J. B. Roberts, were carried by a large majority:—1. "That in the opinion of this meeting a bridge, railway, or otherwise, would be of little value to the inhabitants of Calcutta and Howrah if placed at or above Cossipore. 2. That in the opinion of this meeting a bridge for general traffic is urgently required, and that the most fitting place for a bridge would be at Armenian Ghat, or close in the vicinity. 3. That as a floating bridge can be constructed in about eighteen months, it is decidedly advisable to adopt the proposal of Mr. Granville."

GOOD CONDUCT PAY.—The Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council directs that, in conformity with the procedure authorised by the Royal Warrant of February 3, 1866, all claims to good conduct pay preferred in India within one year of the time at which they become due shall be adjusted at once without special authority; and, further, that such good conduct pay shall be issued at the time it becomes due, although no claim may be made by the soldier. In the absence of any claim or issue within the prescribed period of one year the good conduct pay will be forfeited; commanding officers are, therefore, directed to take measures to prevent such forfeiture in all possible cases.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.—Lieut. F. H. Gould, attached to the 9th Native Infantry at Barrackpore, has mysteriously disappeared. The report has been spread abroad that his boat was upset while rowing on the Hooghly, and that Mr. Gould was drowned, while his native boatman escaped. There exists, however, a very general impression that Mr. Gould's circumstances were such as to render his absence from Barrackpore for some time a matter of necessity; and there are several interested friends about the presidency who would be gratified by the possession of Mr. Gould's body—which, for a good reason, we believe, has not been found in the Hooghly.—Friend of India, July 2.

PESHAWUR.—We (Delhi Gazette) understand that the arrival of Brigadier-general Stewart is daily expected at Peshawur, to take up the command of the brigade to which he has been appointed. Had his arrival been postponed beyond the 18th or 20th of July, when Major-general Haly's "general leave" commences, the command of the division, during the Major-general's absence, would have fallen to Major-general Dunsford, C.B., who still commands the brigade, and is officiating for General Haly on "Privilege leave." However, it will come about that Major-general Dunsford will pass out of the coach, and Brigadier-general G. V. Maxwell, C.B., will get in. As first intended, it was not, on the departure of the Bishop of Calcutta from Peshawur, deemed necessary to detain the Rev. M. R. Burge on duty in the garrison, as the arrival of a duly appointed chaplain was expected in the course of a few days.

THE BENGAL POLICE.—The following Assistant Superintendents of Police to be Special Assistant Superintendents of Police for the prevention of smuggling of salt in the districts mentioned, viz.:—Mr. R. A. D. Bignell, Balasore; Mr. C. E. S. Innes, Cuttack. Mr. H. N. Harris to officiate as District Superintendent of Police, Burdwan, during the absence, on special duty, of Lieutenant J. R. Wimberley. Mr. R. A. D. Bignell to officiate as District Superintendent of Police, Balasore, during the absence, on special duty, of Mr. J. H. Thompson. Mr. W. J. Kilby to officiate as District Superintendent of Police, Hazareebaugh, during the absence, on deputation, of Major W. T. Fagan. The following Assistant Superintendents of Police are promoted, with effect from the 1st inst., viz.:—To the First Grade: Messrs. J. H. Johnston and H. N. Harris. To the Second Grade: Messrs. J. B. Goad, F. Dawson, V. S. Robertson, F. J. Dickens, H. Munro, C. E. S. Innes, M. F. Beamish, and A. Kuyvett.

SETTLEMENT OF THE JUMMOO FRONTIER.—The boundary between the British territory and Jummoo is to be re-examined. An officer has been specially deputed to carry out this work.

A MODEL ADMINISTRATOR.—Though his Honour the Lieutenant-governor was expected to proceed to the North-Western Frontier early in the present month, he has not yet taken his departure, in consequence of the unfavourable reports received from the south and south-western districts of the presidency. This sticking to the post of duty on the part of Mr. Grey is highly creditable to him, and is in favourable contrast to those who seize the earliest opportunity of flight, leaving the country to take care of itself. We understand too that Mr. Grey, when he is absent, does not neglect duty and forget the obligations of his office. Even on board his yacht he devotes much time to public documents, which others have been known to spend in quoits and music. It would be well for India if more of our administrators recognised as fully the fact that the path of honour is that of duty.—Indian Daily News.

EXECUTION AT LUCKNOW.—Benjamin Sheldon, a gunner of the Royal Artillery, was lately tried by Court Martial and sentenced to death for the murder of Elijah Wall at Lucknow on the 2nd May. The circumstances of the murder, as given by a local paper at the time, were as follows:—Sheldon was seated in his quarters and playing a violin about nine o'clock in the evening, when his corporal desired him to desist "making that row." The man quietly did so and retired to his cot. He rose three hours afterwards, and taking his piece with him proceeded to the corporal's quarters and shot him dead as he lay asleep. The sentence of the Court Martial was confirmed by their Excellencies the Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief. The sentence was carried into effect on the morning of the 26th June. The execution took place at gun-fire, and the arrangements were very quietly carried out. For several days before his execution the condemned man had taken no solid food whatever; his strength had been sustained solely by stimulants. It is said also, according to the Pioneer, that no native could be tempted by any sum of money to act as executioner. It was certainly a European who officiated.

THE PURIFICATION OF DRINKING WATER.—Dr. F. N. Macnamara, Chemical Examiner to Government, recently addressed the Government of Bengal on the subject of the purification of water for the use of troops, in accordance with a Government memorandum. He stated that he had already dwelt at length upon that subject in his report upon the analysis of the potable water of cantonments, which had lately been printed by orders of the Government of India. In that report he very strongly recommended the introduction of the Danchell filter for use in barracks and military hospitals, and he still thought that of all filters the Danchell was the best suited for the purpose, with, however, a few modifications. He thought that the water should be purified from matters held in suspension before it was allowed to enter the filter, so that the action of the animal charcoal of the filter might be concentrated upon the separation of the dissolved organic matter, which might be managed by passing the water through a stratum of fine sand. The syphon of the Danchell filter was very unnecessarily composed of three pieces instead of one piece. The filters should be made of galvanised iron, not of earthenware, and the top of the filter should be fastened on to the chambers by nuts and screws. Dr. Macnamara concluded his letter by remarking that Messrs. Jessop and Co. were making for him a filter out of an old galvanised iron oil case which would be very cheap, and, he believed, would serve its purpose excellently well, as the general principle of the filter was the same as that of the Danchell.

ESTATES IN THE ADMINISTRATOR-GENERAL'S OFFICE.—List of estates which have come under charge of the Officiating Administrator-General during the month of May, 1868:—John Macintire, late Deputy Inspector-general of Hospitals, Peshawar Division; William John Nelson, late District Telegraph Officer, Great Indian Peninsular Railway, Boorampore; James Holloway Roach, late member of the firm of Messrs. Roach Brothers, of Tezporo, in Assam, merchants; Mrs. Mary Smith, late a widow, residing at Howrah; Edward Thrall, late a British subject, residing in Calcutta; Thomas Yates, late a Supervisor in the Department of Public Works at Wurdah. N.B.—All persons having claims upon, being indebted to, or holding property belonging to the above-mentioned estates, are requested to place themselves in immediate communication with the undersigned. (Signed) C. J. Wilkinson, Officiating Administrator-General, 5, Strand.—Calcutta, June 13. Notice is hereby given, that certain effects belonging to the late Mrs. Elizabeth Augusta Amelia King, who died intestate at Toolseepore, in the town of Cuttack, on the 28th of April last, are under this Court, and will be made over to any person legally authorised to receive the same.—E. W. Molony, Officiating Judge. Cuttack, Judge's Office, June 4, 1868. Gwalparah, May 29.—Certain effects belonging to the estate of Mr. H. Walsh, Sub-Assistant Surveyor attached to Revenue Survey, Fifth Division, and British subject, who died intestate, are in the custody of this Court, and will be made over to any party legally authorised to receive them. All claimants to the estate of the deceased, account holders, in or against the favour of the deceased, should file complaints within one year from this date to this Court.—A. K. Comber, Deputy Commissioner.

COTTON IN LOWER BENGAL.—The Englishman is glad to learn from the correspondence published in the Calcutta Gazette of June 20, that a really vigorous effort is being made by Government to improve the quality of the cotton grown in Lower Bengal. Thirty-four applications were forwarded from the Commissioners of the different divisions to Mr. H. Rivett-Carnac, the energetic Cotton Commissioner of the Central Provinces, for a supply of no less than eighty-two maunds and sixteen seers of Hingunghat cotton seeds, for the purposes of experiment, the whole of which was despatched early in May, having been purchased from the villages celebrated for the best cotton. Mr. Carnac strongly urges the importance of establishing seed gardens, and carefully selecting the seed in all cases of attempts to improve the cotton cultivation, as recommended also by Major Clarke in his pamphlet on cotton. But in order to insure as far as possible the success of the proposed experiment, Mr. Carnac has also taken the trouble to forward a memorandum, giving a full description of the system of cultivation adopted for the Hingunghat cotton, and of the soil and climate in which it is grown. He also directs attention to the necessity of providing a constant quality of staple, if high prices are desired, and advises that the selection of seed should always be carried out under careful European inspection. Although, as Mr. Carnac remarks, "what suits Hingunghat land may not be found to answer in Lower Bengal," we think the memorandum is of sufficient importance to justify the Government in having it translated into the vernacular for distribution, if they are really in earnest in the attempt to improve the staple of Bengal cotton.

THE FLOODS IN BENGAL.—The subjoined telegrams have been placed at our disposal by the Government of Bengal:—Cuttack.—From Cuttack, to Calcutta, from Commissioner to Secretary, Government, Bengal.—In Pooree I have no reports of serious damage. Flood has breached several Bunds and also main road. In Cuttack the whole delta of Brahminee and Byturnee has been under water, as also the lower portion of Mahanuddy delta. The low country about Kendraparah and thence to False Point and Acl was one sheet of water. Large breaches in Brahminee embankment. Flood eighteen inches above highest known level in and about Jajipore sub-division, and higher up the Brahminee and Byturnee. Villages, grain, and cattle have been carried away and lives lost. Relief will be necessary. Kirkwood and another deputy collector sent out with orders to get rice from Government Golahs, and sell or distribute where required. In Bhuddruck, trunk road carried away in many places, and floods probably destructive. Particulars not received. Weather cleared since the 19th. Flood fallen rapidly. Bealee Aous crop has suffered, and Sarud (Amun) cannot be planted in many places through excess of water. There must be a difficult harvest. Much will depend on the next month's favourable weather. Full report will follow on receipt of particulars. Balasore.—From Balasore, to Calcutta, from Collector, to Junior Secretary to the Government of Bengal:—Your telegram received last night. Three reports sent to Board of Revenue. Early crops generally destroyed. Newly sown cold weather rice mostly destroyed. Cultivators sowing high lands afresh. Low lands still flooded. Few lives lost by drowning. Many by cholera, especially among pilgrims. Villages near large rivers destroyed. Many thousand cattle drowned. People of North Central Balasore cheerful. Deputy-Collector deputed on tour of inquiry in South. Rampini thinks general relief unnecessary. If seed runs short I will telegraph.—Englishman, July 1.

SIMPLE CURE OF SNAKE-BITE.—The Indo-European Correspondence of the 21st May contains a letter from the Rev. Father Raphael, O.C., the parish priest at Bettiah, Chumparun, in which he mentions the following extraordinary recovery from the effects of a snake-bite:—"In these days, when the scientific world is so actively employed in trying to discover a certain and infallible cure for snake-bites, allow me to call the attention of your readers to a very simple and easy remedy which I learned in this part of the country, and of the extraordinary efficacy of which I was an eye-witness no later than last evening. The remedy I speak of is alum, which is known by the natives as phukiri, and is to be obtained everywhere. Here is the case which happened last night under my own eyes, the publication of which may be not only interesting but useful to your readers. Yesterday, after evening prayers, the children of the Orphanage in this station were playing out in the open air upon the grass, when suddenly a girl, about ten years old, cried, 'I have been bitten, and feel very ill.' The child was immediately brought to me; a snake had evidently bitten her, but no one saw the snake itself, as it was already dark (it being after sunset), and the circumstance occurring on the grass. The effects, however, produced upon the child clearly proved that she must have been bitten by a snake of the most venomous description; for in the space of about ten minutes she lost the power of speech, her eyes became blood-shot, and she was in a state of fearful and continued convulsions. It would appear—judging from the place in which the child was bitten—that she must have sat down upon the snake. Perceiving the dangerous state in which she was, I immediately took a small lump of alum, about the size of a pigeon's egg, dissolved the whole in a large glass of water, and at once made her drink it off. In a few minutes she began to be very sick, throwing up much matter from her stomach, when I again made her drink alum-water. This went on for about an hour and a-half, during which time she must have consumed alum of about the size of a hen's egg dissolved in two large bottles of water, the draughts being administered at short intervals after each vomiting. At the end of the time mentioned the girl began to recover; and within two hours' time was able to stand up by herself, and regained the use of her voice. After this I made her walk about a great deal, and now she is almost entirely cured. I forgot to mention that the poison of the snake was so active and violent that the child fell only a few yards from the place where she was bitten."

PIPE-CLAY.—Gunner Benjamin Sheldon, of No. 3 Battery 2nd Brigade R.A., was tried lately by court-martial at Lucknow, for having murdered one Elijah Wall by shooting him with a carbine, and was found guilty and sentenced to be hanged. This sentence of the Court was afterwards "revoked," but the "revised sentence" was also to the effect that the unfortunate man should be hanged. We fail to perceive any material difference between the two, but perhaps some of our readers will be wiser. The "sentence" and the "revised sentence" are as follows:—"Sentence.—The Court sentence the prisoner, No. 334, Gunner Benjamin Sheldon, of the 3rd Battery 22nd Brigade Royal Artillery, to suffer death by being hanged." "Revised sentence.—The Court, having attentively considered the observations of the revising officer, and the whole of the proceedings, do now revoke their former sentence, and now sentence the prisoner, No. 334, Gunner Benjamin Sheldon, of the 3rd Battery 22nd Brigade Royal Artillery, to suffer death by being hanged by the neck until he be dead." The virtue of the "revision" seems to be in the words "by the neck until he be dead." The sentence was confirmed by Sir W. R. Mansfield and approved by the Governor-general in Council.—Bombay Gazette.

BIKANEER AS IT IS.—Bikaner, as perhaps all our readers may not be aware, is a large tract of sandy desert-like country, situated between Bhawalpore, Marwar and Hissar. The area is said to be some 17,680 miles, whilst the population does not exceed 550,000. With the exception of the district adjoining Hansi and Hissar on the north, the whole State of Bikaner is described as a succession of sand hills of varying height, which increase or diminish in size with the force or direction of the wind. His Highness the Maharajah ruling over this sterile tract is said to be of an amiable disposition, and in manners and courtesy a perfect native gentleman. Unlike many other chiefs we could name, the Bikaner Rajah holds a durbar almost daily, is therefore accessible to complaints, and thus prevents that oppression and extortion so often practised by native durbar officials. A few years back a slice of country known as "Tebao" was granted by the British Government to the Maharajah of Bikaner for his services during the mutiny years of 1857-58. Of productions peculiar to the country and in demand as exports there are, we believe, none, excepting the peculiar white sugar said to be only manufactured there, and which finds its way into other provinces crystallised in large earthen "ghurras." But Bikaner contains the houses and homes of a great number of opulent merchants who are scattered over India. As regards the people generally, they are, we believe, as fairly prosperous and contented as in any other native State, affording indeed a pleasing contrast to some we might name. On the Shekawuttee border dacoities are frequent, but it is stated on creditable authority that the majority of these desert freebooters are outlaws from, or at least natives of Marwar, Jeypoor or other adjoining States. Shoojehanghur, the third largest town in the Bikaner territory, has attained an unenviable notoriety as the residence or at least head-quarters of the plundering bands infesting that part of the country, and which the Bikaner durbar, chiefly on account of distance, has not been yet able to coerce. Lastly, we must not forget to add that the Bikaner Rajah has retained for many years past the services of an European medical man, Dr. Ernest Coleridge, who with his son resides far from the busy haunts of men in this scarcely known city of the desert. The latter gentleman is, we understand, chief of the police, and general factotum of his Highness the Rajah in all matters relating to the military or criminal business of the State.—Delhi Gazette.

MUNICIPAL.—W. A. Deey, Commanding 4th Regiment N.I., is appointed to be a Town Commissioner for the town of Mangalore, in the South Canara District, during the year beginning the 1st May, 1868, ending 30th April, 1869.

POSTINGS.—The following appointment and posting are ordered:—Major Clarke, Staff Corps, to officiating 2nd command and wing officer, 10th N.I.; Lieut. Bradshaw, Staff Corps, attached to 10th N.I.; Captain Rideout, 43rd N.I., attached to 35th N.I.

THE ENNORE ROWING CLUB.—By the ship Roxburgh Castle, which arrived on the 29th June, eighty-eight days from London, the Ennore Boat Club have imported a four-oared outrigger, with which they are desperately resolved "to do or die."

COMMAND OF DEPOTS.—The Secretary of State has decided that one uniform rule is to be adopted in all the three Presidencies, in regard to the command of depots for European troops. In future the command of a depot is not to be held for more than four years, or of a convalescent depot for more than two.

THE MALABAR DISTRICT.—The Government have approved of the proposal made by the Subsidiary Jail Committee for erecting a subsidiary jail at Gudalur in the Wynaad Talook in this district, and they have directed that the construction of the building be proceeded with forthwith.

SUBSISTENCE ALLOWANCE.—The Governor-General has, we observe, sanctioned the extension of the privilege of subsistence allowance for their wives and children to non-commissioned officers and soldiers, whose allowances, consolidated or otherwise, do not exceed Rs. 100 per month.

THE GREAT SOUTHERN OF INDIA RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts for the week ending 16th May, 1868, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 8,088-7-0, and for luggage, goods, &c., to Rs. 4,822-8-4, making together Rs. 12,910-15-4, or average receipt per mile of Rs. 76-13-7. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 10,091-13-0, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 79-7-0.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers obtained leave of absence in June last:—Lieutenant-colonel W. F. B. Lawrie, 23rd brigade Royal Artillery, from July 1 to August 29, 1868, priv. leave; Lieutenant and Quartermaster W. MacD. Robinson, Staff Corps, 27th N.I., from June 15, 1868, or date of departure, to Madras, preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe on medical certificate.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned officers of the Mysore and Coorg Commission have passed the examination prescribed for assistants in those provinces:—By the higher standard.—Mr. H. W. Wellesly, Lieut. E. S. Ludlow, Lieut. H. M. S. Magrath. The undermentioned officers have passed by the lower standard in Hindoostani:—H. J. Hazlett, Assistant-surgeon, doing duty 19th N.I.; W. Macrae, M.B., Assistant-surgeon.

THE MADRAS DISTRICT.—On the 17th of June the acting collector reported that ploughing is everywhere in progress, and the supply of forage for cattle generally improving. Cattle diseases are still prevalent, but not to any great extent. Prices continue stationary. In the Sattivedu division of the Trivellore Talook, the tanks have received half and quarter supplies; in other tanks the supplies of water received are small, but sufficient for present use.

ALTERATION IN MAIL DAYS.—From Wednesday, the 1st of July, and till further notice, the overland mails to Bombay will be despatched from Madras every Wednesday and Express on Thursday, instead of on Thursday and Friday as at present. Owing to the heavy rains and bad state of the road, and having four rivers to cross in boats on the Bombay side, the above arrangement has been ordered by the Post-office to prevent any delay in the receipt of the overland mails at Bombay.

THE COFFEE BORER.—Notwithstanding the great cry about the borer, the export of coffee from the western coast has this season been far larger than in previous years, and we are glad to learn that the prospects for the coming season are as good, if not better, than last year. We may, we think, look on the visitation of last season as principally to be attributed to the long and exceptional droughts of the previous three years, and the careless style of cultivation that ignorance, want of means, and the making haste to be rich, had caused to become so prevalent.—South of India Observer, June 18.

VOLUNTEERING FOR REGIMENTS.—The Government have ruled that such men of H.M.'s 46th, 91st and 101st Regiments of Foot, under orders to return to England, as are desirous of extending their service in India, may be allowed to volunteer to regiments of the same arm serving in India, excepting the 1st Battalion 1st Foot, 1st Battalion 5th Foot, 1st Battalion 7th Foot, 2nd Battalion 10th Foot, 2nd Battalion 21st Foot, 1st Battalion 23rd Foot, 2nd Battalion 25th Foot, 26th, 38th, 41st, 45th, 77th, 82nd, 88th, 90th, 82nd, 93rd, 95th, 102nd, 103rd and 107th Regiments of Foot.

LANDING OF THE 45TH FOOT.—The beach yesterday afternoon presented a very animated appearance. There was a company of the 60th Rifles marching to the railway station, the band of the 45th Regiment playing them thither; there was some more soldiers of the 45th landing, and all bearded and unkempt, meeting on the strand their comrades who submitted to fate in the guise of a barber on Sunday. There were soldiers' wives and soldiers' children, and, as a matter of course, soldiers' dogs with stumps of tails, and what with exaggerated crinolines, and chignons, rusty Abyssinian spears, and bright coffee pots, semi-bleached tunics and trousers of queer hues, the locality looked more lively than orderly.—Madras Times, June 30.

OBITUARY.—The Madras Times regrets to record the death at the Presidency of Apothecary John Gorman, attached to the Lying-in Hospital. The deceased was suffering from a carbuncle on his back for nearly a fortnight. He had charge of the Lying-in Hospital for several years, and rendered the highest satisfaction in the discharge of his duties. It is not too much to say that the Lying-in Hospital has suffered a serious loss by the death of Mr. Gorman. The deceased gentleman was a comparatively young man, having just completed his forty-sixth year. At the last Convocation of the Madras University Mr. Gorman had the degree of Licentiate of Medicine conferred on him. There is no doubt that had Mr. Gorman lived he would have attained a very high position in the medical service.

NELLORE.—The Acting Collector of Nellore reported to the Board of Revenue on the 13th June:—"Rain.—A good fall in most talooks. Kanigiri and Gudur are the only exceptions. The Pennar River has been in flood. Most tanks received supplies of water. Owing to the Sarvapalli works not being sufficiently advanced to allow water to pass down the channels to the delta, a good deal of water has been lost. The rain-fall at Nellore, as registered at the Talook Cutcherry, was 8 1/2 inches; as registered by the Department Public Works, 6-70 inches. In Udayagiri there is now said to be plenty of water, and no necessity for sinking wells further. State of Crops.—There is nothing to be noticed here. In some localities the ryots have commenced ploughing for dry cultivation. Prices have been constant during the week. Small-pox exists in several talooks, and ague prevails in Kanigiri. Cattle disease abating. Pasturage re-appearing very rapidly."

BEARDS TO THE RAZOR.—It is with heartfelt sorrow that we have to confirm the rumour to which we gave credence a few days ago, that all beards belonging or appertaining to military men are to be ruthlessly cut off and converted into wigs and chignons. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the Madras army, after long and deep cogitation, has come to the conclusion that beards are an absurd institution, only worthy of Mahomedans, clergymen, clerks, and other individuals who have no idea of the eternal fitness of things. It is commonly stated that had not the Abyssinian expeditionary force adopted the "clean shave" or "the crop of the period" they would never have captured Magdala. It was the "crop" and not the Snider that did the business; and, bearing this invaluable truth in mind, General McCleverty is of opinion that the warriors of the Madras army should do away with their hirsute appendages altogether. Won't there be joy among the barbers!—Bangalore Herald.

COTTON.—The decline in the value of cotton noticed last week continued after departure of the mail, and large purchases of Westerns were made at gradually declining prices, and supplies having come in pretty freely dealers have been more anxious to enter into contracts. Sales have been made at Rs. 125½, 125, 124, and within the last few days at Rs. 118 per candy, but later telegrams having been received reporting a slight advance in prices at Liverpool, with a firm and advancing market, have had the effect of hardening prices here, and it is now difficult to make purchases under Rs. 120 to 121, at which rate the market closes very firm, and we look for higher rates ruling in this market ere long. Some small sales of Salems have been made at Rs. 117 to 120. Moderate quantities of Tinnevely cotton have changed hands at Rs. 135 per candy on board. At Cocanada the market has been quiet, and only small sales have been made at Rs. 116 to 118 per candy on board. The demand for rice at Cocanada and at the other ports on the coast has been active, but business has been a good deal interfered with by heavy rain; the prices ruled from Rs. 3-14 to Rs. 4-2 per bag.—Madras Athenæum.

THE MADRAS RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts of the south-west line for the week ending June 13, 1868, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 36,113-1-1, for goods, &c., to Rs. 50,935-3-11, making together Rs. 87,048-5-0; or an average receipt per mile of 176-14-10. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 86,731-3-4, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 176-4-6. The receipts of the north-west line for the same week amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 8,361-9-8, for goods, &c., to Rs. 31,220-5-2, making together Rs. 39,581-14-10; or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 258-11-3. During the corresponding week in 1867, the receipts were Rs. 32,577-7-9, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 212-14-10. The traffic receipts of the south-west line for the week ending the 20th of June, 1868, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 35,166-1-7; for goods, &c., to Rs. 58,875-3-9, making together Rs. 94,041-5-4; or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 191-2-3. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 84,109-0-6, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 170-15-3. The receipts of the N. THE BOMBAY BANK COMMISSION.

The Commission has already sat on five days and examined several important witnesses. The first gentleman examined was Mr. John Stuart, secretary and treasurer of the bank from 1842 till 1860, when Mr. Blair (before that time deputy-secretary) succeeded him in the post. Mr. Stuart again became secretary and treasurer in January, 1867, and is now liquidator. He was examined with reference chiefly to the old management of the bank. Mr. Stuart, in producing one of the books of the bank, said:—"In my time there were no past due bills, and no past due bill ledger was necessary." Nor was there any overdraft balance book "in his time." "If two persons applied for a loan on a promissory note I always took care that they were independent persons. Credits were granted on security of Government securities, goods, bullion, and railway stock, but never on personal security. I have had great experience as a banker. I never heard of cash credits being granted on one name alone. Two or more securities are always required on a cash credit, and a loan would be granted on the same terms as a cash credit. I have never known any system of banking which advances money on the bond or note only of the borrower. To allow accounts to be overdrawn was prohibited in the Act of 1840." Referring to a monthly return made out for Government, Mr. Stuart says that when he came back to Bombay—"I found loans on promissory notes granted without security entered under the head 'Loans on other description of securities.' The Government directors signed these forms, and they knew they were loans on personal security only." Mr. Stuart will be again examined with reference to the future management of the bank. Mr. Hore, as belonging to the firm of solicitors which acted for the bank, was examined with reference to the preparation of the draft of Act X. of 1863, and the fact was elicited that one of the paragraphs of the original draft of the section enumerating the business in which the bank was to be allowed to engage ran as follows:—"The advancing and lending money on Government securities, or on the securities of shares in such of the incorporated Indian railways or other public companies in India as hold a guarantee from the Government with regard to payment of dividends on interest." The italicised words were afterwards struck out (according to Mr. Hore) by Mr. Kelly, the head partner of the solicitors' firm, under the instructions of a committee of the directors. Mr. Rodgie, deputy secretary and treasurer of the old bank, was next examined, and was questioned with reference to advances amounting to between sixteen and seventeen lakhs of rupees to the Eastern Financial Association (chiefly in April and May 1865) and an advance of Rs. 12,83,000 to Byramjee Hormusjee Cama in May 1866—all made, said Sir C. Jackson, without any security whatever. With regard to the last named sum the witness said it must include all Mr. Byramjee's liabilities gathered into one; and as to the Eastern Financial he could not tell how it was that so much money had got into its hands without any security being given. At the next sitting, the Hon. George Fogg, a director of the bank from December 1860 till December 1863, was examined. In regard to the words of the draft Act, above referred to, he said he had no recollection of the committee striking them out. He did "not remember any discussions on the new draft;" indeed, "the directors were all agreed." He considered the power given to the bank to lend money on shares of "other public companies in India" was a power which, if used with discretion by the directors, and if proper precautions had been taken, would have done no harm. "The 27th section of the Act of 1840 puts certain restrictions upon the business of the bank; the omission of these from the new Act must, I suppose, have been in consequence of the instructions from Mr. Blair, the secretary of the bank, to Messrs. Kelly and Hore, in which they were told to adhere as nearly as possible by the Bank of Bengal's charter." Sir Charles Jackson here observed:—"I know that restrictions were contained in Schedule B of the Act, but that was struck out by the Legislative Council, so that I think the Council is more to blame than the bank." It further appears from Mr. Fogg's evidence that the provision that no accounts should be overdrawn "was in the bye-laws of the new Act, and was put in word for word with the rule of the Bank of Bengal." "By a minute of the board in August, 1863, all applications for advances on shares other than those of Government banks were to be submitted to the board, and not left to the discretion of the secretary." In regard to this last statement the President remarked—"It is a very curious thing, but it seems that your resolution was not entered in the minutes, and was subsequently inserted at the end as if it had been forgotten." Mr. Fogg knew nothing about that. The directors (said Mr. Fogg afterwards) had the power to make, alter, or rescind bye-laws, but did not exercise it. Sir Charles mentioned that twelve or fourteen or more advances were made on personal security while Mr. Foggo was a director, but Mr. Foggo said—"None of these was entered in the application book, and I was unaware of it." "Practically all large loans during 1863 were referred by the secretary to the board, and also many other loans, except cash credit on personal security, which were kept back. The secretary had certainly a discretion to the extent of one lakh." Up to 1863 there was no restriction as to the amount which might be advanced to any one. "The largest discount which I can find on the books of 1863 is three lakhs, and there are very few amounts above one or two lakhs. The majority of the loans were for small sums." Mr. Melvill asked why it was that from September, 1863, to May, 1865, not a single application for discount was referred to the full board, as had been done previously; and Mr. Foggo answered that it had been the practice in cases of doubt or in the case of large bills to refer to the weekly committee. In regard to the increase of the bank's capital, Mr. Foggo approved of the measure. The next gentleman examined was Mr. F. F. Lidderdale (of Remington and Co.), who was a director from December, 1863, till July, 1866. He stated that he opposed the quadrupling of the capital, but would not have objected to an increase of £500,000. Speculation commenced in 1862, but he was not aware of any advances having been made on shares till April, 1865. As to this, the President mentioned several large advances that had been made on shares about October, 1864. Mr. Lidderdale appeared to think that they could not have been reported to the board or the weekly committee, and he added—"A very serious objection was raised to the bringing of names of applicants for loans generally before the direction, on the ground that it scared away a great many of the constituents of the bank, who more easily obtained accommodation elsewhere. That was brought to the notice of the board by a native shareholder. I recollect a proposition made by Cowasjee Jehanghire about the month of April 1864 for increasing the power of the secretary. Cowasjee's desire was to give the secretary absolute power to grant any loans whatever, whether the board refused to sanction them or not." Mr. Justice Westropp, who as acting Advocate General was consulted about the preparation of the new charter, gave evidence at some length, and the examination of Mr. Lidderdale was afterwards resumed. In the course of his further evidence he said—"I was not aware that loans, cash credits, and discounts were granted on the simple recommendation of the native directors till a short time before 5th March 1863, except, perhaps, up to half a lakh." At the third, fourth and fifth sittings Mr. Lidderdale's examination was continued. The evidence goes too much into detail for us to follow it here. It refers at length to some of the most notorious of the unfortunate loans made by the bank—those to Premchund Roychund, the Asiatic Bank, the Eastern Financial, Mr. F. L. Brown, &c., &c. On the afternoon of July 6 the Commission was to examine privately Mr. Ryan, formerly connected with the Eastern Financial, and at present an invalid in the European General Hospital.

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, June 25.—The weather outside the bar has been verily fearful, and even in the harbour, that most convenient individual, the oldest resident, has not known it to be so bad before for at least the past quarter of a century. The sailing transport Mandalay, with muleteers from Abyssinia, arrived off the port on Monday last in a sinking condition, and had a very close "shave" of it. She was told to keep off, but owing to the high winds was drifted towards Clifton and got among the breakers there. She was in a perilous position during the night, and soldiers, sailors, fishermen, and, in fact, all the men that could be got together, were marched off to the beach by the local authorities to render any assistance which might have been necessary. But fortunately Mr. Mason, the head pilot, took the tug Dagmar to her aid and succeeded in pulling her off, and brought her into smooth water round the Munora Point. The pilot, Mr. Cope, who boarded the vessel at the first, has, I believe, been suspended in consequence of the mishap; but it is hardly fair to blame him, I think, when the ship was in such a poor state, and was in a manner unmanageable. The Mandalay was bound for Bombay, but owing to her having suffered injuries after she parted near Aden with the steamer which had her in tow, she was obliged to alter her course to this port; and lucky, too, it is that she did so, and that the muleteers on board worked hard at the pumps for nearly a fortnight under the supervision of Captain Griffiths, otherwise we should possibly have never more heard of her. The following is the strength of the corps and animals under the command of Captain Griffiths which came in her:—2 inspectors, 4 jemadars, 16 duffadars, 12 artificers, 122 muleteers, and 212 mules and ponies. These will be detained here until orders as to when they are to proceed to Bombay are received from the Commander-in-Chief. The ship James Child, which I said in a recent letter had stranded on one of the mouths of the Indus, is still in the same unhappy position as when I last wrote; but arrangements are being made to protect her against the force of the present high winds, and every hope is entertained of getting her off safely after the monsoons. The captain came into Kurrachee last week and brought in an extract from the ship's log (as already published in the Gazette), from which it would seem that the second officer, Mr. Bryson, is somewhat to blame for delaying to give the sounding and for neglecting to communicate to his superior officer the fact which was reported to him at ten P.M. that the water appeared discoloured until within a very short time of the stranding of the vessel. The ship Catherine Apar, from Abyssinia, with Captain Collet, Assistant-Surgeon Powell, and a party of the 21st Punjab Pioneers, arrived in harbour safely on Tuesday. The troops were conveyed in the afternoon by rail from Keamaree to the Frere station, where a couple of companies and the excellent band of the 17th M.N.I. gave them a hearty welcome. They leave for Kotree to-night, and will be conveyed up the Indus in the steamer Frere.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

COLONEL PELLY has received instructions from the Government of India to mediate between the Sultan of Muscat and the Shah of Persia, in the Bunder Abbas affair; and it is expected will be able to prevent hostilities, or to put an immediate stop to them should they have broken out. Up to 1855 the possession of the port of Bunder Abbas was a constant cause of quarrel between Persia and Muscat. In that year the Shah was induced to lease the port for twenty years to the Sultan of Muscat. A nominee of the latter now holds Bunder Abbas, but has recently declared that he holds it for Persia, and not for Muscat. The Shah supports him, and the Sultan of Muscat threatens to blockade the port and bombard the place.

NEWS FROM POONA.—Poona is just now filled with returned expeditionaries from Abyssinia. As a rule, they are none, or at any rate do not look, the worse for their campaign, although most of the horses, especially those which went up to the front, have returned in a very attenuated condition. Colonel Mereweather was in Poona till yesterday, and was on Thursday entertained, with many of the rest of the officers concerned in the late expedition who are now in Poona, at a banquet at Government House, Gunnesh Khind, by his Excellency Sir Seymour Fitzgerald.—Poona Observer, July 4.

THE GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE.—The Government of Bombay lately recommended to that of India that a separate Professorship for Botany and Hygiene may be created in the Grant Medical College in that presidency, on a salary of Rs. 600, progressively rising to Rs. 800 a month, as proposed by the Director of Public Instruction in Bombay. Hitherto the subject of hygiene has been taken up by the Professor of Surgery and Materia Medica, and lectures on Botany were delivered by the Professor of Medical Jurisprudence and Comparative Anatomy in that college, for which duties no additional allowances were granted to those officers. The Governor-general in Council has complied with the recommendation.—Indian Daily News.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers have obtained leave of absence:—Mr. A. A. Borradaile, Acting Collector of Ahmedabad, for three months from or after the 1st of August, 1868. E Brigade Royal Horse Artillery: Lieutenant Goodeve, from May 26 to Nov. 26, m.c.; Assistant-Surgeon J. Mackey, from May 21 to September 27, m.c. 18th Brigade Royal Artillery: Second Captain Candy, from May 26 to November 26, m.c. 21st Brigade Royal Artillery: Captain J. R. Arthur, Collector and Magistrate of Sattara, for three months from or after the 28th of September, 1868.

REOPENING OF THE BHOORE GHAUT INCLINE.—On June 30th the Bhoore Ghaut Railway line was reopened in sound and perfect condition. The new girder viaduct across the Mhow-ke-Mulla gorge was examined and effectually tested in the presence of the agent of the G. I. P. Railway, General Rivers; the Government Consulting Engineer, Captain J. H. White; Mr. W. Knox, the traffic manager; the Chief Engineers of the G. I. P., Messrs. Rushton and Brereton, with whom were most of the engineering staff and other officers of the railway. The testing was carried on to such an extent that the most timid passenger may now feel more secure than ever before. Seven locomotives in one train were run across several times, as well as backwards and forwards on the viaduct. This ponderous train—comprising an aggregate weight nearly twice that of the heaviest train ever allowed to travel on the ghaut incline—only produced a deflection of one inch and five-eighths. This result was regarded as highly satisfactory by all the professional men present; and when we consider that it is nineteen days short of a year since the fall of the masonry viaduct, the celerity with which this substantial work has been carried out reflects great credit on all concerned.—Times of India.

FURLOUGHS.—The following furloughs were granted in June last:—Captain Ormsby, 2nd Dragoon Guards, from Aug. 3 to Dec. 3, in extension, to remain in England; Captain Stone, 21st Brigade R.A., from date of embarkation, to England, overland, to appear before a medical board; Lieutenant Squirrel, 2nd Foot, to proceed to England by the overland route, for the purpose of appearing before a medical board; Lieutenant Rudkin, 85th Foot, to proceed to England by the overland route, for the purpose of appearing before a medical board. Fagan, 2nd Regiment Light Cavalry, from June 20 to July 19, to proceed to Bombay, on medical certificate, preparatory to obtaining a final certificate to Europe. Surgeon H. E. Muter, of the Bombay Staff Corps, for twenty months; Conductor W. Forrestell, of the Ordnance Department, for eighteen months; Lieutenant A. C. B. Charge.—With conduct unbecoming an officer, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, at Peshawur, on the 8th March, been drunk in his quarters when officially visited by the adjutant and another officer of the regt. by order of the commanding officer.

Finding.—Guilty of the charge preferred against him.

Sentence.—To be reprimanded in such manner as H.E. the C. in C. may be pleased to direct.

(Signed)

P. W. MACMAHON, Colonel,
36th Regt., President.

Approved and Confirmed.

The prisoner has been found guilty of being drunk in his quarters. It appears from the evidence that he had been reported absent from a Court of Inquiry, which led to his being officially visited by order of his commanding officer. A charge was not preferred against the prisoner for his omission of duty, because of the absence of certain evidence.

The prisoner is hereby reprimanded, in accordance with the sentence of the Court, and is seriously warned of the danger of a course of conduct which has compelled the C. in C. to subject him to the ordeal of a Court-martial.

(Signed)

W. R. MANSFIELD, General,
Head-quarters, Simla, June 13. Commander-in-Chief in India.

THE AGRA AND MASTERMAN'S BANK.—The creditors of the Agra and Masterman's Bank (in liquidation) have conveyed to the board of directors of the resuscitated Agra Bank, and especially to Mr. James Thomson, the manager, their appreciation of the skill and promptitude by which engagements amounting to £7,000,000 have been honourably and punctually discharged.

PRINTERS' PENSION SOCIETY.—At the recent annual festival of the Printers' Pension, Almshouse, and Orphan Asylum Corporation it was announced that Sir Salar Jung, minister to his Highness the Nizam, had become an annual subscriber of £10 to its funds, and that a donation of £100 had been received from Mr. Cowasjee Jehanghir, of Bombay, as "a mark of his appreciation of the blessings resulting from a free press in India."

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The chartered troop-ship Cospatrick sailed from Gravesend on the 3rd inst. with troops (Royal Artillery, 5th Lancers, 11th Hussars, &c.) for Kurrachee, and the following officers: Captains Rapee and Macleay, Royal Artillery; Lieutenant Adams, Royal Artillery; Captain Chaffey, 5th Lancers; Lieutenant Black, 11th Hussars; and Assistant Surgeon Davie, M.D., Royal Artillery (in medical charge of the troops).

COMMERCIAL BANK CORPORATION OF INDIA AND THE EAST.—It is stated that, in consequence of the legal questions which have been raised by a few of the shareholders of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East, the Master of the Rolls has further postponed the payment of the second dividend, which was some time since declared, his Lordship being of opinion that the relative rights and liabilities of the Corporation and the old Commercial Bank of India should be defined by the Court before any further distribution of assets is made.

THE LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA.—At a meeting on the 30th ult. of the proprietors of the Land Mortgage Bank of India (Limited), the directors' report was adopted, after a long discussion, during which an amendment was put forward to the effect that the company should not become cultivators of the tea and coffee plantations which have passed into their possession. The chairman explained that the directors do not for one moment contemplate becoming tea cultivators, but that they simply took power to keep the estates in their present state of cultivation and prevent them running to jungle. He added that as soon as a fair offer can be obtained the estates will be sold.

HOME REWARDS FOR SERVICE.—The Army and Navy Gazette believes the list of rewards for service in Abyssinia will include the promotion of Sir Charles Staveley to the rank of major-general. Sir Charles stands thirty-sixth on the list of colonels, and, under ordinary circumstances, would not obtain this step for about two years. His advancement will not interfere with that of the other colonels, who will be taken up as vacancies occur on the general's list, Sir Charles Staveley being retained as a supernumerary major-general until the time at which his promotion by seniority would take place, when he will belong to the fixed establishment. It is understood that the command at Devonport will be given to Sir Charles Staveley.

TELEGRAPH TO INDIA COMPANY.—At a meeting of the Telegraph to India Company (Limited), Sir Macdonald Stephenson in the chair, a dividend for the half-year ended the 30th June last, at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, was agreed to unanimously. The chairman explained that the future prospects of the company depended upon the successful accomplishment of the Anglo-Indian Telegraph Company, which was still in abeyance. There could be no question of the Red Sea line being made, that when laid the company would derive the benefit of the satisfactory agreement entered into with that company, and that in the meantime all that could be done was to divide and be satisfied with the 3 per cent. earned by the lease of the company's Egyptian line.

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The directors of the Indo-European Telegraph Company (Limited) have issued their first report. It details the progress made in the work and the modifications made in the original scheme. The principal of these changes is in the Russian territory, the cable in the Black Sea being shortened by 100 miles, and 150 miles of land substituted for it. The directors, however, feel confident that the estimated cost will not be exceeded. The assistance rendered by the India-office in constructing a complete alternative line between Bushire and Kurrachee, and in erecting an additional wire between Teheran and Bushire, is also acknowledged. The first instalment under the contract with Messrs. Siemens has, it is stated, been paid to them, and, as the stores are now being shipped with every possible expedition, a call will shortly become necessary.

TROOPS FROM INDIA.—The Akbar, Captain Pyzzy, arrived at Spithead on July 29 from Madras, whence she sailed on March 9, calling at Point de Galle on the 18th to land a soldier with the small-pox, remaining till the 28th, no other cases having shown themselves. She has brought home Major Cunningham, 3rd Light Infantry (in command of troops); Lieutenant Cosling, Staff Corps; Lieutenant Adams, 2nd Battalion 24th Regiment; Dr. Smith, R.A. (in medical charge); 98 time-expired men and military invalids, 5 military convicts, 14 soldiers' wives, and 25 children. There were three births and seven deaths on the voyage, besides two men drowned. The Clyde, Captain Victor Howes, arrived at Spithead on July 29, from Calcutta, whence she sailed February 23. She has brought home a number of military invalids and time-expired men. They comprise—Major Dixon, Bengal Artillery (in command); Captain Duncan, 19th Hussars; Captain Lorne, 2nd Battalion 25th Regiment; Lieutenant Drake, 5th Bengal Cavalry; Staff Assistant Surgeon Hare, in medical charge; 177 military invalids and time-expired men, 9 soldiers' wives, and 20 children. Three deaths occurred on the voyage.

MALVERN COLLEGE.—The annual speech day was held on the 28th ult., and the Scholarship Examinations closed on the 30th. After a few introductory remarks by the head master, the Rev. Arthur Faber, M.A., announcing the increase of the school, the opening of a new boarding-house, the improvement of the playing-fields, &c., the following speeches were delivered:—J. P. Haworth, "Aurea Parthenope," original; H. Bowen, "The Isles of Greece," original; W. Wray, "Ex Vergili Æneide Sexta;" J. Curtis, "Speech on the Impeachment of Warren Hastings," Burke; E. N. Ingham, "Les Fourberies de Scapin," Moliere; C. R. Blathwayt, "The Isles of Greece," original; C. Charlton, R. M. Drew, G. Allen, G. H. White, "Andria," Terence. The speeches were delivered with much spirit, the comic scenes coming in for the loudest and most merited applause. The prizes were then distributed, the chief award being the Beauchamp prizes (classical), J. Haworth, E. N. Jones, H. Barnes; the Gully prizes (modern languages), J. Smith, S. Curtis, A. Robinson, H. Walker; the Council prizes to R. M. Drew, D. Faber, J. Perks, A. Hill, F. Pottes, J. Scholfield; Modern department prizes to J. Rogers, J. Staught, &c. The old but ever new, Domum was sung, and the school broke up for the summer holidays until the 17th September. The Scholarship Examinations were concluded on the 30th. The Bishop Philpott Scholarship was awarded to H. Barnes; the Council Exhibition to R. M. Drew and C. Lushington; and the Modern Exhibition to H. Bowen.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, July 31.—LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.—Mr. D. GRIFFITH asked the First Lord of the Treasury whether it would not be a desirable and appropriate completion of the provision made by Parliament for the support of the title conferred on Lord Napier of Magdala if a pension equivalent to that already granted by Parliament was made to extend to Lady Napier, in case of any unforeseen contingency?—MR. DISRAELI: The provision made by Parliament, upon the recommendation of her Majesty, for Lord Napier of Magdala, in consideration of his eminent services, was well considered by her Majesty's Government, and it was as complete as they thought under the circumstances that it should be. I therefore cannot hold out to my hon. friend that the matter will again be opened for consideration.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

PURE BLOOD.—As this vital fluid, when in a healthy state, sustains and renovates every part of the living system, so when it becomes impoverished or impaired it exerts a precisely contrary effect. It is abundantly manifest that any medicine which does not reach the circulation can never exterminate the disease; but any preparation capable of exercising a salutary influence over the blood must with it be carried to every living fibre of the frame. The lungs, heart, liver, kidneys and skin all receive benefit from its more wholesome condition. Holloway's purifying Pills operate directly, powerfully, and beneficially upon the mass of blood, whether venous or arterial. They strengthen the stomach, excite the liver and kidneys, expel disease, and prolong existence.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. . . . It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER as a BASIS for ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne: I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "103 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina: 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 14d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, July 14; Agra, July 11; Calcutta July 9; Madras, July 8.

The Bombay Bank Commission has got over three more sittings, or eight in all. Among the witnesses examined were several liquidators of the banks and companies which sprang up for a time in the general rage for speculation, and fell to pieces at once in the reaction caused by the sudden close of the American war. Their evidence goes to substantiate the worst charges brought against the managers of the Bank of Bombay. Dr. Diver, Mr. Watson, Mr. Best, Mr. Taylor, and others, all have to own that large sums ranging from two to ten lakhs of rupees were borrowed from the Bank for speculative purposes on no security but their own names, and that some at any rate of the lenders had a private interest in advancing the loans. Bank directors, hungering for shares in this or that bubble scheme, were themselves in fact the borrowers under borrowed names of the money they lent so readily in their own. Sir Charles Jackson has already screwed a good deal of important evidence out of the mouths of unwilling witnesses, such as Mr. Brown's partner, Mr. Best, or of forgetful ones like Dr. Diver, who at first could remember nothing about a little matter of five lakhs that happened "two or three years ago," and declared that he had since been "studiously trying to forget the past." But there are so many matters which need further exploring, that the Commission is likely to sit on in Bombay till September, after which it will resume its agreeable labours at home.

In quiet times scandal fills the place of politics or war, and poor Mr. Speke has to suffer that the public may be amused. Bengal has just had a very tarnished edition of Mr. Speke in the shape of a Captain Gould, of the 47th N.I., who had apparently got drowned by accident at Barrackpore, but has since turned up discredibly at Allahabad. The police who traced him thither have carried him down to Calcutta on divers charges, including one of forgery. He is also said to have made away with the moneys collected for the Barrackpore regatta. The Calcutta papers praise the police for their unusual energy and skill in running him down after a three days' start in his favour.

ANOTHER scandal has ended in the quashing of a criminal suit for adultery by the intervention of the officer who began it. Both plaintiff and defendant were officers in the Bengal army. The former however, in regard for the feelings of his wife and her family, declined to press the prosecution, and Mr. Justice Markby accordingly quashed the proceedings, after the prisoner had pleaded "Not guilty," and the prosecutor had confirmed in court the intention previously announced in his affidavit. As adultery in India is felony under the Penal Code, opinions differ as to the power of withdrawing a prosecution once begun. His lordship however ruled that in trials for adultery such a power was indicated by the Act of 1862; and so the peculiar virtue of a law which has no parallel in any other English-speaking community has still to be exemplified in the case of English offenders.

THE Imam of Muscat has to be helped out of a new difficulty, caused by the Persian monarch's cancelling his lease of the port of Bunder Abbas, which his forefathers have long held as a Persian fief. Colonel Pelly, the Resident in the Persian Gulf, has been instructed to mediate with the Shah for the Imam, who has yet another source of uneasiness; his uncle, the Sultan of Zanzibar, having prayed to be relieved of the subsidy he now pays under Lord Canning's arrangement to Muscat.

THE temporary cessation of the rains in Bombay and Calcutta has brought with it a spell of excessive heat. Bengal, says the Daily News, was in full enjoyment of its traditional vapour-bath. The reports from the flooded districts are generally cheering. The area of suffering is less than was at first supposed, and if no fresh floods occur, the measures of relief already taken will meet the probable distress. At Purneah however the indigo has been much damaged by a rise in the river Coosy. No detailed reports have yet come in from the tea-districts of Assam. Orissa however is likely to be a heavy sufferer from the late floods, which, according to Mr. Molony, the special famine commissioner, "will retard considerably her complete recovery from the effects of the famine." In those parts which have suffered worst, in Balasore namely and the districts of Bhuddruck and Jajipore, the greater part of the crops would have to be resown, and mention is made of heavy losses in cattle and houses, besides some loss of human life."

A WEATHER-PROPHET of some note takes dismal views of the future. He foretels the approach of a cyclone on the 17th July, which, sweeping up the Bay of Bengal, was to deal fresh havoc in Balasore and the districts south of Calcutta. We can only hope that the croakings of this raven will turn out as baseless as the prophecy of some great Mohammedan triumph which is to come off next year.

ACCORDING to the Friend of India the delay in promulgating the new Leave Rules for the Uncovenanted Service rests at the doors of the India-office. The Committee in India drew up for the higher ranks of the Uncovenanted a set of rules modelled after those of the Civil Service. But Sir S. Northcote, in view of filling up the service with natives, holds that the rules should be framed for native rather than English needs. To this the Friend strongly objects, because the higher posts are still held by Englishmen, and "the efficiency of the native gentleman is far more likely to be promoted by leave rules suited to Europeans, than by leave rules suited to his own special proclivities." The force of this reasoning lies beyond us. It would only be fair however to issue two sets of rules, one for the native, the other for the European.

DR. CAYLEY is an able and energetic servant of the State. But his energy sometimes outruns his discretion, to judge by the comments of the Indian Government on his proceedings in Ladakh. In playing the schoolmaster among the fiscal dolts whom the ruler of Cashmere employs in levying toll on the trade of that province, he seems to have forgotten that sternness and rough treatment are no longer permitted even to dominions of the highest repute. He has apparently been driving his pupils instead of leading them; a process hardly adapted to the subjects of a sovereign whose independence we acknowledged in an evil hour. His exertions for the improvement of our trade with Ladakh are "fully appreciated" by the Indian Government. But proper courtesy towards the native government with which he has to deal is enjoined upon him as an imperative duty. He "will doubtless see the necessity of using great moderation and caution in his dealings" with the Cashmere authorities. He is reminded of certain orders which were "so worded as to cause apprehension to the Maharajah's Government." Such proceedings must be carefully avoided in future. He will do well of course "to represent to the proper official whatever is noteworthy." But even this Must be done in judicious and considerate terms, avoiding anything that can unnecessarily give offence. Further, Dr. Cayley must see that his ministerial officers, moonshees, and others, do not insert in the vernacular proceedings any phrases that could in the least degree run counter to the principles above laid down. Lastly, while reporting officially to his own Government, Dr. Cayley, while fully stating what he believes to be the truth, must yet do so in guarded and well-weighed expressions, especially in matters reflecting at all on the native government. Some thought for these points is necessary, not only out of consideration to our native ally, but also for the success of the mission.

We fear that the subject of this little lecture will hardly be gratified at so full an "appreciation" of his services at Leh.

MAJOR-GENERAL HON. H. A. GORDON has at length been officially appointed Provisional Commander-in-Chief at Bombay, during Lord Napier's stay in England. The delay in making this appointment seems owing to the Home Government, which objected to paying General Gordon's increased salary out of the English Treasury, while the campaign was going on. Now however that the war is over, and Lord Napier virtually on leave, the objection no longer exists, and General Gordon will draw the allowance of an acting Commander-in-Chief.

THE Indian Government has just drawn up for the consideration of the minor governments a scheme for sending home yearly from India nine natives, six officially selected from the different provinces and three chosen by competition from the three presidency towns. Ample passage-money will be allowed the nine, and a yearly allowance of two or three hundred pounds each during their stay in this country will enable them to enter our universities, and qualify themselves for the Civil Service or any other profession they may prefer. We can hardly suppose that the minor Governments will offer any serious resistance to such a scheme for encouraging native talent.

ACCORDING to the latest news from Kabul, Shere Ali Khan's troops under Futtch Mohammad Khan have defeated those of the Ameer with some loss beyond Maimanah, and are again advancing on Kabul. Yakoob Khan, Shere Ali's son, at the head of one army was already close to Ghuznee. The Ameer Azim Khan is reported to have set out from his capital on the 25th June to venture a last stroke for his crown before Ghuznee. About Russian progress in Bokhara there is nothing new to say, except that, after some more fighting around Samarkand, a new treaty has been made with the Khan of Bokhara, which enables the Russians to build cantonments in any part of the Khanate they please. In other words Bokhara like Khiva has lost its independence.

MR. GORDON, who took Captain Williams's place in the Bhamo expedition, left Mandalay for Bhamo on the 16th June, in company with the private secretary to the King of Burmah.

An envoy from that monarch has been despatched to Colonel Fytche, partly to claim the surrender of a defaulting native merchant who had made off; it seems, with some of his Majesty's jewels; and partly to vindicate his own conduct in the matter of Captain Sladen's misadventures on the road to Bhamo. Among other tokens of sympathy he had sent that officer £1,000, with strict orders that the Governor of Bhamo should ensure the safe arrival of the money under pain of death. Captain Sladen left Pongsee on the 3rd June for Momein.

A CORRESPONDENT complains of the award of so pitiful a pension as half-a-crown a-day to Lieutenant Maling, whose "father and grandfather served the Government of India." We cannot see what that has to do with the question. Lieutenant Maling has served about four years, including two lost through ill-health. He is placed according to rule on a pension of £54 a-year; and it is not unlikely that the Government will go to yet greater cost on his behalf. But his claims on his employers are no stronger than those of many others who have to take what they can get, and remember that they might have fared worse.

A "SUFFERER'S" letter is to our minds another case of groundless grievance. Luck is everything in this world, and the thirty-five colonels whom Sir C. Staveley supersedes must hope that their turn of luck may come next, and that in like circumstances they could do as well as Sir C. Staveley.

Is Lord Mayo to be the next Governor-general of India? That is a question which most of the London journals regard as already answered. The assertion made by journals that ought to know something of Ministerial purposes has never yet been contradicted; and silence accordingly is supposed in this case to mean assent. But then comes the question which is on everybody's lips: why is Lord Mayo to be the next Governor-general? And nobody, it seems, can give a satisfactory reply. It is a very nice appointment, no doubt, for a nobleman of moderate means and strong personal or political claims on the dispensing power. But we have been taught of late years to look for some higher qualification for such a post than poverty or party needs. What sort of fitness has Lord Mayo ever shown for a place which now more than ever should be filled by a statesman of tried ability? Is there any reason to suppose, for instance, that he is likely to make half so good a viceroy as Sir S. Northcote or Lord Stanley, to say nothing of half-a-dozen old Indians worthy in all respects to succeed Sir John Lawrence? Nobody can tell. For all we know Lord Mayo may turn out a Wellesley or a Dalhousie, or he may at least attain the respectable level of Lord Canning. We do not forget too that Lord Canning himself evoked like expressions of wonder at his appointment. But then he was not quite so little known to fame, and people were ready to take him on trial for his father's sake. Besides, those were the days before the flood, and in view of Sir J. Lawrence one naturally looked for some successor of considerable mark. Public opinion had come to acquiesce in Sir S. Northcote; but who on earth is Lord Mayo that he should get the start of the Indian Minister? A strong man who can hold his own against both the local governments and the home authorities is more than ever needed for the viceregal throne, unless we are prepared to see India governed directly from this country. Such an issue may be on the cards; but how long would India then remain in our keeping?

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

NINE YEARS ON THE PUNJAB FRONTIER.

It is the privilege of Britons, even of British officers, to grumble, and Sir Sydney Cotton has lately been doing a little in that old line. But his murmuring is mild indeed, compared for instance with the lusty tones of a Napier; and few deserving old soldiers have had better cause to grumble than the officer who commanded the Peshawar Division during the dark days of 1857. After forty years of Indian service, including nine of most important service on the North-West Frontier, General Cotton seems from the volume before us to have been much less fortunate in the matter of rewards for work done than many a comrade who had fewer claims thereto.* In spite of the choicest testimonials from three Governors-general, a Commander-in-Chief or two, and others of less rank, his want of interest at the Horse-guards or the War-office appears to have given him leisure enough to prepare this simple if not very concise record of what happened under his command between the years 1854 and 1863.

Of all that relates to his own doings the author writes soberly, without any attempt at literary style. His pen is not that of a Caesar or a Napier, but it does its duty well enough to be understood; and there is little of the Napierian vanity in his quiet references to what "the author" said or did. The effect would have been less awkward if he had spoken throughout in the first person; but then ill-natured people might have taxed him with want of modesty. His first lesson in hill-warfare was gained in the Bori Valley, near Kohat, under a commander who got his troops into a kind of trap whence money alone could extricate them. Ignorance of Afreedie ways led the author himself into a slight blunder, soon retrieved, and frankly acknowledged. But his skill in the handling of his regiment was honourably mentioned in General Orders, and he gleaned some useful hints for his guidance in subsequent campaigns. His book indeed bristles with "lessons" and "solemn warnings," which others were sometimes less ready than himself to turn to account. Some of these lessons he was right enough in preaching. His soldierly instincts led him to see the folly of burning Afreedie and Yusufzai villages, instead of taking military precautions against the outrages which provoked so stern a punishment. His common sense told him that Peshawar was unhealthy, let flying visitors, medical and military, say what they pleased. To an experienced officer all political excuses for the want of an outpost at Jumrood would naturally seem absurd. There is something also to say for Sir Sydney's preference of temporary to permanent barracks in newly-conquered territories like the Punjab. Large sums of money have been rashly spent on barracks in cantonments hastily or unwisely selected, on the plea that "pukka" buildings are cheapest in the long run; and the result is that troops continue, for the sake of an illusive economy, to be kept in stations which ought long since to have been abandoned.

Nowshera, for instance, is "not only unhealthy, but positively dangerous," being liable to frequent floods. Meeanmeer is condemned as having been "hastily fixed upon by a hasty commander-in-chief." Rawal-Pindi, though healthy, is too far away from Peshawar; and Peshawar itself, besides being "one of the most unhealthy places in the world," is so placed in the midst of enemies as to offer the worst possible station for a large body of troops. Time works wonders however, and the author "has reason to believe" that a couple of thousand men in a strong intrenchment will soon be all that remain of the overgrown Peshawar garrison; the bulk of the frontier force being destined to occupy the healthy Sind-Sagur district on the left bank of the Indus. Such an arrangement would at least look like recognising the fact that Peshawar is only a frontier outpost, not a vital point in our true line of defence along the Indus.

Sir Sydney has many other shrewd notions to urge, such as the establishing of one command for all troops on the North-West Frontier, the maintenance of a column always ready to march anywhere at shortest notice, the concentration of large bodies of native and British troops in healthy and central spots, and the assembling of camps of exercise for the purpose of going through mimic campaigns. But when he declares war against the civil power in India and re-echoes Sir C. Napier's denunciations of "political" officers, one feels that professional prejudice carries him a little too far. A military government by all means along the Afghan frontier, with Sir S. Cotton empowered to deal as he likes with those untamed rascals in the neighbouring hills. We have little doubt that such a governor, armed with such powers, would have made an excellent Warden of the Marches, keeping the peace with a strong hand, but saving his troops all possible calls on their courage and endurance. He would for one thing have prevented many a border quarrel by distributing among the hill-men bits of cultivable land in the neighbouring plains. In Sindh, again, a military government was worked to good purpose for a time under Sir Charles Napier. But a system suited to a turbulent frontier, or to a province unsettled by civil warfare and past misrule, would be dangerously inapplicable to countries which have long known the blessings of civil government. To bring all India back under military rule would be carrying out with a vengeance the old Greek cobbler's theory of "Nothing like Leather." Fancy our holding Bengal or the North-West Provinces by such a tenure! But there is no need to discuss a question practically settled for us a century ago. No English statesman would now dream of applying Sir Sydney's remedy to any part of law-enjoying Hindostan.

On the other question, that of military civilians, we think the author is hardly more reasonable. His professional ardour cannot brook the thought of submission to a civil superior of low military rank. He has all Napier's hatred of a "political." He seems to regret that such able officers as Edwardes and Nicholson should have lowered themselves by exchanging the sword for the pen. We should like however to know where such men would have been now, had they never done what he pities them for doing. An officer in command of a regiment or even of a company may be discharging honourable service; but how much wider a field opens itself to his just ambition in the prospect of ruling a whole district or civilising a new-won province? How much does our Indian Empire not owe to politicals like Nicholson and Edwardes, men who have been equally at home in commanding an army and governing a people? Sir Sydney Cotton himself bears willing witness to the help afforded him in trying times by the officers abovenamed. In his own case there might be some grounds for grumbling at a system which placed a young officer over an old one's head; but the system itself has worked on the whole with marked success; has given talent and ambition a fair chance of carving their way upwards in a service where promotion by seniority was the rule; and has offered a decent compromise between military government pure and simple and civil government pure and complex. It is a system of course not meant to last, a halting-place on the road to governments of a higher because more elaborate type. But it does very well for an unsettled or semi-barbarous country, and it certainly wars against that principle of seniority which the author himself so frequently derides.

It is however on his conduct during the year of mutiny that Sir Sydney Cotton may rest the chief weight of his claims to public remembrance. He was foremost in protesting against the very notion of a retreat from the valley of Peshawar across the Indus, as first broached by the head of the Punjab Government. Such a step, taken at such a time, he thought, would have let loose an overwhelming swarm of foes on the handful of Englishmen who barred the road from Peshawar to Delhi. Not one European would have been left in Upper India. Backed by Nicholson, Edwardes, and James, General Cotton gained his point, and Peshawar was not transferred to the care of Dost Mohammed. A few weeks earlier he had averted another great disaster by the skill with which he had planned the disarming of native troops in Peshawar, and by his stern suppression of incipient mutiny elsewhere. The bold front shown to the danger by himself and his brave colleagues overawed the rebellious, confirmed the wavering, and gave fresh heart to the loyal. Four thousand sepoys were disarmed in one morning. A terrible example was made of captured deserters. Hoti Murdan was saved by a timely march of European soldiers mounted on elephants from Peshawar; and the movable column was soon organised which Nicholson brought down to Delhi, after it had trampled out the last embers of revolt in the Punjab. To Sir S. Cotton's "calm decision," as Sir Hugh Rose styled it, may chiefly be ascribed the fact that, throughout this anxious period, not one European, man, woman, or child, in his district fell by the hands of the mutineers, except in fair fight.

The five years of his command over, Sir S. Cotton had to leave the frontier in 1862, just when his special experience would have served the Government to some purpose in the crisis of the Umballa campaign. There was surely no sufficient reason for enforcing the five years' rule against so deserving an officer. Few men of equal deserts have been put off with so scant an acknowledgment. With such a claimant in the field how is it that high commands, like that of the Madras army, have been given away to officers of whom nobody ever heard before their promotion? The home authorities could answer this question if they would.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I am thankful to see that the press is commencing once more to comment in indignant terms upon the attempt which has been lately made to stifle the cries and to burke the claims of Indian officers for the compensation which is due to them for the value of their commission—value which they lost solely because the army of India was reorganised for the sake of State convenience.

The military servants of Great Britain holding commissions have ever been held to be gentlemen, and have a prescriptive right to be treated as such. The officers of the old army of India were admittedly tried and faithful servants of the State, and as such are entitled to the generous consideration of their government.

"Gentlemanlike treatment" and "generous consideration!"—good old phrases forsooth, and not I trust yet effaced from our English (Government) vocabulary!

And yet see, Sir, how the case now stands with us. Here we are, the remnants of that army whose traditions date from the days of Clive, turned adrift upon the world, with the loss of the little capital to which we should have been entitled had the Government not abolished our regiments as they existed before the mutiny. I say, not that such a measure on the part of the Government was not a necessity, but I do aver that it was incumbent upon them to see that their officers were no losers by it.

And how have our remonstrances been met? Not by a generous acquiescence in their justice, and in speedy measures for their redress, as first proposed by Lord Salisbury in the House of Commons—not in admitting in principle the simple axiom that they were bound to make good all losses their servants had incurred, through the necessary workings of Government reform—nor, on the other hand, by an honest refusal to entertain them, but by the appointment of a commission so hampered with pettifogging restrictions and intricate instructions that after a period of two years the whole affair has resulted in an absolute fiasco.

Who, I ask, is satisfied? Hardly the fifty or more officers of the Bengal army whose claims are rejected "because of the accelerated promotion they have received"—hardly the recipients of the scores of pounds, whose claims amount to hundreds and thousands.

Is Government satisfied with the consciousness that some thousands of pounds are saved to the Indian Exchequer by mulcting that amount from their officers' claims? and that in consequence of this treatment an Indian officer without a grievance is almost as scarce as a dodo? Is it satisfied to see the Indian press teeming with letters from parties whose sense of justice is equally wounded with their pockets?

And then think of the widows and orphans of those officers now gone to their long account. Is Government and the country satisfied that those helpless ones should suffer a diminution of their means, because their husbands or fathers were unable upon a dry point of law to prove the actual obligation? If these things be so, we do indeed need a reformed Parliament, but I for one cannot believe that the present Secretary of State for India, who has so especial a reputation for straightforward dealing, will persist in refusing to amend the flagrant wrong to which you, Sir, in common with many other journals, both English and Indian, are calling and have persistently called attention.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

A BRITISH OFFICER.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your issue of the 6th August, 1868, you have published, at page 784, under the head "Home Rewards for Services," an article taken from the Army and Navy Gazette on the subject of the intended promotion to the rank of Major-general of Sir Charles Staveley, who has been employed in Abyssinia.

The Army and Navy Gazette has it that Sir Charles Staveley's advancement will not interfere with that of the thirty-five colonels who are now on the list above him.

Being deeply interested, I beg to put you in possession of a letter of mine, addressed to the Editor Army and Navy Gazette, which I very earnestly request you to publish at your earliest convenience.—Yours obediently,

A SUFFERER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—In your great anxiety for fair dealing in the army, you have explained at page 489 of your issue of the 1st August that Sir Charles Staveley's promotion to the rank of Major-general will not interfere with the promotion of the thirty-five colonels who, at present, stand on the list above him; but you have omitted to mention that when the time arrives for his being placed on the general list of major-generals, he will be put in above the thirty-five honest men who he is now about to supersede, and will get his regiment two years or so sooner than he otherwise would have done, thereby taking the bread, for the time being, out of the mouth of another man, who will, by the process, pay the said Sir Charles Staveley for his services in Abyssinia.

The colonelcy of a regiment is simply a pension awarded to general officers in succession, as vacancies occur. Then why should not the Government pay Sir Charles Staveley's pension, instead of making another officer pay it? This is only the pecuniary part of the transaction. As regards army rank Sir Charles Staveley will always take the lead of these thirty-five colonels when he comes in contact with them on duty or in society.

This proposed advancement will therefore interfere with that of the other colonels in every respect, although you have stated that it will not; and now that this has been clearly explained to you, you are in honesty bound to correct the erroneous statement you have sent forth.

It may be fairly asked, then, what have these thirty-five colonels done to cause them to be so degraded? Until it be proved to the contrary, they must all be considered as good officers as Sir Charles Staveley. Their relative merits as officers have not been tested. There has been no competition, and therefore no superiority can be claimed for Sir Charles Staveley, and his promotion as a reward for services is nothing more or less than a punishment inflicted on men who have done nothing whatever to deserve it.—Yours obediently,

A SUFFERER.

OUR TRADE WITH CENTRAL ASIA.

The Friend of India remarks that within the last three years a new empire has been founded by Yakoub Kushbegi at Yarkand; and for ought we know the empire of the Kushbegi may hold the same prominent position in another generation which the empire of Runjeet Sing maintained half a century ago. Yarkand is 350 miles from Leh, and until recent events the provinces in that quarter were ruled by opium-eating Chinese. But a new Mussulman power has now risen in the East, and established an empire which may serve to counterbalance the loss of Bokhara; the Chinese have been driven out, and the opium trade is consequently at a standstill. The new kingdom comprises 30,000 square miles, and contains more than a dozen large and important towns. Moreover, the city of Yarkand is the chief emporium of trade to the north of the Himalayas; caravans of merchants meet there from all the surrounding cities and countries, as well as from such distant places as Badakshan, Bokhara, and the Russian provinces. Formerly Chinese merchants flocked to Yarkand, but since the establishment of the Mussulman empire by Yakoub Kushbegi, all communication with China proper has been cut off. According to Dr. Cayley, the demand in all these countries for British and Indian products and manufactures is enormous; and they can supply in return shawls, wool, silk, bhang, gold and silver, precious stones, and many other articles to an extent which is almost unlimited. Indeed, the trade in Central Asia seems to have been for some time leaking out in a variety of ways, notwithstanding the restrictions which have been laid upon it by the Maharajah of Cashmere; and not only are the more adventurous merchants pushing in all directions with their felts, silks, carpets, and leather, but every pilgrim and traveller carries turquoises, gold dust, silver ingots, and other articles of value, which he sells or barter on his way to pay the customs duties and road expenses.

THE MAHARAJAHS OF BOMBAY.

Native Opinion remarks that the vile practices carried on by these sensual priests, under the name of Ras Mandalis, are now performed either in secret or at a distance from the glare of Bombay criticism. It is much to be regretted that a superstition which might be put down by a spirited and active opposition, or even laughed to scorn in tracts, speeches or public gatherings, at least so far as to shame the Maharajahs and their votaries into a respect for decency, flourishes among us as impudently as ever, and that no association has been formed to combat it. In lieu of seeing friends of enlightenment and morality grappling with the monster in the vernaculars, and exposing the vices of misguided and misleading Vallubbacharyas, we now and then peruse a letter indited by some indignant friend of morality in the correspondence columns of some English journal, which proceeding is about as efficacious as pouring water over an inverted pitcher.

UNEVENHANDED JUSTICE.

The Chundrika of April 6th says it is a matter of great regret that Government is not impartial to Europeans and natives alike. Every year new barracks and hospitals for European soldiers are built, but for native soldiers there is scarcely anything but the tent. In the frightful hot weather last year a body of Sikh soldiers were transferred to Bunnoo, and another body from Bunnoo to Kohat; had they been European soldiers they would never have had to travel at such a time. If a stranger coming to Calcutta enters the Bengali quarter of the town after going about in Chowringhee he will confess to there being a contrast like that between heaven and hell. The nightly beauty of the rows of lamps, the convenience of passengers from the lavish watering of the streets and the cleanliness of the drains and roads of the European quarter are not seen in the dreams of the men of the Bengali quarter. In many parts of the latter the lamps broken in the last cyclone are in the same state. He inserts a letter from someone that was caught in a thunder-storm one night in Calcutta and could not read the sign boards at the heads of lanes for want of lights. The editor says that in nearly everything is seen this want of respect for the Bengali quarter manifested by the British Government. He complains that when the European portion of the town is watered by carts the watering of the Bengali portion is entrusted to bhistees, and there is no inspection as to whether these men do their duty. Cornwallis-street is not sufficiently watered, and he asks if Government do not regard the many rich people who pass along that street as their subjects.

THE INDIAN ARMY.

The Madras Times asks if nothing can be done to lessen our present necessarily blind reliance upon the protection of European troops? Have we not a sufficient number of native soldiers, of every Indian race, caste, and creed, on whom to rely in a crisis? The question is not easy to answer in the teeth of a Government which, by its acts, positively asserts that our dependence must rest upon the maintenance in India of a vast European army! Doubtless, to all appearance, we have a large and efficient native force, but do we place sufficient confidence in it, to enable us to send 30,000 of our European troops to England to-morrow, upon an urgent necessity? We hardly think so, and therefore we maintain that it behoves our Government, now, and at once, while the favourable opportunity remains to us, to organise our native levies upon a system which will admit of the maintenance of our power in India with a reduced European force. So long as our present vast European army is absolutely necessary for the protection of India, so long are we unsafe; it is a false policy to wait until the occasion shall arise to make the best of the native troops at our command. We think these latter have been hardly dealt with since the mutiny in 1857. It is needless to disguise the fact that we have come to regard them as military police rather than as military troops, and that we expect them to act rather as our allies than as our defenders. The circumstance of a few "crack" native regiments being sent to Abyssinia, and justly praised there, does not weaken our argument in any degree. We do not deny that the Indian native regiments are excellent on foreign service; we merely inquire, are they supposed by the public or the Government to be capable of garrisoning India in circumstances of difficulty and danger with the assistance of 30,000 European troops? If the answer is in the negative, we repeat that the sooner they are made sufficiently efficient to do so the better for us all in England and India. Immediately after the Indian mutiny Lord Halifax had an excellent opportunity of raising a compact native force worthy of her Majesty's service. That this opportunity was not turned to the public advantage is now generally regretted in India, but, although it is useless to bemoan the past and its blunders as inevitable, it by no means follows that we are to rest contented with Lord Halifax's failures until such failures become actively prejudicial to our best interests. We believe that there is but one remedy for the evil, and but one hope for the future, and they are embraced in the immediate institution of a Parliamentary inquiry into the present state of the Indian native army—whether, in brief, it is now a force we can depend upon, as in days gone by, or simply an army which it requires an extraordinary number of European troops to control, and to make useful.

SALARIES.

The Englishman deprecates the notion that a man's necessities are synonymous with his present expenditure. It is beyond question that, ceteris paribus, the present wants of a native are much less expensive than those of a respectable European. He can live without discomfort or loss of dignity in a less expensive house; his food is much simpler and less expensive, and so is his clothing; indeed, if on obtaining a moderate salary he at once begins to support a proportionate number of poor relatives, it is because a lift in the world does not entail on him any great change in his own mode of life, as far as personal expenditure is concerned, from that followed by those poor relatives themselves. An Englishman admitted into Government employ is not generally raised so much above his relatives as to render it either possible or necessary for him to maintain a large number of them. In one sense, in fact, the course adopted by the native is a very good proof that he really needs less pay than a European. The writer in the Bombay Gazette remarks that if the native has his poor relatives to keep, the European has his churches, his poor friends, his local charities, and the like to subscribe to. This however is hardly to the purpose, for the native may plead his Brahmans and his unrelated poor with as much justice as Europeans, if not more. The most important difference between the native and the European is however, as the Bombay Gazette justly remarks, one which Sir Bartle Frere has entirely omitted to take into consideration. The native is serving in his own country—the European is serving thousands of miles away from it; the native is serving in a congenial climate—the European in one which slowly undermines his health; the native keeps his family at home, and gets his children educated mainly at the expense of Government, or, if at his own expense, for a mere trifle; the European has to spend a large portion of his pay in sending his family to England, and in educating his children in establishments where each child costs as much as ten children cost a native. The European has besides to lay by against the necessity of change of air to be sought afar, and ultimately of early retirement to a climate which shall enable him to stave off for a while premature death. A very fair criterion of how far Government underpays natives, as compared with Europeans, may be gained by looking at what natives pay natives. Compare, for instance, the salary of a competent and a thoroughly honest clerk in any native banking-house in the Burra Bazaar, with that paid an assistant in a European bank or mercantile house; the difference will be found to be vastly greater than that between the pay of native and European Government servants performing the same work.

LATEST FROM CABUL.—The Englishman publishes the following from Cabul:—June 21.—Several letters have arrived from the agents and traders at Samarcand and Bokhara. At the breaking out of the late disturbances the people of Samarcand and Bokhara were greatly alarmed, and anticipated nothing less than the destruction of these cities; they have however since been greatly reassured by the conduct of the Russians after the battle. As soon as the fight was over the Russians collected all the arms thrown away by the jihadis in their flight, and attended most carefully to the wounded; from the spoils they had taken they made each man a present at the time they sent him to his own home. The Russian forces are distributed over the country; one detachment is encamped at a distance of eighteen coss from Samarcand on the north, and another force is stationed at a distance of sixty coss, and a third at twenty-five coss. There are nearly forty regiments of Russians located at two points between Samarcand and Bokhara. There were also large reserves at Khodgend and at Mouzah Ush-dur Khan. At Khokand and at Ak Musjid there are also troops, but in less numbers. All these places are well provided with stores and provisions for war. The hot season has set in, and the troops are therefore not moved about. The Russians have no fear now of any opposition that may be made them in Turkistan, and show no signs of pushing their conquests further. The Ameer of Bokhara is entirely won over to their side. —June 23.—It is again reported that a treaty exists between the Russians and Ameer Shere Ali; the conditions are now, however, talked of. The principal of them are that the Russians will acknowledge Shere Ali as absolute lord of Khorassan. The friends of one party are to be considered the friends of the other, and the enemies, enemies. The Russians are to have permission to place establishments in any of the cities subject to the Ameer, whenever they may please to do so. The Ameer will rule under their protection, but they are not to interfere in any way with the actual government of the country. Should Peshawur ever be recovered from the English it is to belong to Afghanistan, but all other conquests are to belong to Russia. These things are now openly talked of. I know they are laughed at by the English, but that does not alter the fact that the terms of the treaty as given above are openly discussed by men of all parties at Cabul.

YOUNG BENGAL.—The following letter appeared in the Delhi Gazette:—"To His Honor the Maharaja of ——— Honored Sir,—With deep sentiments of profound respect I humbly beg to refer before your honor these few lines of my desideratum, on a hope to be perused before your kingly throne. The sentiment is this that I beg earnestly to solicit for the room of clerkship in your monarchical court. In regarding my qualifications and myself, I humbly crave to inform, that I am a native of Calcutta and I was educated there in a Government school, and up to this time my service under different British officers in Bengal and upper India has become nearly ten years. A few days ago, from the 22nd of last month I have taken my freedom from a service of the Delhi railway office. In order for the multiplicity of the works than the fees. Now I come up to see the modern battle field of the solar race, (Pandoos and Kooloos) and after taking a view of the above sanctimonious place, I am come up here to see my maternal uncle, who serves in the head office of the D. R. C. I am to remain here some fifteen days more and then I shall go back to my destination, and if so the implorer for the post humbly craves to be favoured with an answer whether he or the another person should be choosed for the regal service.—I beg to be, Honored Sir, your Honor's most obedient and humble servant ———. Umballa, April 27, 1867, Sudder Bazar."

THE COMMISSION OF THE PEACE.—A Commission of the Peace was issued from the High Court of Judicature in Bengal on the 23rd of June directed to Colonel Showers, Officiating Political Agent, Gwalior. A Supplementary Commission of the Peace has been issued by the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, directed to the undermentioned gentlemen:—Meerut—Captain Wheeler, Messrs. Robinson and Blackett. Bareilly—Messrs. Moule and Porter. Allahabad—Captain Dalmahoy, Messrs. Low, Martin, Rawlins, and Carter. Benares—Mr. Mulock. Jhansi—Mr. James.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, June 30.—It is not at all certain that what is called the branch of the Bank of Bengal at Bombay will be summarily shut up. The state of the case as between the Madras memorialists and the Bank there is no necessity for enlightening you concerning; Mr. Dickson's letter will have done that. Both letter and memorial have been referred to the Bombay Government for report, and on that report much will depend. There need however be no fear that the Bank of Bengal will not have full justice done it. Indeed, your humble correspondent is half inclined to think that the Government of India, in the Financial Department, would gladly avail itself of anything like a just pretext for ordering that the branch or agency at Bombay shall continue. It is held to be quite certain that the agency has not done the business of a branch by receiving deposits from constituents, although pressed to do so on several occasions. There is just now a great amount of local jealousy between Bombay and Calcutta, and the Finance Minister has to be very careful not to fall into the hands of either party. Sheldon, the condemned artilleryman at Lucknow, has been hanged; he died most penitently, acknowledging the justice of his sentence and the unmitigated character of the murder he had committed. His offence, it appeared on his trial, was of the most unprovoked kind. It was natural to suppose that there was something peculiarly irritating in the manner of the unfortunate Corporal Ball, and in the order which he gave to Sheldon; but on the contrary turns out to have been the case. The corporal went to Sheldon, who was playing on the fiddle, and otherwise breaking the quiet of the barracks after hours, and said to him—"You know it is after hours, and that you cannot be permitted to disturb the peace of the barracks; come, like a good fellow, go to your rest, and let us have no more of it;" or words to the same effect, uttered in a conciliatory rather than an irritating manner; Sheldon, therefore, notwithstanding his good character, which was beyond question, must have been a man of a temper of the most dangerous kind. The Abyssinian heroes are tumbling in from the campaign; Brigadier Stewart has been here for some days, and will leave within two days for his command at Peshawur. Captain Kennedy, Aide-de-Camp to the Viceroy, is either on the point of leaving Calcutta or is now on the road hither. Many matters of interest are oozing out about the Abyssinian campaign; Zoulia is said to have been, throughout the campaign, one of the most uncomfortable places an old Indian could have been ordered to. Its climate is wretched—one of opposite extremes within the twenty-four hours—and its bazaar contained as precious a lot of adventurous individuals as ever gave military authorities the trouble of keeping them in order. There were about a thousand Europeans, including a number of women, from every country bordering the Mediterranean, housed, huddled, or tented, within its precincts. These were all of the camp-follower grade, and when to their numbers are added those of the host of the Asiatics and Egyptians of the same class, and the men on shore on leave from the hundreds of ships in the Bay, an idea may be formed of the populousness and rowdy propensities of the place. The strictest order was however enforced; the seamen were only permitted leave to come on shore on Sundays, and then they did come in thousands. Much to their disgust, however, Brigadier Stewart would not permit the sale of grog, or wine, beer, or spirits of any kind on that day, and the Jacks, contrary to their inclination, had to return on board as sober as judges, and not in half as good humour as judicials generally seem to be.—Indian Daily News Correspondent.

DEHRA DOON, July 7.—You will be sorry to learn that Mr. Edward Gustavus Fraser, the late well-known Civil Judge of Lucknow, is no more; he breathed his last at Landour on the 5th instant, and yesterday evening his remains were interred in our station burial-ground. Some months ago, in prospect of the event that has now taken place, he requested that, on his decease, his body should be laid side by side with that of the late Rev. R. S. Fullerton, American missionary, late of the Loodiana Mission; he had formed a strong attachment to this missionary friend years ago at Agra, and this touching tribute of his undying regard for him has been paid with a scrupulous regard to his last wishes. Thus has passed away from our midst a man who for the last quarter of a century has held a prominent position in the Anglo-Indian Society of these provinces. His talents, his industry, his varied and extensive knowledge, his philanthropy, and his genuine Christian principle commanded the respect of all who knew him. The particular service to which he belonged owes him much. No man of his time did more to elevate and improve the Uncovenanted Civil Service than he; he was its recognised head and its chiefest ornament. Step by step he rose to a rank that had never been before attained by any of his predecessors, and it is pretty well known that had he lived a few years longer still greater elevation awaited him. On his retirement from the service, some months ago, he was warmly recommended for the highest rate of pension ever awarded, even to "extraordinary merit." This estimate of his character as a public servant of Government, by his immediate superiors, is borne out by the opinion of all who knew him. But it was as a Christian philanthropist that Mr. Fraser's character shone brightest; in the church, in the Sunday-school, in the sick chamber, among the dwellings of the poor, and wherever sympathy was needed, or the liberal hand could help, there was he to be found. Another old resident of the Doon has also been taken from amongst us; I refer to Major Stevens, of the retired list; he died at Mussoorie on Saturday. Thus far there is no appearance of the regular rains; it is to be hoped that W.'s prognostications may prove true this time and that we may have rain in abundance ere many days shall have passed away.

NYNCE TAL, July 6.—It seems that this station, which has hitherto been so notorious for not having even a single school in or near it, is now about to abound in them, so much so indeed that it is yet a matter of doubt as to whether some of the proprietors may not have to employ "touters." Possibly we may some day hear of the "Nynce Tal University." Meanwhile, however, it is a fact that the establishment of another school is really in actual progress. The principal agitators in the scheme, which is intended to benefit the "lower ten thousand," are the Civil Surgeon, Dr. Condon, and Col. Greathed. Some subscriptions towards the establishment of the school have, I hear, been raised, and the terms for the admission of pupils are to be such as to meet the means of those who cannot or will not pay much. Mr. Robert Read has, I hear, very kindly aided the project by giving up a large house in the most central part of the station, rent free. A Sunday-school has also been established in which several ladies of the upper class employ themselves in teaching. We have had a lot of the most extraordinary fine weather lately; for upwards of a fortnight we have hardly had any rain at all. That most monstrous nuisance known as the "conservancy tax" is still flourishing here with unabated fury; visitors are most exorbitantly taxed at rates varying from four to ten rupees a month for having next to nothing done to their compounds.

LUCKNOW, July 7.—Still the rain keeps off; the slightest possible sprinkling fell yesterday in the early morning, and we consequently have a little more blue in the sky, but still the hot winds blow from the north-west, and we have neither sign nor symptom of the coming of the long wished for down-pour. This return of the hot weather, however, appears to have checked the approach of cholera, which a month ago, as in other years, was quietly stealing upon us from the eastern parts of the province; hitherto, in the city, there has been only one solitary case, while as many as seventy-three persons were last week carried off by fever; tatties have been made up afresh for the hospitals and barracks, and fewer complaints of sickness among the troops are now heard. On Saturday last a grand fête, given by the talookdars and native gentry of this city, in celebration of the Duke of Edinburgh's escape from assassination, came off with great éclat in the Kaiser Bagh; the illuminations, for which great preparations had been made, proved a failure, nine out of every ten of the lights having been extinguished by the strong wind blowing; the fireworks, however, were very good, perhaps better than usual, but the nautch may best be described as simple nonsense, and the buffoonery as objectionable; the arrangements made for refreshments were an improvement on former occasions, and the ices and champagne, being in quality everything that could be desired, deservedly received considerable attention. An immense number of natives congregated. The Chief Commissioner, with Mrs. Davies, was present, as also were the General, Colonel Barrow, and a large number of ladies and civil and military officers. The Rajah of Kupurthullah and Sir Maun Singh were the most prominent native celebrities; the brother of the ex-King of Oude, with about a dozen shahzadas, came out of their seclusion in honour of the occasion, and all classes of the native community appeared heartily to join in the demonstration.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MUNICIPAL.—The election of Mr. J. C. Robertson to Vice-President of the Municipal Committee of Allahabad is approved. Dated July 2.

POSTINGS.—Official notification has been received (June 24) of the undermentioned officers of the 19th Foot having, on their recent promotion, been posted to the battalion of their regiment specified:—Captain T. D. Rew, Lieut. L. R. H. D. Campbell, to 2nd Battalion.

EDUCATION.—The undermentioned gentlemen are appointed members of the Local Educational Committee in the district of Mozuffurnugger:—Lieutenant H. C. Fagan, officiating District Superintendent of Police. Mr. C. Donovan, secretary, vice Mr. Leeds, transferred to Mirzapore.

RAJPOOTANA.—The Home Government, on considering the forces kept up by the different chiefs in Rajpootana, have suggested to the Viceroy that the Maharao of Kotah should be called upon to reduce the number of troops in his pay. This chief had his salute reduced for his conduct during the mutiny.—Englishman.

NEPAL.—Maharajah Sir Jung Bahadoor (says the Englishman) has taken fresh agreements from the rebel leaders in Nepal, that so long as they may enjoy an asylum in Nepal they will do nothing to inconvenience the British Government, or to endanger the relations between the Khatmandoo Durbar and British India. The object the Maharajah had in view has not transpired.

BANK OF BENGAL.—The directors of the Bank of Bengal, at their half-yearly meeting held on the 2nd July, declared a dividend at the rate of nine per cent. per annum.

THE TOUR OF THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BENGAL.—It is notified (July 4) that the Lieutenant-governor would proceed on a tour to some of the districts of Bengal, including Kishnaghur, Berhampore, Junghypore, Malda, Rajmehal, Bhaugulpore, &c.

ARRIVALS FROM ENGLAND.—The following officers have reported their return from England:—Lieut. Plowden, Bengal Staff Corps, date of arrival at Fort William, June 22, 1868; Lieut. Hepburn, 1st wing Subaltern, 26th Punjab Regiment N.I., date of arrival at Bombay June 5.

HUMAN SACRIFICES.—The occasional occurrence of human sacrifices in India has attracted the attention of the Home Government. Sir Stafford Northcote has written to the Viceroy to say he has noted the frequency of these sacrifices with regret, and trusts that his Excellency will use all the means in his power to prevent and discourage such practices as much as possible.—Englishman.

MATHEMATICS.—The following arrangements have been made in the scientific departments of the Government:—Mr. W. H. Wright, officiating Professor of Mathematics in the Benares College, will revert to his substantive appointment of Professor of English Literature. Mr. E. E. Rogers, M.A., officiating Assistant Inspector, first circle, will revert to his substantive appointment of Professor of Mathematics in the Benares College.

THE WEATHER.—The Englishman's unfailing topic, the weather, is at present the cause of much anxiety. Here we are in the first week of July, and have not had more rain than sufficient to moisten the earth for the plough. Fears are widely entertained for a coming scarcity, and if the rains keep off much longer, we shall have no autumn crops; we hope, however, these fears may not be realised.—Central India Times, July 4.

CATTLE DISEASE IN BANDA.—We regret to see from a report by the Officiating Collector of Banda that a severe form of cattle disease has appeared in that district. The latest returns show that between two and three thousand head of cattle have died, chiefly in some thirty villages in Pergunnahs Dursenla and Ougasee. The worst of the epidemic would appear to be over, but it still exists in nine villages in Pergunnahs Ougasee and Scondah.—Englishman.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE.—The latest rumour (says the Englishman) concerning the Indian Vicereignty comes from Simla, and is to the effect that Sir John Lawrence wished to resign earlier than he at first contemplated, and to return home direct from Simla. It is said that the Secretary of State has replied that the Viceroy's presence is absolutely necessary at the Presidency at the beginning of the cold weather, as it is necessary he should open the Legislative Council of India in person.

THE OUTPOSTS IN THE WESTERN DOOARS.—Ever since the catastrophe of Putla Kowa the Government have been fighting against the fatal climate of the Western Dooars in the rains. The climate of the Terai is too well known to need comment or to make it a source of wonder that the Government have at last resolved to withdraw several out-posts in the Dooars. These posts cannot be held because of their unhealthiness. The work however will be done by small parties of mounted police during the rains.

MUNICIPAL APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. Yardley to be a Municipal Commissioner for the town of Bhaugulpore. The following gentlemen to be Municipal Commissioners for the town of Chittagong:—Messrs. Cowley and Atkinson; Mr. Cowley is also appointed to be Vice-President of the Municipality. Mr. Beighton to be a member of the Local Committee of Public Instruction at Mymensing. The Rev. J. H. Wilkinson to be a member of the Local Committee of Public Instruction at Debrooghur.

THE BULLOCK TRAIN BETWEEN JUBBULPORE AND NAGPORE, the terminus of the G. I. P. and E. I. Railways, for the conveyance of troops and military equipment, will commence to run immediately after the close of the rains. The arrangements are that, when required, thirty waggons will leave daily, carrying about a company of soldiers with their impedimenta so as to complete the despatch of a full regiment between the two stations within a fortnight.—Central India Times, July 4.

PUBLIC SERVANTS AND THE PRESS.—The Government have, in consequence of the steps taken lately by some officer in the non-regulation districts, issued a circular, forbidding all such officers, in their capacity as Government servants, to reply to anything in the public prints which may affect them, unless they have previously obtained the sanction of the Government under which they are serving. Officers have been warned that neglect of this ruling will be visited with the severe displeasure of the Government.—Englishman.

SAD ACCIDENT AT MORAR.—A melancholy accident took place at Morar on Saturday evening, July 4. Two officers were sailing on the lake, when a violent storm, resembling a typhoon, suddenly sprang up, upsetting their boat, which filled and went to the bottom. One of the officers, Lieut. J. M. Young, being unable to reach the shore, was drowned. His companion had only just sufficient strength left to reach an oar held out to him from the bank, by which he was helped ashore. The body of the deceased officer was recovered after a prolonged dragging, and was interred on the following evening.

EXAMINATIONS.—The undermentioned candidates are reported to have passed the lower standard in Hindoostanee on the 4th ult.:—Lieut. Ellis, Ensign Gordon, Ensign Cowell, 36th Foot; Lieutenant Davidson, 88th Foot; Paymaster Thorburn, 101st Foot; Lance Corporal Wall, 36th Foot.

SPECIFICATIONS OF INVENTIONS.—The undermentioned Specifications of Inventions have been filed in the office of the Secretary to the Government of the North-Western Provinces:—"For fastening the iron lashing hoops used for lashing bales of cotton;" by William Weir, of Colaba, in the Island of Bombay, engineer. "For making a revolving carriage seat, applicable to all vehicles where an easy entrance from behind is desirable;" by George Leggett, of the firm of Leggett and Son, coachbuilders, Madras. "For improvements in solvent or detergent processes;" by James Garth Marshall, of Leeds, in the county of York, flax-spinner.

LEGISLATIVE.—A meeting of the Viceregal Council was held at Simla on July 1, at which Mr. John Strachey obtained leave to introduce a Bill to prohibit the practice of inoculation in Kumaon and Garhwal; Mr. Cockerell, to introduce a Bill to exempt from the Indian Registration Act, 1866, certain instruments executed by or in favour of Government (that is to say, settlement records); and Mr. Maine, to introduce a Bill for investing the Commissioner and the Assistant-commissioner of the Neigherry Hills with the powers of a judge of the Small Cause Court. With regard to the last-named measure, the standing rules were suspended, the Bill introduced, and a committee appointed.

LIEUTENANT GREY.—The accounts published in the Lahore Chronicle regarding the action of Lieutenant Grey, Officiating Deputy Commissioner of Dera Ismail Khan, in the case of Kowra Khan, is substantially correct. Lieut. Grey acted in a very indiscreet manner, in endeavouring forcibly to stay an appeal he considered contumacious by the arrest of the appellant almost within the precincts of the Chief Court. But there was a certain dash about the proceedings which is quite refreshing in these days of circulars and rulings, and the whole affair is more like a border raid than anything else. We are glad to be able to say that Lieut. Grey's services have not been placed at the disposal of the Commander-in-Chief, but he has been transferred to Ambala, where we trust he will acquire the virtue of discretion.—Punjab Times.

DESTRUCTION OF WILD BEASTS IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—It appears that in the year 1867 the rewards given for the destruction of wild beasts in the four divisions of the Central Provinces amounted to upwards of forty-one thousand rupees. This outlay represents the slaughter of nearly three thousand beasts of prey—viz., 902 leopards and panthers, 535 bears, 527 tigers, 475 hyenas, and 467 wolves. The greatest amount by far was paid in the Saugor district—viz., Rs. 7,135; and much more than half this sum (Rs. 4,520) was for the destruction of wolves (353). The item next in importance is one of Rs. 4,250 for the spoils of 86 tigers in the district of Raepore, in the Chutteesghurh division. Five of these Raepore tigers are said to have been man-eaters, as were three in the Nagpore district, and one at Belaspore. Mention is also made of a man-eating panther, for whose death a reward was given of a hundred rupees!—Allahabad Pioneer.

EXHIBITIONS FOR NATIVE STUDENTS.—The Indian Daily News states that the Viceroy has obtained the sanction of the Executive Council to a project for sending nine native students annually to England at the public expense, to qualify themselves at a university for the Civil Service, or any other profession they may choose to adopt. Two candidates are to be selected from each of the three Presidencies, one from the North-West, one from the Punjab, and one from Oude and the Central Provinces alternately. Six of the nine will be selected by the local Governments, and the other three vacancies will be allotted by competition. The allowance for passage money will be £150, and a smaller sum for the return passage; while the annual allowance to the student during his sojourn in England will be from £200 to £300. We cannot judge of the measure until the details of the scheme have been filled up, but his Excellency will certainly earn the gratitude of the native community for his liberal suggestion.

REAPPEARANCE OF LIEUT. GOOLD.—Lieut. F. H. Goold, whose mysterious disappearance has caused much talk and many speculations, was arrested at Allahabad July 4, on the charge of desertion. As soon as the police were informed of the suspicion that Lieut. Goold had fled from justice, an officer was despatched from Calcutta to hunt him up. Traces were first found of him at Hooghly, where his wet clothes had attracted the attention of the railway officials; but he endeavoured to explain his wretched plight by alleging that he had been snipe shooting. From Hooghly he went to Burdwan, where he stayed until the night mail carried him to Raneegunge, where all traces of him were lost. The whole of the coal district was alarmed and officers were watching every thoroughfare. Mr. Goold, by extraordinary exertions, managed to reach Allahabad, where he was instantly apprehended. Steps were being taken to have him brought down immediately to Calcutta, where a criminal prosecution awaits him.

COMMERCIAL.—We see from the last number of Bonnaud's Commercial Guide that the statements of imports and exports for the month of June last exhibit a decrease to the extent of about a quarter of a crore, as compared with the same month of the past year. The major part of this decrease is in the imports, principally under the heads of cotton piece-goods and wrought metals. In the imports of copper and patent metals however there is a not inconsiderable increase. There is also an increase under the head of cotton, twist, and yarn. In the case of the exports the decrease occurs chiefly under the head of cotton piece-goods, and yarn, indigo, paddy, opium, and oil seeds, while there is a large increase in the exports of raw cotton and jute, and a considerable increase in that of wheat. The amount of customs actually collected in the month of May last fell short of that collected in the same month of 1867 by about Rs. 27,000. The clearances of salt, we see, during the month of May greatly exceeded those during the same period of the previous year.

A WILFUL BRITON.—The details of a rather novel fracas at Jubbulpore have been sent us. On the 29th ultimo a complaint was lodged in the Criminal Court of Jubbulpore by certain natives against Mr. Tawney, C.S., the Assistant Commissioner, charging him with "mischief" and the wanton destruction of a cart-load of food. The accused was driving with a friend through the village of Gurha, near Jubbulpore, and came upon a large concourse of people in the midst of the indigenous adaptation of what we term conviviality. They obstructed the passage of his conveyance, an indignity he could not brook, so he drove through them and over their "spread," but not without considerable damage to himself, for lighted torches were thrown at him and into his conveyance. It is not impossible that the complainants were in the centre of the road. They will go there, as a rule, and unfortunately the Penal Code overlooked the peculiarity. We can only hope the young gentleman in trouble will not be subjected this time to anything more than what military law describes as a severe reprimand, and told to return to his duty, his pockets lightened by the value of the damaged food. Another feast will follow, of course, and we imagine the high revelry over the produce of those rupees!—Delhi Gazette, July 9.

FURLOUGHS.—The following officers, civil and military, have obtained furlough since the beginning of July:—Mr. Tayler, Magistrate and Collector of Pubna, is allowed subsidiary leave of absence for ten days, to enable him to proceed to Europe; Mr. Trevor, a member of the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, for one year, on medical certificate; Mr. Prinsep, C.S., is allowed subsidiary leave of absence, not exceeding thirty days, from the date on which he may avail himself of it up to the date of sailing of the vessel on which he may embark for Europe; Mr. King, two years, from date of embarkation. The furlough for six months granted to Captain Stewart, 5th Infantry, Punjab Frontier Force, in G.G.O. June 9, 1868, was without pay, under the regulations of 1864. The undermentioned officer has been permitted by the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay army, Commanding the Abyssinian Field Force, to proceed to Europe on leave of absence on sick certificate:—Captain Hudson, Bengal Staff Corps, 2nd in Command and wing officer, 21st (Punjab) Regiment N.I., for twenty months. The undermentioned officer is permitted to proceed to Europe on leave of absence on sick certificate: Captain Broughton, 2nd Wing Subaltern, 44th (Syhet) Regiment Native Light Infantry, for twenty months, under the new regulations. Departures for Europe: Lieut.-colonel Ford, Madras Staff Corps, G.G.O. No. 503 of 1868, Surat, May 25, 1868—the date assigned in G.G.O. No. 544, June 5, 1868, is hereby cancelled; Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals J. Sutherland, Medical Department, and Second Captain Welsh, R.A., Nubia, June 22.

ANTIDOTE FOR COBRA POISON.

Dr. Shortt writes to the Madras Times, declining to test any of the reputed antidotes sent to him, "unless either the party himself can be present, or he depute some agent to carry out his instructions. Some people fancy they have nothing else to do but to send me the most worthless stuff possible that may have been recommended to them as antidotes, forgetting that there is not only risk but expense attendant on each experiment; this I do not mind when I can see the smallest prospect of success, but in the absence of such I cannot promise to undertake any experiment. I have received numerous letters both from England and various parts of India. Here is a specimen of one from England—written by a lady:—

Mrs. —, seeing in the Indian Daily News a reward of Rs. 1,750 offered for an antidote to the bite of a snake, by the Rajah of Travancore, Dr. Shortt and the First Prince of Travancore, has the pleasure to send a cure, which has been tried in many instances and never known to fail—it was given to Mrs. — by her father some years ago, who was an old Company's officer. A trial is requested, and if successful Mrs. — trusts the reward may be remitted to her agents, Messrs. —, London, —, 8th February, 1868.

FOR THE BITE OF A SNAKE.—Nowader, 4 chittacks, sappce chunah, 4 chittacks, mix the two in a bottle of water, and add half a bottle of lavender water. Half a wine glass to be administered—a little also to be applied to nostrils, and the same quantity to be repeated every half-hour until a cure is effected.

"The recipe is merely the preparation of a crude form of ammonia, to be made by the mixture of nowsader, or the muriate of ammonia and shell lime."

"On receiving a pompous production from P. S. Gnanamuthu Pillay," he continues, "I at once arranged to give him an opportunity of testing his wonderful anti-toxicum. Agreeably to the notice given he came at eleven A.M. on the 29th instant, and brought two full-grown pariah dogs with him—I had one of the two dogs bitten by a cobra and handed the animal to him for treatment. He brought some kind of ointment in a covered little silver cup, which was given to the dog internally and applied to the wound. The scalp was also scarified and the ointment applied, notwithstanding which the dog died in thirty-five minutes, and Gnanamuthu Pillay went away quite dejected, but apparently satisfied with the result.

"I have appointed Dr. Tilbury Fox an agent in England, and left a quantity of cobra poison with that gentleman with a view that he may superintend all experiments that may be conducted in England, should any antidote be discovered, of testing it finally in India, as regards the offered reward.

"I have also left some poison with Dr. Le Ball, of Paris, and sent some to Dr. Fraser, of Edinburgh, and I think that, with the aid of these gentlemen, the research may lead to something satisfactory eventually.

"I feel gratified to find that an universal interest on the subject of snake poison has been excited in the minds of many savants in different parts of the world, since I undertook the experiments, and even now experiments similar to mine are being carried out in Calcutta and Australia. From the latter country I have received several Australian newspapers, containing letters on the subject of snake poison, sent to me by some kind but unknown friend.

"What shall I say of the several native letters received, some of which it is impossible to decipher, but all representing that they are in possession of antidotes, and confidently assert that they can effect a cure, and ask for a trial?

"From the writings that I have seen of experiments with the cobra poison, a mistake is made in the belief that the poison loses its power when kept for any time. This is contrary to my own experience. I have kept sun-dried poison for four months—taken it with me to Europe, and brought some of it back again—it was simply kept in a small glass tube, similar to those employed for keeping homœopathic globules. Of this dried poison I dissolved one grain in a fluid drachm of distilled water; twenty minims of this solution injected with an hypodermic syringe killed a kitten about three or four months old in thirty minutes."

COFFEE IN COORG.

We have good accounts from Coorg, Munzerabad and Nuggur of the prospects of coffee cultivation. Seasonable rain has fallen, and it is confidently expected that the crops this season will make up for the losses by drought and borer last year. Those losses, though considerable in some few localities, have not, we believe, proved anything like so formidable on the whole as was expected. The total exports from the Madras Presidency during 1867 amounted to 8,686 tons, against 11,424 tons in 1866, 8,247 tons in 1865, and 11,322 tons in 1864. On referring to Colonel Taylor's preliminary remarks on the ravages of the borer in the year 1867, we find him stating that what we want is not only the fullest enquiry into the causes of the devastation, but also the preparation and compilation of the statistics of the calamity, for the benefit of present and the guidance of future planters. We agree with the Colonel that these statistics are of the greatest importance, and that they should show what area of cultivation has been destroyed by the insect, what extent of land, if any, has been deserted, and what amount of capital lost. Also, it should be ascertained how many acres of flourishing coffee still remain, and how much capital is at present represented. It is most important to discover if there really has been any decrease in the export of this product in 1867. Above all, what the planters and the public (and we conclude also the Government) wish to know is, what, according to the opinions of experienced men, scientific and practical, is the best system of cultivation to be pursued in future. If all this information is collected (as it ought to be) by Dr. Bidie, we have no doubt whatever that the result will be satisfactory, and that the public confidence, which has been somewhat shaken of late, will be restored.

With regard to Coorg, which may lay claim to be the coffee garden of Southern India, we find that the expenses of cultivation are considerably greater there than was at first supposed by sanguine minds. The native system of planting under partial shade is the cheapest, and it is, we believe, certain, that although the returns are not so prompt or so large, the trees last longer than those planted in the open. It is perhaps not generally known that nearly the whole population of Coorg is engaged in agricultural pursuits of some kind or other, and that the visitation of the borer last year has had no effect in diminishing their zeal for coffee planting. According to Mr. Richter, the population in 1866 amounted to 120,000, of whom 25,000 were Coorgs (a wonderfully small proportion), 93,000 Hindoos, Mahomedans, and native Christians, and about 250 Europeans. It is important to note that the cultivation of coffee does not appear to interfere in the least with the staple product of Coorg. Mr. Richter describes the numerous valleys throughout the land, which from ancient times have yielded an unfailing supply of rice every year for home consumption, and for exportation to the Malabar Coast, and informs us that the rice valleys are most extensive in South Coorg, in the neighbourhood of Virajendrapett, and in Kiggutnad, where some fields are several miles in length. Within some of the coffee estates the planters have cultivated some of the flats with rice to their great advantage, and the future settler might do well in applying for land to select, if possible, a situation where rice could be grown in portions of his estate. A perpetual supply of rice is an immense help to a planter in meeting the wants of the coolies at a reasonable rate, instead of his having to import from a distance. In addition to rice and coffee, cardamom cultivation pays well in Coorg, and various vegetables and spices are successfully cultivated. Among them we may mention pumpkins, cucumbers, Indian corn, brinjals, chillies, and coriander; and it is believed that cocoa, cinnamon, cloves, nutmegs, and vanilla would succeed. The cultivation of the last mentioned is, we believe, at present confined to the tropical parts of America. The introduction of the silk worm has also been contemplated, as the mulberry grows most luxuriantly. In the year 1866 the total acreage of land taken up for coffee cultivation amounted to 62,693 acres, but it is believed that the survey will show it to be 1,00,000. Of these 17,839 are under taxation, so it is presumed that they are under actual cultivation. There is yet another product of the greatest possible interest to commerce, which we believe can be successfully cultivated in portions of Coorg. We allude to cotton. We understand that the late superintendent introduced it as an experiment. It was put out about Fraserpett and Sampajee, and very fine Egyptian cotton was produced at the latter place. The Bombay Chamber of Commerce pronounced it to be the best that had ever reached the market there. Tea and Chinchona have also been introduced in Coorg, but only as experiments. Mr. Mann made some very good tea from bushes planted by him, but the cultivation has not been taken up. The Government Chinchona plants are thriving. They flowered in 1866 and were loaded with seed. A hot house for a Chinchona nursery has been completed in the grounds of the Government Central School at Mercara, and it is the intention of the Government (which we cannot too much commend) to naturalise the bark as much as coffee, and to distribute seedlings to the Coorgs all through the country. An antidote will thus be furnished ere long to the terrible fever which is at present perhaps the only drawback to a residence in one of the most fertile and picturesque countries in India.—Madras Times.

THE OUTBREAK IN THE CUTTACK MEHALS.—We are glad to learn that Colonel Dalton's hands are to be strengthened by a considerable military force to assist him in the reduction of the hill tribes of Cuttack. Although this little war cannot be said to involve any more important consideration than the establishment of the authority of the police among the hill-men, it is well to have it finished, that the authorities may be allowed to resume their proper functions.

Quohig, 18th Hussars, passed at Secunderabad; Sergeant M. Lloyd, 1st battalion Royal Regiment, passed at Cannanore; Bombardier J. Thompson, No. 1 battery 5th brigade Royal Artillery, passed at Madras; Bombardier H. Webb, No. 2 battery 5th brigade Royal Artillery, passed at Madras; Gunner B. OFFICIAL CHANGES.—Colonel Simpson, R.A., Inspector-General of Ordnance and Magazines at this Presidency, proceeds to Europe in a few days, and Colonel J. L. The appointment to the command of the Nagpore Force, now vacant by the demise of Brigadier-General Brice, C.B., has not yet been made. The applicants are said to be numerous. Mr. Huddleston takes the benefit of the new furlough rules immediately. The Acting Secretaryship to the Government in the Revenue Department has been granted to Mr. Dalyell. The Secretaryship of the Board of Revenue, vacated by Mr. Dalyell, will probably be filled, pro tem, by Mr. Atholl McGregor. The Ven. Archdeacon Dealtry retires from the service next year; his appointment will, in all probability, be conferred upon the Rev. J. Gorton, now on duty in Fort St. George. The latter gentleman has taken privilege leave to Bangalore; Dr. Sayers will act for him. The Rev. E. S. Goodhart, who has just returned from Abyssinia, where he was among the first to enter Magdala, is appointed to act as Chaplain of South Black-town; he will shortly however return to the cathedral. A Bombay paper thinks it probable that the Hon. H. S. Maine will retire from India next year. In that case Madras will lose its present learned Advocate-General, the Hon. John Bruce Norton, and Mr. J. D. Mayne, returning from Australia, will succeed him.

THE MADRAS MEDICAL COLLEGE.—The Principal and Professors of the Madras Medical College had the gratification on the evening of 1st July of celebrating the anniversary of the institution for the first time in the new theatre of the college building. The meeting was a highly interesting one. The theatre, which is sufficiently spacious to give accommodation to a large number of people, was crowded; the Right Hon. the Governor presided. Dr. George Smith, the Principal, read the annual report for the session 1867-68, which, after noticing the state of the college staff, the lectures and examinations, the reports of the professors, the constitution of the departments, &c., wound up with the following observations:—Former Pupils of the College.—In March last the University, at its annual convocation, conferred the degree of Licentiate in Medicine and Surgery upon Mr. Gorman, an able and distinguished member of the medical subordinate department. The medical honours for which he so zealously and successfully laboured have been enjoyed by him but for a few weeks; he died on the 26th of June. Dr.

Thompson, formerly an assistant apothecary, has within the last year returned to Madras with her Majesty's commission as an assistant surgeon of the Indian Medical Department. Three former students of this institution are now undergoing the course of instruction at Netley, two of the three having taken high positions in the list of successful competitors for commissions in the Indian Medical Department. The prizes were then distributed by his Excellency the Governor, after which his Lordship called upon Dr. Keess to deliver the annual address. In the course of a long speech, full of sound advice to his young hearers, the Doctor referred in terms of regretful praise to the late Apothecary John Gorman. The address was received with great applause, and Lord Napier closed the interesting proceedings of the evening with a few pertinent remarks.

THE MADRAS FAMINE OF 1866.—The Secretary of State for India addressed the following despatch to the local Government on the 21st May last:—"I have had under my consideration in Council the despatch from your Excellency in Council, numbered ten, and dated the 28th of February, with which you transmit to me the final report of the Relief Committee on the Madras famine of 1866 by the honorary secretary to that committee, Mr. R. A. Dalyell, and your proceedings thereon. I cordially concur with your Excellency in Council in the expression of thanks which you have conveyed to the gentlemen of the committee, and especially to Mr. Dalyell, for their valuable services willingly given at very great personal inconvenience to many of the members. I do not doubt that the satisfaction with which they may justly contemplate the relief to such a large number of human beings, suffering under a severe visitation, which has been afforded by their instrumentality, will be regarded by them as an ample recompense for the labour and time which they have bestowed on this charitable work. With respect to the recommendations of the committee, I will only observe that the question of the right time for the direct interference of Government in exigencies of this nature is one of the most difficult problems of administration, and one on which it would be most unsafe to lay down any definite rules beforehand. My opinions of the importance of anticipating the recurrence of such calamities, by the construction of such works as may mitigate their effects when they do unfortunately arise, have been recently repeated in several despatches. I rejoice to see, by your order of the 18th of February, that many even of the larger special works mentioned as important for this object are already in hand. You will not find me backward in supporting your endeavours in this direction. And I trust, with you, that should a similar calamity fall upon your Presidency it will be found able to bear it with comparative ease, from the precautions which you are now taking."

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, July 3.—From London the latest date by telegram is the 29th June, and quotations are the same as reported in my letter of the 19th ultimo. The mail of the 5th June came to hand to-day. There has been a further rise in the price of cotton during the week, owing to the stock being exhausted, as said in my last, and to the small arrivals of the staple from up-country—which are due to the slow progress of vessels down river on account of the boisterous state of the weather—and to the necessity for fulfilling contracts among dealers. Prices now stand at from Rs. 21½ to Rs. 22½ per maund for all descriptions, and a bargain has just been closed at the former rate for "Unritsur and Sind." There has been some little business done in wool, and prices vary according to quality from Rs. 11 to Rs. 24. For rape seed the demand was poor until a few days ago, when it slightly improved. The business however in gingelly (black) has been extensive, and the price is quoted at from Rs. 36½ to Rs. 38 per candy, and that for white at from Rs. 34 to Rs. 35. The grain market has been very dull, which is natural, since all the supplies from and for Abyssinia are now advertised for sale by public auction by the Commissariat Department; prices now stand at from Rs. 15 to Rs. 23 per candy. Since my last report I have to mention that the ships Mora and Southern Bell and the Nelly have been chartered, the two former for Liverpool and the latter for Marseilles. The Kebroyd is for Genoa, and the Hoomactac for Hong Kong. Nothing further has transpired about the James Child. The board of inquiry to inquire into the circumstances connected with the loss of the Alicia assembled at Manora yesterday; we shall know with what result in a few days, I suppose. The Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China closed business here on the 30th ultimo.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

JUDGMENT in the case of Harrison v. the Mofussilite has been given. Damages to the amount of Rs. 10,000 were given against the defendant. The complainant is the chief engineer of the Punjab Railway.

MYSTERIOUS STRANGER.—The Poona Observer tells us that a European Mahomedan has been staying in Poona, wearing Oriental costume, and is reported to be connected with a prominent official in the Punjab. Who is the mysterious stranger? In all probability no other than Sultan Ali, ex-Italian Democrat, ex-officer of Russian Artillery, now en route for England. Can it be Captain Larkin, of the Rifle Brigade, having exhausted the treasures of Cashmir or Cabul; or Colonel Elphinstone himself, tired of billiard marking and hoping to recover his fame? We hope that "the prominent official in the Punjab" will come forward and satisfy our curiosity.—Punjab Times.

ACCIDENT AT MHOW.—We are sorry to learn from Mhow that Colonel W. H. Seymour, the popular commanding officer of the Bays, came to grief last week, whilst out spearing a leopard, by his horse coming down with him, and throwing him on his head and face Luckily, beyond a good shaking and a few scratches on his face, the Colonel escaped injury to his body or bones.—Delhi Gazette, July 7.

PASSAGE MONEY PAYABLE TO SUBALTERNS.—The amount of passage money payable to subalterns of the Indian services proceeding to England on medical certificate, from Aden, when not provided with a passage in the Indian troop-ships or otherwise, will be Rupees 800, and not Rupees 1,000. This rule applies also to the higher grades of warrant officers above conductor, who, in like manner with subalterns, will be entitled to receive only Rupees 1,100 when they proceed from Bombay, instead of Rupees 1,200.

THE GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE.—The Right Hon. the Governor in Council has made the following appointments in connection with the Grant Medical College :—J. T. Mackenzie, Esq., M.B., Professor of Surgery, to the Chair of Dental Surgery ; J. B. Lyon, Esq., Professor of Chemistry, to the Chair of Medical Jurisprudence ; J. H. Sylvester, Esq., Professor of Ophthalmic Medicine and Surgery, to the Chair of Comparative Anatomy ; Sydney Smith, Esq., M.D., to the Chair of Materia Medica.

MILITARY.—Brigadier General Petrie, commanding the artillery with the Abyssinian Field Force, returns to the command of the 21st Brigade, R.A., at Mhow, and will return home with the batteries when they leave the country this cold season. The Bombay relief has not yet been published, but we understand the 3rd Hussars will be stationed at Ahmednuggur in place of the 3rd Dragoon Guards, and not proceed to Lucknow, as is rumoured. The Bays go home next year, and possibly a regiment from this Presidency will take its place at Mhow.—Delhi Gazette.

A CASE OF ELEPHANTIASIS.—A native mendicant, said to be a female, may be seen sitting in Byculla, near the synagogue ; and a more horrible sight than that presented it would be difficult to conceive. A veil of flesh falls over the face down upon the breast, and over the shoulder upon the back in many folds. It is a case of elephantiasis, and a more extraordinary case was perhaps never seen. The growth affects one side of the face ; the other side with its eye and part of the mouth are unconcealed. It is the triumph of the sculptor's art to represent a veiled countenance, and in looking at this wretched being one is reminded of such attempts ; the bare outline of the face over which this mass of living flesh is pendant may be traced. This abnormal growth is unattended with pain, we suppose, and possibly is valued by the woman herself for its power to draw money from passers-by. She is a gosavin, and came, we are told, from Bhooj.—Bombay Guardian.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.—The following promotions in the Ordnance Department are made :—Sub-Conductor (Acting Conductor) Peter Nelson to be Conductor, and Magazine Sergeant (Acting Sub-Conductor) Timothy Foley to be Sub-Conductor, from June 6, 1868, vice Clarke, pensioned. Deputy Assistant Commissary and Honorary Captain Jeremiah Coleman, to be Deputy Commissary ; Conductor (Acting Deputy Assistant Commissary) Francis Bunyer, to be Deputy Assistant Commissary ; Sub-Conductor (Acting Conductor) John Murray, to be Conductor ; and Magazine Sergeant (Acting Sub-Conductor) John Cronolly, to be Sub-Conductor from June 18, 1868, vice Purcell, transferred to the invalid establishment ; Honorary Captain and Deputy Assistant Commissary Wilkins, to be Deputy Commissary ; Conductor (Acting Deputy Assistant Commissary) Connel, to be Deputy Assistant Commissary ; Sub-Conductor (Acting Conductor) Jones, to be Conductor ; and Magazine Sergeant (Acting Sub-Conductor) Spittall to be Sub-Conductor, from March 18, 1868, vice Chetham, invalided.

THE MHOW-KE-MULLA VIADUCT.—On receiving a report from Capt. White, Deputy Consulting Engineer for Railways, relative to the opening of the new Mhow-ke-Mulla viaduct, the Government of Bombay recorded the following resolution :—"Government have received the report of the completion of this work with great satisfaction. The result of the severe test to which this viaduct has been subjected could scarcely be more satisfactory, and the rapid and efficient manner in which the communication has been restored across this ravine reflects very great credit on the company's engineering staff. Although the observed amount of vibration caused by the passage of heavy engines over the girders was small, Government are of opinion that, for the present at least, trains should pass over the bridge at a rate of speed not exceeding ten miles an hour. Government will be glad to hear that the second line has been completed at an early date. Government also desire to note with satisfaction the skilful manner in which the goods traffic has been conducted over the gap during the construction of the new viaduct, by means of the temporary tramway."

THE MILITARY FUND.—The Secretary of State has very considerably ruled that subscribers to the Military Fund when requiring to take up a loan therefrom in England shall be allowed to do so at the rate of 2s. the rupee. The despatch runs as follows :—"It appears that the practice of paying such loans in England at 2s. 3d. the rupee formerly existed, but was discontinued in the year 1841, and although no provision is made in the rules on the subject, I have resolved to grant to the subscribers of the fund the boon which you have recommended, and to sanction payment of such loans at this office at 2s. the rupee. When a subscriber returns with his family to India the loan will be granted to him in London on his own personal security." Few persons have any clear idea of what it is that regulates the Indian exchange, except for three or four months together. Thus in 1846-48 the exchange value of the rupee was frequently as low as 1s. 8½d. ; in 1850 it stood if we remember rightly at 2s. 6d. for a few weeks ; while we have seen it in the course of the last two years down to 1s. 9½d. ; its intrinsic value meanwhile remaining unaltered. We cannot enter upon the subject here, but may possibly discuss it at length in a future article. The boon granted by the Home Secretary is very substantial.—Times of India.

DR. T. G. HEWLETT.—We understand that Dr. T. G. Hewlett, Health Officer of the Municipality, proceeds to England on six months' leave of absence, and that Dr. Lumsdaine, Superintendent of Mathe-ran, who went to Abyssinia with the pioneer force, and remained there till the close of the expedition, will act as Health Officer during the absence of Dr. Hewlett. We are extremely sorry to hear that it is the state of Dr. Hewlett's health which obliges him to proceed to Europe. We cannot however say that we are surprised ; three years of work such as has fallen to the lot of Dr. Hewlett whilst holding the appointment of Health Officer of Bombay is enough to destroy the health of a Hercules. The strain has been not only mental but physical. Dr. Hewlett, besides discharging most ably his legitimate duties as Consulting Officer of Health, has also most energetically superintended the conservancy of the island, and it is to this double strain that his health has in all probability succumbed. It must be a source of regret to the municipality that they did not sufficiently economise the services of so valuable an officer. If the superintendence of the conservancy of Bombay had been allotted to those of whose duty it properly forms a part, and Dr. Hewlett's services been confined to the scientific and legitimate work of his appointment, we most probably should have been spared our present loss.—Bombay Gazette.

MAZAGON LAND AND RECLAMATION COMPANY.—An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of this Company was held on the 9th July, for the purpose of confirming the resolutions passed at the extraordinary general meeting, held on the 20th June, viz., "that it is desirable to transfer the assets, &c., of the company to another company to be formed with a capital of 32 lacs divided into 1,600 fully paid up shares of 2,000 rupees each ;" and "that the Mazagon Land and Reclamation Company (Limited) be wound up voluntarily." The chairman, Mr. J. G. Smith, explained that it would be necessary to form the new company before winding up the old. Several shareholders, though perfectly willing to wind up the old company, seemed to question the desirability of forming a new company. Mr. Hurrell said that it would be suicidal policy to wind up the old company before forming a new. Winding up alone would be simply a division of the property they had in hand. Mr. Wadia had a lien on the company to the extent of two lacs, and according to the present selling rate of property in Bombay their assets would be all swallowed up to pay off this two lacs and the other liabilities, or they would have to make a call. A shareholder observed that the time for the repayment of this loan was not yet due, and Mr. Wadia had agreed to wait. Mr. Hurrell said that he had agreed to wait while the company was in existence, but it was not likely that he would wait when the company was in liquidation. The plan to adopt would be to first form a new company, have it registered, and then pass a resolution under the 75th section, authorising any liquidator who might be appointed to hand over the assets of the old company to the new company. After some conversation in the vernacular it was agreed "that this meeting be adjourned till Thursday, the 16th July, at 3 P.M., and that a committee be appointed to consult with the directors for the purpose of devising a scheme for the purpose of forming a new company." The meeting was then adjourned.

COLONEL PHAYRE.—Letters from Sir Robert Napier to parties high in authority in this Presidency speak of the services of Colonel Phayre in terms of unqualified approbation. On quitting Zoulla his Excellency addressed a letter to this officer, in which he said :—"I cannot permit you to leave Army Head-quarters without expressing to you my sense of the services you have rendered to the Expedition from your first laborious and most correct and faithful investigation of the voluminous records of travels and correspondence connected with Abyssinia ; your labours with the reconnoitring force under discomforts which can hardly be appreciated now, and your most energetic prosecution of the reconnaissance in front of the columns, which has resulted in an admirable survey of the whole route." Other letters speak of his "most valuable services," his "great abilities and energy ;" and with all this not a word of disparagement. The thing for which the Commander-in-Chief found fault with Colonel Phayre when he joined him at Affjo, on the 10th of April (Good-Friday), was that that position had been substituted for Goombazee, the place indicated in the chief's instructions of the previous day. When so indicated this place had only been viewed by his Excellency at a distance of six or seven miles. When Colonel Phayre reached the place at 11 A.M. of the 10th he found that it was commanded by Affjo, a more elevated point somewhat in advance, and having other advantages, both for offence and defence, and he sent a pencil note of these observations to Sir Charles Staveley, requesting that it might be forwarded to Sir Robert Napier. There is nothing surprising in the fact that the Commander-in-Chief, on his arrival at the position taken up in advance of Goombazee, did not immediately see, as one who had been for hours reconnoitring the whole ground, the advantages of position; but there is no question, we believe, that its superiority and suitableness in every sense were shown in the fight that immediately ensued. Though suddenly attacked, and on more sides than one, it proved perfectly defensible. It commanded the King's Gun Road, and by that road opened out a direct line of communication with the Bashelo; whereas Goombazee was only accessible by a steep and rugged mountain path. It was Fahla that the Commander-in-Chief intended to attack first, as he considered it the key of the Magdala fortress. But Colonel Phayre had ascertained by actual inspection that there was no other position available against Fahla than the one actually occupied.—Times of India.

Officers of the British army, holding appointments in departments for which no special uniform is laid down, will wear the uniform of their regiments whenever it may be proper for them to appear as military officers.

TEST BOOKS, NATIVE LANGUAGES.

July 1.—No. 2,786.—In continuation of Notification No. 5,799, dated Oct. 25, 1867, the following list of the books, which will form the standard of examination for high proficiency in the Ooryah language, is published for general information:—

OFFICERS DRAWING ALLOWANCES.

Simla, June 29.—No. 649.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India is published for general information:—

Military—No. 192.

India-office, London, June 4, 1868.

Sir,—Your letter dated Feb. 8, 1868, No. 46, submits for decision the question whether the provisions of the despatch, No. 113 of April 16, 1867, permitting officers to draw allowances from the date of their arrival at whatever port they may disembark on return to duty, apply to officers on their first arrival in India.

Officers in this position may be either those of British officers who have been ordered out to join their corps, or officers appointed to the Indian medical service. I am of opinion that the first named should receive Indian allowances on their arrival at the port to which they may have been ordered, whether it be situated within the presidency where their regiments are stationed or not, but that the medical officers have no claim to the allowances until they arrive within the limits of the presidency to which they stand appointed.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

SERVICE FOR PENSION.

July 2.—No. 646.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India is published for general information:—

Military—No. 193.

India-office, London, June 4, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-general of India in Council.

Sir,—In accordance with the recommendation contained in your letter dated April 6, 1868, No. 139, I authorise you to announce that in future all officers who may do duty with troops on the voyage to or from India will be allowed to count the whole of the period during which they may be employed on such duty as service for pension.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

ADMISSIONS TO THE STAFF CORPS.

Simla, June 30.—No. 635.—The following despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India is published:—

Military—No. 184.

India-office, London, May 28, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-general of India in Council.

Sir,—I have considered in Council your letter No. 61 of Feb. 22 last, enquiring whether the period of probation in a military point requires to qualify an officer for admission to the staff corps is, or is not, to include leave in India (privilege leave excepted), also whether the circumstance of an officer going on such leave, if it be excluded, should affect the date from which he would otherwise be gazetted to the corps.

As observed by you, the term of probation is intended both to enable the officer to acquire a knowledge of the service or department in which it is passed, and to test his general fitness for it.

I therefore concur with your Government in opinion that all leave, except privilege leave, be excluded from the year's probation required for admission to the staff corps, but that the date of final admission to the corps need not be affected on that account.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

BHOOTAN.—The game of politics in Bhootan appears to be daily growing more difficult. The chiefs cannot agree amongst themselves sufficiently well to offer a powerful resistance to the encroachments of Tongsoo Penlow, neither can they make up their minds to submit to that arch-disturber of the peace. The result is an endless seesaw of intrigue, in which the various chiefs of the Western division of the country endeavour to seize the office of Deb Rajah, and to make themselves independent of the two great factions at Paro, on the one side, and Tongsoo on the other. When hostilities broke out between the Bhooteas and the English the principal supporter of Tongsoo Penlow was Augdo Forung Jungpen. This chief, subsequently feeling alarmed at Tongsoo's open efforts to assume a dictatorship, abandoned Tongsoo's cause, and intrigued on his own behalf. His object was to secure the dangerous honour of the Deb Rajahship; in this however he has been foiled, and partly in revenge, we presume, and partly from disappointed ambition, he would now invite the English to interfere. With this object in view he has written the following letter to the Commissioner of the Western Dooras:—"I was formerly residing in Poonakha at my own desire. I afterwards came to Augdophorong. One of those who was previously with me has been constituted Jungpen of Punakha. This man has been prepared for the last year to fight with me. We people of Bhootan are always fighting with one another in different places; we can never come to any agreement. A treaty was made at Punakha between the Sirkar and Bhootan (according) to the 10th article of which it was arranged that if any disquietude should arise in the one the other should lend assistance. We in Bhootan are at present thus disquieted; if you can come personally to settle this, do so; if not, send some one who, equally with yourself, can arrange the matter. The road is near for you to come to Doongsam. If you cannot send a force, then send some guns and ammunition, for which the price will be forwarded on the settlement of this affair. If you cannot give this, the road by Doongsan is near, write a strong letter to the Tongsoo Penlow and Punakha Jungpen to this effect:—'that you people of Bhootan are quarrelling amongst yourselves, and a Sahib is coming to settle the matter.' Send a similar letter to the Augdophorong Jungpen. If troops are sent food will be provided for them. Let nothing wrong be in your heart in this matter. A bear has been sent for your inspection and acceptance, and the usual silk envelope with the letter sent from Augdophorong in Bhootan."—Englishman.

SALE OF GIRLS AT BURDWAN EXPLAINED.—About a month ago we published a translation of a letter in the Shom Prokash relative to the sale of girls at Burdwan. Such a statement as that contained in the letter naturally led to inquiries. The editor of the native paper in which the letter appeared was communicated with, and he makes an explanation which may be regarded more or less as satisfactory. It may be that the Oriental imagination is more vigorous than the same faculty in people of the West, who are more accustomed to deal with facts than with allegories. The explanation of the editor is:—"That the translator in the Daily News misunderstood the purport of the allegorical letter of the correspondent. His meaning was not a regular sale of girls as it is held in Cairo and Constantinople; but that in Burdwan, Hooghly, and other districts of Lower Bengal, parents, especially Brahmins, who are not Coolies, are in the habit of receiving pons, or price, for their marriageable daughters. The correspondence in question is evidently a ridicule upon this pernicious but common practice. The circumstance of the correspondent's signing himself 'A Bachelor' should have opened the eyes of the translator as to the real meaning of the letter. The meaning of the writer in the Shom Prokash is further elucidated by an editorial of the same date. I am sorry that this misunderstanding of the translator in the Daily News has been the cause of giving trouble. The evil complained of is a social one, and beyond the pale of the interference of the Government."—Indian Daily News.

THE AGRA BANK.—The directors of the Agra Bank (Limited) have declared an ad interim dividend to 30th June last, at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum on the A capital of the bank, payable on and after 1st September next. That portion of the bank's capital which is represented by B, or "reserved," shares, will not, in accordance with the articles of association, participate in the payment of dividend until after the present year.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 5th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were: To Calcutta, £177,200; and to Madras, £22,800. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on both the Presidencies; and tenders at 1s. 10½d. will receive about 94 per cent., and those above will be allotted in full. The result shows a decline of about 1 per cent., indicating a falling-off in the demand for remittances.

STATUE TO LORD CLYDE.—A very fine statue of Lord Clyde, erected by subscription, was unveiled in Glasgow on Wednesday, and presented to that city in the name of the subscribers by Sir James Campbell. The Lord Provost, attended by the other civic authorities, was present, and, in the name of the citizens, accepted the noble and interesting gift. The proceedings were witnessed by a large public assemblage, and hearty cheers were given on the unveiling of the figure. The statue—placed in George-square by the side of that of Sir John Moore—has cost about £1,200.

DEATH OF THE RIGHT HON. S. RUMBOLD LUSHINGTON.—We have to record the death of the Right Hon. Stephen Rumbold Lushington, which occurred on the 5th inst., at his seat in Kent. Mr. Lushington, who was the fourth son of the Rev. J. S. Lushington, of Rodmersham, Kent, was born in 1775, and married, in 1792, the eldest daughter of the first Lord Harris. That lady died in 1856, and in 1858 Mr. Lushington married Miss Hearne, who died in 1864. The right hon. gentleman was in early life private secretary to the first Lord Harris, whose life he wrote. Subsequently he was joint secretary to the Treasury (1814-27), and Governor of Madras (1827-32).

THE DELHI RAILWAY.—During the past four months the sum of £1,015,908 has been paid to the credit of the Secretary of State for India on account of the capital of the Delhi Railway, the proprietors of shares in the undertaking having availed themselves to a large extent of the option of paying the amount of their shares in full. The works on this line are stated to be making rapid progress, and the company are now engaging a staff of engine-drivers to work the section from Meerut to Umballah, about 120 miles in length, which is expected to be opened by his Excellency the Viceroy in October next. This section will bring the railway from Calcutta to within ninety miles of Simla, and within fifty miles of the base of the hills. The Delhi Railway is a continuation of the trunk line of the East Indian.

INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.—The first ordinary meeting of this company was held on Friday last, at the office, Telegraph-street, Moorgate-street; the Hon. R. Grimston in the chair. The report stated that the necessary capital for establishing telegraph communication between England and India had been subscribed. The valuable concessions granted by the Governments of Russia, the North German Confederation, and Persia, to Messrs. Siemens, and upon which this undertaking was based, had been transferred by those gentlemen to the company, the transfer in each case having been duly confirmed by the respective Governments. The principal alteration in the line of telegraph was made in Russian territory, by means of which the cable in the Black Sea was shortened by 100 miles, and 150 miles of land line substituted for it. Commercial intercourse by telegraph upon the lines of the company would not be interfered with; only cipher messages or messages of a political character would be subject to stoppage. The directors had received great encouragement and valuable assistance from the India-office. The construction of a complete alternative line between Bushire and Kurrachee had been decided upon by the Government, which had also agreed, under an arrangement with the Indo-European Telegraph Company, to erect an additional wire between Teheran and Bushire, subject to the consent of the Persian Government, whereby a complete through communication between this country and India would be established by means of two special and well-insulated wires. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said the Indo-European Telegraph Company had been started in order to give the public what they had long been demanding—a dependable line of telegraph from England to India. The line altogether avoided Turkish territory, where for a long period of time considerable delay had been experienced in the delivery of telegraph messages. The capital of the company had been subscribed by the merchant princes of London, Manchester, Berlin, Hamburg, Bremen, and St. Petersburg, so that, in truth, he might say he had the honour of addressing the most wealthy constituency in the world. It was expected that the cable through the Black Sea would be completed in the course of the winter. Mr. W. E. Quentell seconded the motion, and it was adopted.

LORD NAPIER AT WELSHPOOL.—Lord Napier of Magdala was entertained at a public dinner at Welshpool on Saturday night. In returning thanks for his health, he spoke at some length in reference to his closing negotiations with King Theodore. It had been said that Theodore had been deceived, but he was glad to take that public opportunity of saying that nothing had been authorised by him which could have led the king to the belief that he would accept one jot less than the terms of his first demand. The first person who was sent to him by Theodore was Lieutenant Prideaux. Theodore said,—"Yesterday I thought myself the strongest man in the world; to-day I know that there are stronger than I, and I want peace." He (Lord Napier) wrote to him telling him that if he gave up all the prisoners he and his family would be honourably treated. He wished to say nothing that would exasperate him or make him desperate, but he did not, on the other hand, wish to lead him to believe that he would take less than he had demanded. Lieutenant Prideaux returned with this letter, and Theodore was very angry. He felt that the honour of England stood before all things, and that he could not yield in his terms. He sent Lieutenant Prideaux back to say that no terms could be accepted except those that he had demanded. On his return he met the greater part of the prisoners released, and he returned with them, and the same night all the prisoners for whom they were officially responsible were in the English camp. He thought it might be accepted as a mathematical fact that if he had sent Lieutenant Prideaux back it would have been almost certain death to him, and he must say that young man acted most gallantly, feeling as he did that his fate was imminent; but not one word did he say in deprecation of the sentence that he (Lord Napier) had pronounced. If he had sent Lieutenant Prideaux back to probable death when he had nobody, was it likely, when he had everybody for whom he was responsible, that he should depart from his original terms? Whatever Theodore might have conceived, or his servants might have persuaded him, it was perfectly clear that the British general could not authorise anything but the original terms he had put forth. After the advance on Magdala, during the time which Theodore's army took to surrender their weapons, there was an interval of three hours. If Theodore had at that period hung out the smallest rag to show submission he would have received mercy, but his (Lord Napier's) belief was that he could not believe we should show mercy, as he had never shown it himself. The Abyssinian prisoners, when they were taken wounded to the hospital, finding we were not going to slaughter them, looked upon our acts as the generosity of angels; they could not believe it; and such was the feeling in Theodore's mind that mercy to him seemed impossible. He attempted to escape, but the surrounding hills were filled with his enemies, and he returned and died by his own hand.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

LORD MAYO AS GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

The Saturday Review observes that a statement has been made within the last few days of a kind that may be considered almost official, that Mr. Disraeli intends to make Lord Mayo the new Governor-general of India. This statement has been made so positively and has remained so absolutely without contradiction, that we are obliged to receive it as expressing, at any rate, the present intentions of the Prime Minister. It was long thought that Sir Stafford Northcote was to be the man. He had allowed it to be repeatedly and publicly said that he was ambitious of the honour of filling the post. He has made a very fair Indian Secretary, quite as good a Secretary as, on the average of Ministries, we can hope to get. He has worked very hard, and made himself as well acquainted with Indian affairs as any Englishman can be after two years' study of them from England, without ever having been in the country. He has shown himself courteous, impartial, and sensible. He is able to hold his own against Mr. Laing and Mr. Ayrton. He has secured the hearty co-operation of his Council without succumbing to them. He has avoided the usual fault of Indian Secretaries, and has treated with marked civility the more distinguished members of the Civil Service who have returned to this country. He has helped and encouraged the Governor-general without disappearing like a cipher before his prestige and influence. Altogether it has come to be acknowledged on all hands that Sir Stafford Northcote would be as good a Governor-general as could well be found; not a great, creating, original Governor-general, but a safe, useful, hard-working, well-informed head of the Indian Government. Suddenly he is superseded by Lord Mayo, who, whatever other qualifications he may possess, certainly does not possess the special qualifications which distinguish Sir Stafford Northcote. To Lord Mayo India is a blank, and he starts with all the advantages and all the disadvantages attending on an administration which begins with pure ignorance of the system to be administered and of the people affected by it. The vast community of India, native and European, will ask what on earth he has done to be made Governor-general. Alas! we shall be obliged to inform them that it is not in England that they must expect to find an answer to a question so natural and so legitimate. No one in England has the faintest notion why Lord Mayo should be made Governor-general of India. The appointment of Lord Mayo may raise a very serious question. If he is appointed, as is probable, a few days before the present Ministry is driven out, will it be incumbent on the Liberal leaders to keep him in office? Generally speaking, appointments made by one Government ought to be rigidly upheld by another, or men in a respectable position would not accept posts of so precarious a nature. Nothing could be worse than to introduce into England the American system under which, when there is a change of President, a clean sweep is made of all officials, and every one starts afresh. But is it allowable for an outgoing Ministry to appoint for five years a person holding such a position as that of Governor-general of India? Clearly it is not allowable, if we are to suppose that the outgoing Ministry appoints a Governor-general of whom the incoming Ministry would disapprove. A precedent already exists in Indian history, showing that a Governor-general appointed on the eve of a change of Ministry may be removed by the new Ministry, provided that the new Ministry is prepared to advise the Sovereign that so great a divergence of views and principles exists between them and the new official that they cannot act together. But then no one is likely to say this of Lord Mayo. There is no solid reason for supposing that he will either have a view of his own, or that he will stick to it if he has. No one can believe that the endowed Catholic University was Lord Mayo's thunder. He adopted that sorry bolt, we may be sure, from his chief, and when he was told in a moment of great emergency that he had not said what he had said, he acquiesced in a ready and pleasant manner. The Liberals will not, therefore, be able to say that Lord Mayo is a man who has political views directly opposite to their own, or who is likely to thwart and limit the action of the Secretary of State. If the appointment is objected to, it must be objected to not on the ground that Lord Mayo is incompetent, or that he does more harm than good, but on the ground that a dying Ministry has no right to make such an appointment.

The Spectator has no wish whatever to be unjust to Lord Mayo, or to deny the few facts that can be pleaded in favour of his selection for the greatest appointment in the gift of the British Crown. We do not deny that he is accessible to reason, for he certainly accepted the policy of "levelling up," and surrendered it the moment his colleagues told him it would not do. We do not assert that his wearisome oratory is any drawback, for a Viceroy has seldom to speak, and when he speaks the value of his utterance does not depend on the beauty or even the lucidity of his sentences. We acknowledge that Ireland in many respects resembles India, that a long intercourse with Fenians is not bad training for an Asiatic ruler, and that Lord Mayo may as Secretary for Ireland have displayed powers of which the public is entirely unaware. But we would ask his own party whether he has ever shown the capacity for first-class office, whether they would accept him as a leader, whether they would not wonder a little if he were appointed Secretary for War, or Foreign Secretary, or Home Secretary, or Secretary for India, all of which offices, with that of President besides, and the prerogative of peace and war heaped upon all, are combined in the person of the Viceroy, who has to fill them without a Parliament, amid a population infinitely less submissive, and aided by persons of whose character, history, and capacity he can at first know nothing. Imagine the whole patronage of Great Britain in Lord Mayo's hands! yet that patronage is of infinitely less importance to the people than the patronage of India is to her population. A feeble Secretary here may shake a Ministry, a feeble judge may double the work of the Bar, an unorthodox Bishop may create a schism, a courtier Colonel may ruin a regiment; but in India a feeble Chief Commissioner may desolate a province, a bad Commandant may foster an emeute into insurrection, a stupid diplomatist may involve us in the expense, if not the bloodshed, of a great civil war. Yet the distribution of patronage is one of the smallest powers the Government is about to entrust to a man on whom after sixteen years of public life his own party would not bestow a substantive appointment at home. It is hard to believe that Mr. Disraeli has chosen Lord Mayo as the fittest man at his disposal; harder to believe that he feels compelled to award him the one grand prize within his gift; hardest of all to avoid suspecting that India has been sacrificed in order that Mr. Disraeli should be easily relieved of a political burden. We do not wish to see the great Satrapies of the Empire vacated with every change of Ministry; but if Lord Mayo sails in November for Calcutta, the Liberal Ministry will in December be justified in ordering his recall.

THE PORT CANNING COMPANY.—The case of the Port Canning Company has been adjourned till November next, to admit of a commission issuing for the examination of defendants now in London. The case has still to be gone into on the merits as at this hearing, only certain preliminary issues of law were decided. The third of these, on which the plaintiff company sought a decree on the principal defendant's written statement, has been decided in favour of Mr. Schiller.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. . . . I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history . . . and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. . . . I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune.

"J. W. KAYE."

From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. . . . Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employee of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the EXAMINER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

THE TEXTILE MANUFACTURES AND THE COSTUMES OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA

Prepared under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

By J. FORBES WATSON, Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial quarto, morocco back, cloth, with numerous coloured Photographs. 23. 6s.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

THE TIMES.—"On no point, perhaps, in regard to India, has greater ignorance prevailed in England than in respect to the clothing of her vast population. Late as it is, and for the first time within the last hundred years of our Indian domination, the work just completed by Dr. Forbes Watson supplies this great and almost unaccountable want of information, and supplies it, too, in a most complete and intelligible manner. It would be impossible to follow Dr. Watson's work in detail; but, whether to the manufacturer or to the general reader, the interest throughout will continue unbroken. His book is written in a clear and thoroughly intelligible style throughout; it is handsomely got up, and embellished by numerous coloured photographs, from which the various styles of costumes and portions of clothing, male and female, will be more readily understood than from mere descriptions."

THE ATHENÆUM.—"We may safely say that a more important work on the manufactures of India has never been given to the public, than the Industrial Museum, and this Commentary by Dr. Forbes Watson. Advantages are sometimes slow to follow, even when the channel for them has been skilfully made and clearly marked out, but we certainly do anticipate very great results from this work, and that before long its author will be acknowledged to deserve a place amongst the real benefactors of India."

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.—"It is a matter of national importance to study and ascertain what the traditions of India in respect to dress really are. This task has been most ably performed by Dr. Forbes Watson in the volume before us. We call attention to the work and to the subject, not as a matter of mere curiosity, but as an inquiry of direct interest to the manufacturing industry of Europe. Dr. Watson has evidently brought his personal Indian experience to bear upon a mass of materials which, in less skilled hands, would most likely have proved wearisome and unintelligible. As he has arranged his details, they are as entertaining to the general reader as they are full of information and instruction to the manufacturer."

THE MORNING POST.—"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, because neither analysis nor extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains, and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce."

THE ART JOURNAL.—"The work, indeed, is as well fitted, as far as embellishment is concerned, for the drawing-room table as it is for the study; and its contents will be found far more interesting to the general reader than its mere designation would lead to a supposition that it might be. The motive and purpose of its publication is highly creditable to the present Home Government of India."

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE

APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE

POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

BY

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1814 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1860.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1859, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with a sequel to a standard work. . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter, comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshah . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojrat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

All varieties of ulcerations, bad legs, sores, wounds, and eruptions can be cured by the diligent use of this cooling, soothing, and healing unguent. The old and oft-failing fashion of strapping the edges of ulcers together with plaster has entirely given way before the more reasonable treatment by Holloway's Ointment, which builds up from the bottom of the ground with sound and healthy granulations; these gradually grow until they reach the level of the surface, then contract, harden, and immediately become covered with new and wholesome skin. The proper application of this Ointment diminishes the inflammation, causes the unhealthy discharge first to grow thick, then to cease, when the swelling disappears, and the natural shape is restored.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED

STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."

It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB'S residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to MR. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, MR. Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, July 21; Agra, July 18; Calcutta July 16; Madras, July 15.

The Bombay Bank Commission has got through three more sittings, making eleven in all. Among the new witnesses examined were Mr. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, one of the ordinary directors, and Mr. C. E. Chapman, a Government director of the old Bank. The latter had to answer a long string of queries touching the twenty-five lakhs of rupees which Premchund Roychund borrowed from the Bank in April, 1866, only a few weeks before his own failure. Mr. Chapman deposed that he had been made a director by virtue of his being Accountant-general, not through any special fitness on his part. The Government directors, he said, were liable to replace each other continually, and always looked for guidance and information on commercial affairs to the ordinary directors. With regard at any rate to "one large transaction" they were kept in ignorance of facts which ought to have been revealed to them by their colleagues. Before Mr. Chapman pointed out the fact there had been no proper audit of the Bank accounts. Mr. Chapman went on to show how easily Premchund Roychund got his last big loan from the Bank, on no other grounds in fact than a threat to stop payment if the money were not forthcoming. One of the directors, Mr. Tracey, after conferring with the great native defaulter, came back to tell his colleagues that "really, if they caused Premchund so much trouble, he would prefer stopping," rather than give them the information they wanted. The two Government directors gave unwilling assent to the proceedings of their more professional colleagues; being afraid to incur the responsibility of saying nay, and so precipitating the crisis they foresaw. "We knew," says Mr. Chapman, "what the result of Premchund's stoppage would be." The same witness charges Mr. Tracey with having kept his non-professional colleagues in the dark as to the extent of Premchund's embarrassments. In fact, it seems that the Government directors were expected to play the part of dummies, knowing nothing and asking no questions about matters connected with the management of the bank. If they ever did ask a question, they either got no answer or else an evasive one. Mr. Rustomjee Jamsetjee's evidence goes to show that, of the fourteen lakhs set down to his account, nearly ten were debts incurred by his brother and brother-in-law, for which he afterwards became responsible, and nearly half of which he had repaid, in addition to his own direct liabilities, before the bank broke. Mr. Lidderdale had to undergo a second fire of questions from Sir C. Jackson touching his asserted visit to the Governor on the day when Premchund got his great loan. But no amount of pressing could make him remember any details of the interview, in spite of the President's reiterated expressions of surprise that his mind should be "a sort of blank sheet on that subject." As the witness explained however, Sir Charles naturally attached more importance to the affair now than he himself had done at the time, "for all the directors thought they were amply secured."

MR. DICKSON, secretary of the Bank of Bengal, has written to repudiate the letter ascribed to him by Mr. Foggo, touching the practice of his Bank in the granting of loans on shares. The writer of the letter was Mr. Cooke, who officiated in Mr. Dickson's absence; and the letter itself has been published in disproof of Mr. Foggo's version of it. But after all it disproves nothing, for although "as a matter of principle the directors object to advance on any joint-stock shares," we are presently told that "the manner in which advances are and can be legitimately made on such stock is this, to take a promissory note from the borrower payable on demand, and to receive the certificates of stock as collateral security."

THE Court-martial on Captain Cameron, of the Madras Staff Corps, has found him guilty on three out of four counts of the indictment, and sentenced him to be cashiered for drunkenness and neglect of duty. In confirming the sentence Sir W. Mansfield opined that a verdict on the fourth count should also have been given against the prisoner. From the facts elicited on the trial it seems that the sentence is out of all proportion to the offence. An officer of long standing and high character gets drunk apparently through exhaustion rather than excess of liquor, and is turned out of the service in disgrace; the Commander-in-Chief grumbling that he has not been convicted of lying as well as drinking. But Sir W. Mansfield can be as much too lenient as he seems in this case too stern; only the leniency is reserved for the lower ranks of the army. A colour-sergeant at Dugshai kicks his wife so violently as to cause her death. He is convicted of having "voluntarily caused her grievous hurt on provocation," and receives the light sentence of a year's imprisonment, for an act which a sterner Court, the Court for instance that tried Captain Cameron, might have found worthy of death or lifelong incarceration. But Sir W. Mansfield remits the whole punishment for five reasons. The prisoner's character was exemplary and his temper good. He assaulted his wife under cruel provocation. He was suffering from "strong excitement," caused by "previous conviviality." He was known to be a kind and considerate husband. And lastly the assault was sudden and unpremeditated. We need hardly point out the exquisite pertinence of this reasoning. Colour-sergeant Carthy is a brave and worthy old soldier, and his wife may have given him provocation too cruel to be borne by the best of tempers. But he may certainly congratulate himself on the leniency of his judges, and on the Commander-in-Chief's eccentric view of the whole proceeding. We only hope that no more soldiers will be tempted to kick their wives to death under the strong excitement of previous conviviality.

At Chinsura an officer of the 12th Foot has been brought to trial for a singular case of indiscipline. Lieutenant Macdonnell refused to obey a depot-order which required officers to ascertain by personal inspection whether the privates under them wore the cholera belt according to regulations. He justified his refusal on the plea that he could nowhere find it laid down as the duty of a gentleman, that he should "make a daily inspection of half-naked soldiers, to ascertain whether or not they are wearing flannel belts." A soldier, he argued, should be properly dressed when he "comes into the presence of an officer." The duty in question has usually been discharged by non-commissioned officers, and it can hardly be considered the duty of a gentleman; but we cannot see how "the bringing of an officer into so close a contact with his men" must necessarily lead to "that familiarity which is the destruction of discipline." Captain Brown may have issued an unreasonable order, but Lieutenant Macdonnell has not much reason for flatly disobeying it.

In assuming that no English offender had hitherto been punished for adultery under the Indian code, we overlooked the case of Mr. Crawford, who was sentenced seven or eight months ago to a year's imprisonment for that offence. The last mail's papers inform us that the remainder of his punishment has been remitted by the Government of the North-West Provinces, not because the penalty was too great for the offence, but because the "unfortunate wife" has to a great extent been involved in the suffering meant for the husband alone. The plea for remission is hard to reconcile with the previous avowal. Is it right to remit a just penalty because some one else indirectly suffers from it? If so, punishment becomes a farce, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred. Adultery is not a savoury theme to handle, but we may ask by the way on what principle of fairness Europeans in India are punished as felons for an offence which European law recognises only as matter for a civil suit. And why is the male offender alone liable to the penalties of the Penal Code?

SEVERAL of the Indian papers have been hammering at the grievance first started by the Times of India, touching the unequal pressure of taxation in Bombay and Bengal, as produced by the permanent settlement of Lord Cornwallis. While the assessment of Bengal Proper averages £14. 14s. the square mile, that of Bombay averages no less than £11. 8s. In spite of this difference, Bengal comes in for as large a proportion of the imperial outlay as her heavier-weighted rival. This should be remedied not by giving Bombay a settlement which has proved but a doubtful boon to Bengal, but rather by making the landholders of Bengal contribute much more largely towards the public expenditure on education, roads, and so forth. Such is one view of the matter. On the other hand, we should like to know how much of the revenue raised in Bengal goes towards defraying the cost of governing other provinces. How much of the army expenditure for instance is really paid by the people of a province which needs no garrison worth speaking of? But the whole question of Indian Finance needs reconsidering at an early date.

THE Times of India laughs at the notion once more expressed by Sir John Lawrence, that "the great arterial communication" with Peshawar must always lie on the road to Calcutta. It seems hard for people of a certain age to realise the changes going on around them, else one would think it impossible to ignore the fact that Bombay or Kurrachee is the natural outlet of the future from Peshawar, as surely as Bombay has become the natural centre of India's trade with Europe. Calcutta will continue to draw most of the trade of Eastern Asia, but her Western rival tends more and more to grow into the great commercial capital of Hindostan. Politically also the Western capital is gradually eclipsing the Eastern.

CAPTAIN SLADEN's letter of April 28 from Ponsee to Colonel Fytche takes a cheering view of the prospect before him. His detention at Ponsee since March 6 had been unavoidable. The mulemen who had agreed to go on to Manwyne had deserted him, through the false reports spread by Burmese officials and Khakyen chiefs. The latter had then made heavy claims to compensation for damage done by a jungle fire. That affair settled, a large party of Shans and Khakyens barred the progress of the mission eastward, and a Chinese robber chief lay in wait for the travellers if they should attempt to pass his stronghold. Still Captain Sladen did his best to work on the good feeling of the neighbouring chiefs. Satisfactory answers reached him from Momein. Their effect on the Shan and Khakyen chiefs was most encouraging. The defeat of one of the robber chiefs by the friendly Panthays turned the scale in Sladen's favour, and he was daily expecting to leave Ponsee for Manwyne, as soon as the promised convoy of mules arrived. Failing these, he would "do away with baggage altogether, and trust to the country for supplies of all kinds." He thus hoped to push his way from Momein to Talifoo, if he could safely do so. All his difficulties he traces to the double-dealing of the Burmese officials. Let us hope that the King's recent professions of goodwill and his present of money will smoothe those difficulties away. Captain Sladen writes at 4,000 feet above the sea-level, in a climate which he calls "perfection." The soil in those mountain-ranges is "abundantly fertile." Opium and tobacco "grow in profusion. Tea would be a certain success." All the fruit-trees of Europe grow wild there. We shall hear more about this inviting country by-and-by from Dr. Anderson, Sladen's fellow-traveller.

ANOTHER bold explorer, Mr. Cooper, is still somewhere on the way from China to Thibet; no one knowing exactly where. Jung Bahadoor however has promised to use all his influence in securing him a safe passage through Thibet. Whether he will keep his promise or has much influence to use, is another question. His own dispute with the Chinese seems for the moment to have been patched up.

THE Government of India has at length issued the order for six months' batta to the troops that served in Abyssinia. It is to be paid "as soon as practicable."

THE Som Prokash has a higher opinion of native ability than Englishmen are likely to hold. It challenges denial of the fact that "natives discover higher qualifications than Europeans do." Once on a time indeed we used to beat the natives in these respects, and therefore had some right to govern them. But now we have lost that art, and the people are discontented at the preference still shown for English judges and magistrates, who are vastly inferior to native officers in the same line. Well, a little self-conceit helps one a long way in this world.

A RARE shower of honours has just rained down on the lucky heroes of the bloodless campaign against Theodore. To read the long list of Knight Commanders and Companions of the Bath one would think that we had just come out of a Punjaub or Crimean campaign. One Major-general, six A.D.C.'s to the Queen, two K.C.B.'s, and twenty-six C.B.'s, nine Colonels, seventeen Brevet-Lieutenant-colonels, and thirty Brevet-majors, are a pretty handsome acknowledgment of work done. To borrow a hint from the Pall Mall Gazette, what more could any one desire? Well, a little silence, let us say, for the future, with some special remembrance for Lieutenant Prideaux, and a handsome recompense to poor Consul Cameron for years of cruel and undeserved suffering.

CHOLERA has begun to leave its usual marks on various parts of India. In the Central Provinces its ravages have been great, and have not spared the troops at Kamptee. At Pooree, in Orissa, thirteen hundred pilgrims are said to have died of the scourge. Distress prevails in some part of the Nizam's dominions, and at Malwa grain is selling at seven seers only the rupee. A thousand people are said to have perished in the late floods in Orissa.

RITUALISM is making a stir in India. It is even asserted that young ladies go to confession in Calcutta Cathedral as naturally as if they were going to St. Peters, at Rome. What next?

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THURSDAY, August 20, 1868.

THE LATE DR. DUNCAN FORBES.

A NAME of no small mark in connection with British India has just disappeared from the list of living worthies. On the 17th of this month Dr. Duncan Forbes passed out of the world in a quiet sleep after seventy years of a useful and blameless life. Born in 1798, of poor but respectable Scotch parentage, young Duncan began earning part of his own livelihood at the ripe age of twelve. From tending cattle he proceeded a few years later to act as schoolmaster over boys, some of whom were older than himself. During the long summer holidays he divided his time between labour in the fields and hard study as pupil in a neighbouring school. Teaching one half the year and learning the other half, he at length in 1818 left the highlands to enter the Perth Grammar School. There also the young scholar paid his way by teaching private pupils after school hours. In 1820 he gained an exhibition at St. Andrew's, where he lived frugally and studied hard for about three years, qualifying himself for the M.A. degree. At length the offer of Rs. 100 a month besides board and lodging tempted the young man out to India, to help in conducting the Calcutta Academy. Two years of India however proved too much for his health, and in 1826 he sailed home to seek a livelihood in London itself.

The next seven years Mr. Forbes spent mainly in teaching the pupils first of Dr. Gilchrist, afterwards of Mr. Arnot. The knowledge he had gained of Eastern languages in India enabled him to make his way as a teacher in the same line. In 1837, three years after Mr. Arnot's death, he became Professor of Oriental Languages in King's College. From that time his life flowed on in comparative smoothness. He was fond of work, could always command a certain number of private pupils, and a fair amount of profit on the books he published for the good of students in Persian, Hindustani, and other Eastern tongues. What young cadet or civilian has never heard of his Hindustani Grammar and Dictionary, and by how few travellers to India has his Hindustani Manual been left unbought? His editions of the "Bagh-o-Bihar" and the "Baital Pachisi," are they not the text-books of all who would qualify themselves in India for staff employ? Dr. Forbes had the great merit of imparting his own knowledge to others in clear, simple, straightforward terms, making no pretence to depth or originality, but aiming only, as he often declared, to benefit those who sought instruction at his hands. He wrote and taught for the many, not the few; and the many who lack time or taste for deeper scholarship found in him an easy, safe, and serviceable guide on a road which former learners had to make their way over as they best could, with the help of Gilchrist and Shakespear.

In 1846 Dr. Forbes received from St. Andrew's the degree of LL.D., an honour bestowed but three times before, it appears, during the present century. True to his principle of wearing out rather than rusting out, he died in harness after a few months of gradual decay. Barring an occasional visit to his kindred and a trip or two on the Continent, his life in England had been spent in steady work and lonely relaxation. For politics and the pleasures of the world he never, in his own words, "cared a straw." His Scotch thriftiness, fostered no doubt by years of necessary self-denial, marked his manner of living to the last. He who had laboriously earned the price of his own schooling, who saved money in India to pay for his outfit, who afterwards in London lived on half-a-crown a-week, begrudged himself all but the merest necessities in his later years. His dealings with his publishers seem to have been marked by a rare reciprocity of goodwill. That an author should be satisfied with his share of the bargain is not an every-day event; but how many authors have ever remembered their publishers in their wills? Yet it is none the less true that Dr. Forbes has made his publisher one of his executors, and has left a legacy to each member of the firm.

GRIEVANCES TO MEND.

WHAT a good thing it is for many people that Parliament sits for only half the year! But for the dead season in British politics, what a multitude of minor questions would remain unnoticed of our leading newspapers! Complaints about the length and dullness of sermons, discussions on the possibility of marrying on three hundred a-year, suggestions for remedying the misdeeds of railway directors, schemes for tunnelling the Channel, utilising sewage, or bringing pure water to London from the Westmoreland Lakes, how else could such topics have a chance of wide ventilation at the hands of a far-reaching press? The "silly season" may have its drawbacks, and indeed we cannot deny that it does encourage the growth of a rare crop of foolish ideas and absurd speculations. But folly too has its uses and its excuses; and there is not a little wheat to be found growing up among all those tares. Not all correspondents write foolishly, and journalists have a decided preference for topics looking towards some practical end. If people with a grievance are apt to cry a little too loudly over their alleged wrongs, still a large proportion of the grievances are genuine and great enough to justify the appeal to public sympathy.

Happy is the man who can get his grievance aired in any of the leading journals. Terque quaterque beati they who can secure a hearing through the leading columns of the Times. We congratulate the Bengal civilians on having found so sure a foothold on the way towards ultimate redress of what seems to us a real injustice. In an article published some days ago, the Times exposed the manifest unfairness of the system which withholds from a Bengal civilian all compensation for surplus payments made towards his retiring pension. Every covenanted civilian has to pay towards his future pension of £1,000 a-year half of the capital equivalent to that amount, the Indian Government making up the remainder. But how if a civil servant has paid up more than his half? Is it not just and reasonable to assume that in all such cases the overpayments would be refunded? That is or rather was the rule, it seems, in Madras and Bombay. But in Bengal things have been managed differently. A civilian who has paid up less than his moiety must make the balance good, or receive a smaller annuity; but all over-payments go to the benefit of his employers. Not a penny will they give him back, nor can he get more than the outside sum of £1,000 a-year, if he retire from the service after fifty years instead of twenty-five. Here surely is a grievance worth considering, a wrong which could at once be righted by a stroke of the pen, at a cost which nobody would feel for a moment. The unfairness of such a rule speaks for itself. It can no longer indeed be averred that Bengal gets one measure and Madras another, for all three presidencies now fare alike. But the uniform injustice, however comforting to the original sufferers, will sit none the less heavily on their new partners in misfortune, while all alike must feel a common resentment at the widening of a partial into a general wrong.

There are other grievances which may be commended to the notice of the leading journals between this date and the next session of Parliament. The officers of the Bengal army have not been fairly treated in the matter of their claims to bonus compensation. There has been a great show of liberal dealing, but very little indeed of the substance. Lord Cranborne's speech in Parliament held out promises which his subsequent despatch to India did not fulfil, and that again had its meaning pared down and turned to naught in the instructions of the Indian Government to the Presidency Committees. Every conceivable deduction was made from officers' claims, and no sort of allowance permitted for considerations telling in their favour. As one of the sufferers remarked in our last issue, "after a period of two years the whole affair has resulted in an absolute fiasco." Not a few claimants have received nothing at all, after waiting for several years in the sickness of hope deferred. The bulk of the remainder have been put off with a few pounds a-piece instead of the hundreds that were reasonably their due. So far from amounting to fifty thousand pounds, we question if the mockery of compensation hitherto awarded has reached a tenth of that sum. And this is the net result of Parliamentary enactments and official promises, on the strength of which too many officers believed that, after due waiting, something like justice would be done to their just claims! Whenever the question of doing away with purchase in her Majesty's army shall come up for practical solution, we know what care will be taken to guard the officers of that army from all pecuniary hurt. But then they have so many friends in high places, and people with a turn for quibbling may argue that purchase was never legally sanctioned in the old company's service.

One little grievance more and we have done for the present. There are a few officers in the non-purchase regiments who feel justly aggrieved at the sentence which debars them from sharing in the right of second choice conceded to their former comrades in the local corps by the general order of 1866. By that order, which repealed the crude one of 1861, all officers of the old Indian army were declared free to choose once more between staying where they were and entering the Staff Corps without test or condition. Such at least was the tenour of the original decree, as expounded by Lord Cranborne in the House of Commons. But the published warrant excluded officers of non-purchase corps from their share of the common boon. Reasons of convenience may be pleaded in excuse of such an arrangement; but the question is not one of mere convenience. The original ordinance having been set aside, it is only fair that all who acted upon it should be equally free to revise their former decision, to avail themselves of any change for the better opened out by the new warrant.

THE EUPHRATES VALLEY RAILWAY.

If any one who has heard of Mr. W. P. Andrew's long-cherished scheme for a railway along the valley of the Euphrates retains a lurking doubt as to the practical advantages of such a scheme for bringing England nearer to India, let him read a very suasive pamphlet, called "From London to Lahore," which has just been reprinted from Bentley's Miscellany for July. It will not take him many minutes to read through, and when that is done his scepticism will have been tough indeed if it still holds out against the eloquent pleadings of a writer who knows how to clothe what some might deem an unattractive subject in the charms of a graceful and imaginative style.

Viewed indeed on its imaginative side, the scheme in question has much to recommend it. Some minds will be readily caught by a well-timed allusion to the classic days of Herodotus, Alexander, and Trajan, all of whom saw or sailed down the Euphrates. Seleucia, whence St. Paul embarked for Cyprus; Antioch, "rich in memories of early persecuted Christianity;" Aleppo, Bagdad, and the waters of Babylon, are names that lead the imagination captive even in these prosaic days. There is a strange historic charm about "the great alluvial plains of Mesopotamia, the arable lands of Armenia, Babylonia, and Chaldaea;" and one's fancy readily warms at the mention of "our own lion-hearted Richard," and Saladin, and Tancred, and Godfrey de Bouillon.

But the writer can play on more chords than one. Our national self-esteem is stirred by the picture of French progress on the Isthmus of Suez, and of Russian enterprise hewing its way through Central Asia. If the Suez Canal is nearly finished, and the steamers of the Messageries Impériales ply regularly between France and India, ought not we English to be up and doing likewise? Russia is stretching out a longer and yet longer arm over Persia and the Turkoman Khanates, and the shadow of her influence already rests on Herat. Are we to look idly on, and make no timely effort to reduce the distance between England and Hindostan? Look at the French again, who, not content with their success in Egypt, "already contemplate making a road from Alexandretta to the Euphrates," as a first step towards improving the means of transit between the Mediterranean and the Persian Gulf. Will England do nothing "to improve her position in the East, to enlarge her commercial relations, to secure her political power, regain her prestige," and so forth?

The plan itself, moreover, is not new. As far back as 1830 the Euphrates Valley was surveyed by order of William IV., with a view to using it as a shorter road to India. General Chesney, Sir J. Macneil, Captain Lynch, Mr. W. Ainsworth, Captain Charlewood, R.N., Captain Selby, and other competent witnesses have reported favourably on the route in question. Dr. James Thomson had made some way towards securing the countenance of the English and Turkish Governments, when death removed him from the scene of his unrewarded labours. The next person who took up the scheme in earnest, as a great public question, was Mr. W. P. Andrew, the well-known advocate of railway enterprise in India. By that time of course it was evident that the desired road through Mesopotamia must be a railroad. In 1856, after several years' stirring of the matter, he laid his scheme before the East India Company and the English Government. It was received with high favour on all sides, by the Court of Directors, by Lord Clarendon, then Foreign Minister, by the Prime Minister, Lord Palmerston, and by our Ambassador at Constantinople, Lord Stratford de Redcliffe.

Next year, in June, Mr. Andrew, with a deputation of eighty noblemen and gentlemen of mark, was introduced by Lord Shaftesbury to the Prime Minister. General Chesney was also there, to add the weight of his experience and scientific name to the cause so ably pleaded by Mr. Andrew. Sir W. F. Williams of Kars could speak to the working capacity of the Arabs; Sir Justin Sheil attested the political importance of the line; and Mr. Horsfall answered for the desire of English merchants and manufacturers to see the project speedily carried out. The public opinion of the day declared itself strongly on the same side; and a French writer in the Revue Contemporaine lamented that his own countrymen were not equally alive to the advantage of joining in such an enterprise.

Unluckily the mutiny came to put Mr. Andrew's project on one side for the time being; but he had no idea of giving it up. During the last two or three years it has again been laid before the Government; the Sultan has granted a concession of the line; and the one hitch in the way of its execution is the want of a Government guarantee for the first outlay. The line itself from Alexandretta to the Persian Gulf could be made for eight-and-a-half millions, the only engineering difficulties being to be found between Alexandretta and Aleppo. There is no need, in fact, for carrying it at once the whole way: a beginning could easily be made from the Mediterranean coast to Bagdad, whence a line of steamers already plies to the Persian Gulf and Western India. Carry out this section of 500 miles, and the chain of intercourse would be practically complete; for the steamers that now run from Brindisi to Alexandria could run almost as quickly to Alexandretta, which boasts a harbour large and deep enough for ships of any tonnage. The journey to India would even then be shortened by a few days, and the new route in point of climate is very much pleasanter than that by the hateful and often hurtful Red Sea.

The whole distance from Alexandretta to Bussorah is about 850 miles, or less than the distance from Calcutta to Delhi. The proposed railway would carry goods and passengers at a cheaper and quicker rate than the line by the Red Sea. There would be no difficulty in finding the labour, or in guarding the line from the attacks of roving Arabs. The railway would remain under English management, would indeed be virtually our own. A grant of the land has already been obtained from the Sultan, who is ready, we believe, to help on the work in other ways. According to Mr. Andrew's careful estimates, a net profit of at least five-and-a-half per cent. might be expected in a very few years from the regular trade between Europe and the chief towns of Mesopotamia alone, to say nothing of profits accruing from the carriage of troops, and from any new development of our trade with Persia and Central Asia.

One thing only is wanting to start the enterprise, and that is a Government guarantee for a term of years. If the few millions needed cannot be raised without one, we see no reason why it should not be given by the English Government, but many reasons why the Indian Government should not be solely, if even partly, responsible for a scheme that would mainly benefit the interests of English policy and English trade. It is a question for England rather than India, and from England therefore should come the guarantee.

As compared again with Mr. Hyde Clark's rival scheme for a line of railway from Constantinople to Kurrachee, Mr. Andrew's line claims first consideration on many accounts. It would be more purely an English line, maintained by Englishmen for England's special use. Its maintenance would depend less on the uncertain course of foreign politics. At one end its connection with India would be guaranteed by our command of the Eastern Seas. At the other it would be linked on to the railway system of a friendly Italian Power, or by an English line of Mediterranean steamers. It would cost very much less to make than the rival line, and if at some distant date that line were to become an accomplished fact, the Euphrates Valley Railway would form a ready-made and necessary section of the larger scheme.

Is it not therefore our safest plan to attempt the smaller enterprise, which will ensure us a railway open in a few years under British keeping, and will place Kurrachee within a fortnight's journey from this country?

Spirit of the Indian Press.

AN IMPERIAL EXECUTIVE FOR INDIA.

The Times of India, quoting Sir S. Northcote's query,—“How far the identification of the Supreme Government with that of a particular presidency, which under the present arrangement seems to a great extent inevitable, is consistent with the proper discharge of its duties to the whole of India,” thinks it ought not to require much discussion to reveal, nor a revolution to carry into effect, the principle so often referred to by the Indian Secretary. To call up members from Bombay and Madras to the Supreme Legislative Council, and at the same time refuse to admit them to the Executive Council, is little better than a farce and a mockery. Mr. Arbutnot lays firm hold of the evil, and would make the Supreme Legislative Council coterminous with the Executive. The gist of the whole question is, how to extend and confer executive functions? We cannot have representative institutions in the Western sense, and the sooner we devise and carry out, under Eastern methods, the principle of provincial representation, associated with Imperial and central authority, the better it will be for this great empire. To use a very apt phrase introduced by the Viceroy, we have more than enough of “playing at legislation,” which “detracts from the vigour and efficiency of the Executive.” With regard to the Viceroy's minute of March last, we need say little in this connection. The strong practical sense with which the paper abounds is to be admired, but as a contribution to the special Imperial question—Where should the capital of India be placed? the document is rendered nugatory by the obsolete geographical conceptions which underlie paragraphs 33 and 34. His Excellency has not yet unlearned the notion that the way to India is round the Cape, or he would never, as a central fibre of his argument, have spoken of “the great arterial communication between Calcutta and Peshawur.” Statesmen who cannot estimate the waste of time, energy and treasure which is caused by the retention of that artificial route as a “great arterial communication” are disqualified from writing on the question. All such conventional notions as that Calcutta is the entrance to India, require time for their obliteration. When two or three more Viceroys have entered India by way of Bombay they will have discovered that “the great arterial communication” between England and India, or between London and Peshawur if required, is the overland route, in a few years to be superseded by the Persian Gulf highway. Why Sir John Lawrence should attach so much importance to Peshawur it is not easy to understand. We thought he had outgrown the provincial notion that some formidable invader may come over that desolate frontier. Though it is only so much by-play in the discussion, Sir John Lawrence's doughty defence of Simla, and his utter abolishing of the pretentious Sir H. Durand on that side issue, is not a little amusing amongst these State papers.

MILITARY RULE FOR THE PUNJAB FRONTIER.

The Delhi Gazette is no advocate for the exercise of irresponsible power by judicial officers in general. But the frontier is a special case. There we have to deal with semi-barbarians, and the only way to deal effectively with them is by the semi-barbarous system of quasi martial law. The frontier has never been in such good order as when it was the custom to make the commandants of the local corps deputy-commissioners with civil powers corresponding to their military. We must have military rule, not civil, for a country whose inhabitants do not know what civilisation is. The whole frontier from the Eusufzye to Scinde should be placed under the authority of one Commissioner of the Trans-Indus States, who should command the frontier force (except in time of actual war), and supervise all the civil and political affairs under the direct orders of the Supreme Government. The officers commanding corps should be invested with civil powers as well as military, and all communication in the sense of subordination to the Punjab Government should cease. It will be said that we are advocating a retrogressive course; that we are for putting the Derajat and Peshawur back from the approach they have made towards civilisation (or to the “regulations,” which is the Indian definition of civilisation) to military law, to the condition of a newly-conquered province. But the truth is, as all frontier officers allow, this advance has been altogether premature. A system of administration such as prevails in older and more advanced provinces, with the procedure of our civil court, appeals, &c., is unsuited to the country. The people do not understand it and have no respect for it. Rough and ready, with all the characteristics of half-tamed savages, they are wholly incapable of appreciating the advantages of a well organised Government. They are to be kept down only by a strong hand, and crime among them can be restrained only by summary process. The knowledge that by an appeal to the Chief Court a criminal can be released and got off scot free, is calculated to weaken dangerously the power of the executive. All that they understand of the process is that, at a distance from the frontier there resides some power capable, if properly managed, of defeating the objects of the executive on the spot by releasing a criminal. Of the necessity of observing rules and regulations in legal procedure, of the law of evidence and so on, they are utterly uninformed. For a man who has the power to imprison, fine, flog, or hang them, they have respect engendered by fear; but for a magistrate who can do neither, without the probability or possibility of his whole proceeding being upset on appeal, they have nothing but contempt. Of course, to administer such a system of Government as that we advocate, and which nine men out of ten believe to be the only system adapted for the frontier, the officers to whose hands such great powers are entrusted must be selected men. We do not wish to make any invidious remarks, but we simply throw the responsibility on the shoulders of the man who must bear it. Sir John Lawrence knows this frontier; he knows that all we have said of it is true; and he knows of what importance it is to have it secured by the supervision of efficient men. He also knows whether it is so secured at present.

THE PERMANENT SETTLEMENT.

The Englishman agrees with the Times of India touching the monstrous inequality of taxation which has been produced, by the different nature of the land assessment, in the permanently settled districts of these provinces and the sister presidency. Under the permanent settlement the richest lands in the empire, he shows, pay a land revenue of £14. 4s. only per square mile, with a guarantee that it shall never, under any circumstances, be increased, while the Bombay Presidency, with inferior natural advantages, pays £44. 8s. per square mile, with the liability to indefinite enhancement. There is no denying these facts; and, as far as we can see, there is no defending either the justice of the inequality, or the policy of Lord Cornwallis. That no real advantage has been conferred on the people of Bengal is evident from a comparison of the condition of the peasantry here with that of their Bombay brethren; while we certainly have not secured either enterprising, or philanthropic, or grateful landowners by the sacrifice of at least three-fourths of the revenue. The thirty years' lease is just about to expire in Bombay; and in the first district which has been brought under settlement the assessment has been found to bear so lightly on the people, that it is proposed to raise it 50 per cent. without a chance of exciting serious discontent; and the mere right of occupancy, we are told, sells for seventeen years' purchase of the present assessment. The science of political economy was certainly not much studied in Lord Cornwallis' time. That a light assessment, even if the peasantry got the benefit of it, would be far more likely to stimulate population, or to encourage idleness, than to promote their material prosperity, we could hardly expect him to have foreseen. But we believe the fact to have been that Lord Cornwallis did not foresee that the assessment would in time become an unduly light one. He probably supposed that it would be really, as well as nominally, permanent, and that while the landowner and the peasant would alike profit from the security and certainty ensured them, the State would not suffer any greater loss than that involved in the surrender of the right to assess improvement, either natural or artificial, in the productiveness of the soil. That the value of money in relation to produce would steadily fall, till, in 1868, the assessment should be in reality not a third of what it was in the first instance, either in its incidence on the land, or in its purchasing power to the Government, Lord Cornwallis probably never dreamed. We have been saved by the merest political chance from an extension to this enormous blunder to the whole of India, as was contemplated by Sir Charles Wood; and we have every reason to believe that the authorities, both here and at home, are fully alive both to the fact that an error has been committed, and the serious embarrassment it is likely to produce; but the question still remains how the present glaring inequality of the land assessment is to be removed, or rather the more practical question how the inelasticity and growing deterioration of our most important source of revenue is to be remedied. The Times of India says, "this is the fiscal problem of our time in India, and it must be solved." Can it be solved? One advantage we are already deriving from the admission by our leading men of the error that has been committed. The plea that the landowners of Bengal are as such exempted from all further taxation is no longer treated with the same tenderness as formerly. Sir John Lawrence's able despatch on the education question is a proof of this. The determination to localise all Imperial charges to which the process can conveniently be applied, is an approach towards a partial solution of the problem. But it is far from being capable of affording a perfect solution of it.

The Indian Daily News holds that the rest of India is taxed to improve the permanently settled estates of Bengal, while the State derives no advantage from the expenditure and the improvement. It is amazing how ever such a system could have been conceived by an English statesman, and advocated by politicians and journalists, and altogether surpasses our comprehension. There can be no reason why Bombay should pay from three to four hundred per cent. more than Bengal for land probably not worth half the value. It is true that the peasantry prosper under such an assessment or rental, and therefore we conclude they are not paying more than it is worth. But if this be so Bengal must be most inadequately assessed, and is receiving an undue share of governmental favour. When railways are constructed under guarantee of the State, roads made, rivers bridged to open up markets to the produce of the land, it is surely not unreasonable that the land which thus benefits should give something in return. It would scarcely be extravagant to say that railways in Bengal have doubled the value of the land. They have necessitated the construction of new roads, and have opened out land previously closed and almost inaccessible. Still the land revenue or rent is a Mede and Persian law that changes not, and works only to the advantage of a section while bearing with great hardship on the rest. There is the problem to solve, and solved it must be, difficult as it appears. We are not prepared to indicate the mode; but if other temporarily settled districts are to be enhanced fifty per cent. at each generation, it seems to us that a "permanent settlement" is a simple impossibility, and the solution of the difficulty may be left to time, which will gain strength with every enhancement, and ultimately set matters right, as Elliott says, "stormily or tranquilly."

A DOMESTIC VIEW OF FURLOUGH TO EUROPE.

The Indian Daily News asks whether the new facilities of locomotion and leave to England have made men more content with their lot in India; has the change been beneficial to themselves and favourable to public interests? The most desirable manifestation of the latter would be a greater local interest and attachment to the country on the part of its rulers. Truly speaking, however, there are very few men of the next generation who will return, like Sir

Cecil Beadon, after a long career, "almost a stranger to England." Indian homes are far more frequently found empty of their brightest ornaments in these days than in the past, and are daily developing into the character of merely temporary habitations. If the voyage was tedious and the separation prolonged in the time when letters were despatched by sailing vessels, the absences from home are now more frequent and the expenses greater. The very facilities of locomotion, that make Englishmen more reconciled to this country, contribute to this. There is less hesitation about leaving India, and greater inclination to remain away. Children may be sent home at an earlier age, and stay for more prolonged periods at school, for parents receive accounts of them weekly, and there is only a month between them. Wives are less anxious about returning, because "the letters are delivered so regularly every week," and if any urgent contingency arises, the voyage can be made in a month—nothing formidable. And under such circumstance a larger number quit India annually, in many cases indolently postponing a return. This involves a greater extent of furlough for the solitary official in India who will find when he retires that he has spent nearly a third of his period of service in suites of rooms, in boarding establishments, and paid a very considerable sum to the P. and O. Company, while his health is as bad as it might have been under previous circumstances, and he has often missed some of the sweetest comforts of life. There is another view—that which the furlough rules contemplate; give a man the opportunity of recruiting his health in his native land, and he will return vigorously revived to his duties. And another that may be added—it is desirable to maintain the thoroughly English character of the services, and no better means could be resorted to than allowing Englishmen to frequently visit their homes. Such a spirit, and the means by which it is promoted, will serve both the individual and the State, but it is encouraged under certain rules, and rules in a household on such a subject would never be tolerated. Yet there are many men who, for the sake of their purse, their comfort, and their happiness, wish they could rule in this matter as the Viceroy rules. Weighing the two conditions of society old and new, it is doubtful whether the latter is an improvement in this particular respect. We feel more of the good old English influences amongst us, but there is none the less of evil. It may be a great comfort for a man in India, with his family in England, to congratulate himself on comparing the advantages and disadvantages of the present with those of the past. But the aggregate of the past and present will be found equivalent—the larger number of married men, now in India making the latter look less favourable than otherwise. If absence, anxieties, and expenses were in those days very prolonged and heavy, in these they are more frequent. And it can scarcely be said that the men of the present day are better rulers and workers than those of the past.

FURLOUGHS.—The following officers obtained furlough to Europe on medical certificate in July:—Captain Darling, E Battery 16th Brigade, in extension, from July 29 to October 15, to remain in England; Captain McFarlane, 3rd Dragoon Guards, from date of embarkation; Captain Powell, 102nd Foot, from date of embarkation; Lieutenant Jarrett, Adjutant, 4th Bengal Cavalry, for twenty months, under the Regulations of 1868; Surgeon Dale, M.B., of the Medical Department, having been recommended for leave to Europe, on medical certificate, for twenty months, and being entitled to furlough, is allowed furlough for two years under the Regulations of 1868; Mr. Ormsby, Assistant in the Geological Survey of India, has eighteen months' leave under Uncovenanted Service Absentee Rules, with effect from the date on which he may avail himself of the leave; The undermentioned officers were permitted by the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay army, commanding the Abyssinian Field Force, to proceed to Europe on leave of absence:—Captain Stewart, of the late 35th Regiment N.I., with the Land Transport Corps in Abyssinia, and Lieut. Hartshorne, Infantry, Quartermaster, 13th (the Shekhawatte) Regiment N.I., with the Mule Train in Abyssinia, for twenty months; Lieutenant Reade, late 67th N.I., for two years, under the Regulations of 1868—this cancels G.G.O. No. 500, Simla, May 20, 1868; Captain Broughton, 2nd wing Subaltern, 44th (Syliet) Regiment N.L.I., for twenty months, under the Regulations of 1868—this cancels the G.G.O. No. 640, July 1, 1868; Assistant-Surgeon Constant, M.D., in medical charge of the 23rd (Punjab) Regiment of N.I. (Pioneers), for twenty months; Lieut.-colonel Black, second in command and squadron officer, Erinpoorah Irregular Force, for six months, under the Regulations of 1868; Mr. Gardner, Assistant Commissioner, reported his departure to Europe on board the mail steamer, which left Bombay on June 23; Lieut. Latham, R.A. has leave for fifteen months; Mr. O'Connor, Bengal police, reported his departure from India per steamship Nubia, which was left at sea by the pilot on June 22.

EXAMINATIONS.—The undermentioned officers have passed by the higher standard in Hindustani:—Captain R. A. W. C. Stuart, 17th Regiment Native Infantry; Captain W. M. Dickinson, Staff Corps; Lieutenant T. J. Baynes, 2nd Batt. 24th Foot; and Ensign J. Butler, 2nd Batt. 19th Foot. The undermentioned officers have passed by the lower standard in Hindustani:—Major W. H. St. Hill, Aide-de-Camp to the Commander-in-Chief; and Captain S. Penny, Royal Artillery.

STATION TALK.

FYZABAD, July 8.—Rain! rain! rain! is in the mouth of every one, and if we did but know the thoughts of animals, or if they could but express themselves in words, I think they too are not insensible of this crying want at this trying period. The heat at present is very great and intense, not moderated even by a breath of air. The consequences will be very serious indeed if it keeps off for a week longer, or even less than that, and we sincerely hope that the forecasts of your weather prophet, "W.," will come to be realised for this once, if they fail ever afterwards, which I do not wish, neither do I believe they will. It has already told on the price of grain of all sorts, and the prices will steadily rise as long as we are not blessed with rain. The natives are filling up the temples of their "Mahadeo" with water till the image of their august deity (which is commonly a block of stone, but sometimes clumsily carved) is completely submerged, but without effect. There is another custom of propitiating the god of rain, which I was not aware of before; five or six boys go together, and in front of every house cry out for water, on which the inmates of the house pour down three or four chatties of water on the ground and the boys roll themselves in it. There is a curious rumour in the bazaar, which is believed, if not by all, at least by most of the natives. It says that a child was born a few days ago (as to the place of its birth there are different versions of the story, for some say it was within the jail, while others say it was within the district) which on the fifth day of its existence very distinctly and loudly cried out that no rain would fall for two months to come, and that it will live till that time and die on the day it rains. The marvellous portion of it is that the child refused to take milk or any other liquid, but asked for parched gram and such like! A soldier belonging to the battery of artillery stationed here died of coup de soleil a few days ago, and it is a wonder that other casualties have not occurred from the same cause, considering that most of the men are new to the country, and have never had the misfortune or fortune of being accustomed to bear such intense heat.

PESHAWUR, July 11.—At length we have lost Major General Dunsford, who has played his part as Brigadier in this valley for nearly four years, and played it well. He has left behind him a garrison full of friends; he bears with him their hearty good wishes; and those who have ever served under him will always bear him a kindly wish; and their warm and hearty congratulations will be waiting ready to greet him on his re-appearance in India at the head of a divisional command. In his place has come Brigadier-General Stewart, than whom a more suitable selection for the command of the Peshawur brigade could not have been made. If this garrison is fortunate in no other way, it is fortunate in having in succession two eminent soldiers as brigadiers. The garrison is the most important in India; and the selection of major-generals as well as of brigadier-generals should always be based on merit and competency.

AGRA, July 12.—A party of native dramatic performers from Poona have lately visited this city, and have already given two performances in Peepulmunde, under the patronage of Moonshee Sheonarain, the well-known photographer and superintendent of the municipal office. On both these occasions they performed their parts admirably, and gave great satisfaction, particularly to the educated natives, who seem to take great interest in this revival of their ancient customs of dramatic play. They intend to give one performance for Europeans in the Metcalfe testimonial, when it is hoped they will meet with every success.

SIMLA, July 10.—Singular weather for the time of year has been prevailing here for some weeks. Instead of the heavy masses of wet clouds and the drenching rain by which Simla is usually visited at this period, days resplendent with sunshine, and nights stagnant and stifling have been our portion. Last evening, however, the appearance of things changed. Heavy clouds, attended by high winds, rolled up from the plains, casting their burden of welcome moisture upon our thirsty sanitarium. It rained heavily at intervals during the night, and Simla this morning looks quite fresh and verdant, though the burning sun has licked up all moisture from the roads, and an unclouded sky seems to prophecy another spell of hot and dry weather. Little news of interest has occurred since my last letter. The general public hear but little of Government doings, and only know that the Council still meets by seeing its members hasten about once a week to Peterhoff, the Viceroy's residence. The Simla tradespeople have lately held a meeting under the able presidency of Mr. Prichard, of the Delhi Gazette, the object being to found a "Tradesmen's Mutual Assistance and Protection Society," in connection with the Indian Association. Such an association would, I should think, be extremely useful to its supporters in Simla, which station must resemble very much, in the matter of its trade, an English seaside watering place. Numbers of visitors run up here for short periods during the season, who, after contracting debts with the tradespeople, slope off without settling to some obscure station in the N. W. P., or the Punjab, where duns are coolly ignored, and decrees cannot be executed. No wonder that the traders are combining to protect their interests as a class, and to recover as far as possible their individual losses.

ALLAHABAD, July 14.—The weather is becoming daily warmer in consequence of the rain holding back. No end of demonstrations of a good down-pour, but the rascally westerly breeze arises, which invariably blows very strong when the clouds come up, and thus deprives us of the anxiously looked-for rain. Khush tatties have again been brought into requisition, and the sickness in the town I am told is something dreadful. There is a tribe of Europeans who have not yet been taken notice of rambling about this station; they very properly come under the nomenclature of "loafers." These abandoned profligates go visiting houses when the gentleman is absent from home on his daily avocation, and finding the lady by herself tell her that her husband told them to call and she would render them some pecuniary assistance, or failing in this stratagem, they do their utmost to frighten her, and by that means extort some money. If, however, by chance they do manage to get a rupee or so, off they start for the native grog-shop, and there indulge freely in mudrack. I know that several ladies of my acquaintance have fallen very ill after a visit from one of these marauders, and I really consider that the magistrate or the police ought to look after the doings of these loose gentlemen, and not permit them to wander about intimidating unprotected females.

DELHI, July 12.—The rains still hold off; everybody and everything, from the "bloated aristocrat" to the little sparrow perched in the verandah, is gasping open-mouthed for rain and cooler weather. Grain is rising daily in price; grass is being parched up by the fierce rays of the sun, and a scorching hot wind; the canal is dry and our water "cut off," so that we are in a nice plight. By the way, how is it that the canal authorities always manage to cut off the water when it is most needed? They have a good deal to answer for this time, for the mud that is left is as black as ink (no exaggeration) and the effluvia from it fearful. In the "Queen's Gardens" it is quite overpowering, and I shall not be surprised to find that pleasant place of resort completely deserted by all who value their health. The old magazine block of buildings, famous for the defence made by poor Willoughby and his subordinates, will soon be metamorphosed into a post-office, a staging bungalow, and a telegraph office. The works are in progress, and we may soon expect to see them completed. It will be a great convenience to the public to have these three offices in one spot so near the railway stations. They as well as the college will be surrounded, and divided by walls of open masonry, and will I think greatly improve that part of the city near the railway station. In one of my recent letters I mentioned the prevalence of crime in the city; I am glad to be able to add that the police have been very successful in capturing most of the thieves, and generally with the property or a considerable portion of it upon them. One gang recently captured had plans of several houses in their possession, so that they were perfectly acquainted with the interiors of their "plants." I think that is the technical term. "Abyssinian heroes" are passing through en route to Simla daily, and they look as if they would be very glad to get there. The journey up from Calcutta must be a warm one just now, especially for the engine drivers and stokers.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

COLONEL WILSON, A.D.C.—Colonel Wilson, D.A.G. has been made an A.D.C. to the Queen, an honor at present enjoyed by no officer of the late Company's Army but Colonel Norman.

RAILWAY LANDS IN NATIVE STATES.—Orders have been issued by Government that all lands made over by native princes for railway purposes are to be considered under the regulations and laws in force in British territories.

NEW SUDDER STATION.—H.E. the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council has directed that the Mehkur district, in West Berar, shall henceforth be designated by the name of the Sudder Station Bouldanah.

OPIUM SALE.—The following is the result of the opium sale held on July 9, at the Exchange Hall:

	Chests.	Highest.	Lowest.	Average.	Proceeds.
Benares ...	1,700	1,365	1,355	1,355-4-5½	23,03,975

BENGAL POLICE MOVEMENTS.—The following Assistant Superintendents of Police are transferred, viz.:—Mr. Johnson, from Midnapore to the 24-Pergunnahs; Mr. Campbell, from Purneah to Midnapore; Mr. Birch, from Maunbhoom to Jessore; Mr. Campbell, from Jessore to Maunbhoom; Mr. Wilkins, from Hooghly to Bhaugulpore.

EXAMINATIONS.—The undermentioned officers are reported to have passed, according to the lower standard, in Hindoostanee on the 14th ult.:—Lieut. H. R. Le M. Carey, 6th foot, and Assistant-Surgeon F. Metcalfe, Medical Department. Mr. H. Gwyther, Assistant Engineer, 2nd grade, Central India, has passed the colloquial examination prescribed in Public Works standing order No. 22 of 1867.

PESHAWUR.—Brigadier-general Stewart arrived at Peshawur from Abyssinia on the evening of July 6, and assumed command of the brigade. Brigadier-general Maxwell, C.B., will command the division during the absence of Major-general Italy on leave to Cashmere; and Colonel MacMahon, C.B., of the 36th Foot, will command the brigade at Rawul Pindce.

COAL ON THE NERBUDDA.—A seam of coal at Lameta Ghat, on the Nerbudda, near Jubbulpore, is now being worked by Mr. Walker, a contractor of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company. The seam was generally well known, but had heretofore been considered a very poor one. From the experiments already made it seems more promising than was anticipated.

REMISSION OF SENTENCE.—We learn that Mr. Crawford, who was sentenced to imprisonment for one year on a charge of adultery brought against him by Mr. Battersby, at Agra, in January last, has had the remainder of his sentence remitted by the Lieut.-Governor, after consultation with the Chief Justice of the High Court of the North-Western Provinces. One of the chief reasons assigned by the Lieut.-Governor for the release of the unfortunate man was that his wife, who was left without any means of support during his imprisonment, would be relieved from her distress.

BATTA FOR ABYSSINIA.—Under instructions from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, his Excellency the Governor-general in Council is pleased to direct the issue, as soon as practicable, of six months' donation batta to the military and naval forces recently employed in Abyssinia. All officers, soldiers, and others, usually entitled to donation batta, who formed part of the expeditionary force and landed at Zoulla, as well as the naval force employed off Zoulla, will receive the above batta, which will be drawn for and paid under instructions to be issued by the Bombay Government.—Gazette of India.

DISCHARGED SOLDIERS.—In supersession of Adjutant General's Circular No. 6 E, dated the 18th of January, 1865, it is notified that soldiers of H. M.'s British regiments who have elected to that service, draw their pension in India, and are awaiting the decision of the Board as to the amount of their pensions, will be permitted to proceed to England, should they desire it, before the completion of their discharge. Such men will be sent home as soldiers, and be furnished with the usual last pay certificates. They will draw pay during the voyage and until their discharge, either from Netley or their depot (according as each soldier is or is not an invalid).

THE CAPTORS OF LIEUTENANT GOOLD.—The Calcutta police may be Vidocqs to a man, but they did not (as the Englishman supposes) apprehend Lieutenant Goold. For all they did that gentleman might be at large still. He was first remarked and suspected as he sat in the refreshment-room of the Allahabad Railway station by Constable O'Callaghan, of the Government Railway Police. O'Callaghan reported his suspicion to Inspector Gardner, also of the Government Railway Police. These two officers considered themselves warranted in taking the object of their attention before the Magistrate of Allahabad, when his identity with the "person wanted" was established.

AN AGENT FOR THE GAYKOOS.—The appointment of an agent to the Gaykoo tribes, near Tounghoo, has been made permanent. Since the employment of a resident officer among these tribes they have remained peaceful. No new quarrels have broken out, and a great deal has been done towards clearing up old misunderstandings. The chiefs themselves admit this, and declare the appointment has been a success, resulting in the benefit of themselves and their tribesmen. They regard the agent with respect as an immediate link between themselves and the Government, and are, equally with the Government, desirous that the present arrangement should continue. The new route used by Shan traders passes through the Gaykoo country.—Englishman.

POSTINGS.—QUEEN'S TROOPS.—Official notification has been received of the undermentioned officers having, on their recent promotion, been posted to the battalions of their regiments specified opposite their names:—7th Foot: Captain Keyser, to 1st Battalion; 19th Foot: Lieutenant Colonel G. B. Jennings, to 2nd Battalion; Major Griffiths, to 1st Battalion; Captain P. D. Williams, and Lieut. A. Roche, to 2nd Battalion; Lieutenant Colonel Jennings and Lieut. Roche are directed to join the 2nd battalion of their regiment; Lieutenant Wells, General List, Cavalry, is removed from his appointment of 2nd Squadron Officer in the 13th Bengal Cavalry (Lancers), and directed to proceed to Nowgong and do general duty at that station.

DISTURBANCES IN RAJPOOTANA.—The Delhi Gazette understands that disturbances have occurred in the state of Sirohee, situated in the southern district of Rajpootana. It appears the Thakoor of Birtuna, having some grievance against the durbar, or the political officers supporting the durbar, called out his forces and succeeded in burning a large village named Muddar, situated on the high road leading from the military cantonment of Deesa to that of Erinporeah. The Thakoor also attacked other villages, and, it is reported, has threatened to march on Sirohee. Native troops from Erinporeah and Deesa have been called out. Both in Marwar and Sirohee there are numerous discontented Thakoors ready to join in any disturbance, and as usual the British Government, at the expense of the public exchequer, must play the policeman and keep the peace. One of two things is very certain; either the political officers entrusted with the charge of districts where these periodical disturbances take place are weak and incapable, or the policy of "non-interference" hampers their movements and prevents the little amount of good which might otherwise arise from their presence.

GOOD NEWS FROM TIRHOOT.—We are glad to have better accounts from Tirhoot. Rain has fallen. A letter from Muzafferpoore of the 10th inst. states:—"We have had a good thunder shower, and as it seems to have extended pretty well over the district, there is yet hope for the crops in general. The painful remembrance of the late famine was fast coming over us again. The bunnias were at their old game, storing up in the hope of a scarcity, and in one single week cut down the quantity of rice five seers per rupee. The poor people were beginning to pick up and to store away the mango seeds for future use. One good shower of rain has put a new face upon things, and there is every hope that the poor will not want for grain."—Indian Daily News, July 13.

THE CHARGES AGAINST LIEUTENANT GOOLD.—Lieutenant Francis Henry Goold, of the 9th Regiment N.I., stationed at Barrackpoore, for whose arrest a warrant had been issued, was brought into Calcutta on the night of the 9th July, from Allahabad, where he had been arrested by the Bengal police, and was placed the following day before Mr. J. B. Roberts. He was charged with having forged the name of the commanding officer of his regiment (Colonel H. L. Pester) to several bills, and thereby cheated the London and Delhi Bank (Limited), out of Rs. 3,500. Mr. Roberts, public prosecutor, conducted the prosecution. Mr. Cockerell Smith, solicitor, appeared on behalf of the prisoner, who pleaded not guilty. After some evidence had been taken, Mr. Roberts applied for a week's remand, which was granted; the magistrate however refused to take bail.

THE GRANT MEDAL.—The Agricultural Society of India have resolved to award the Grant Gold Medal annually for any service done to Indian agriculture, horticulture, or floriculture, by anyone, whether resident in India or elsewhere, and whether a member of the society or not. The funds originated in a subscription raised in 1848 for a picture of Sir John Peter Grant. The sum at that time amounted to Rs. 1,800, which has now been doubled by interest. At the last meeting a paper was read by Mr. G. E. Peal, of Sebsaugor, on the blight that is unfortunately so common in the tea gardens of Upper Assam. Mr. Peal apprehends it to be a fungus "smut or rust," and not the ravages of any insect. The young leaf is most generally attacked, and it presents the appearance of a pale green spot like a blister on the upper surface of the leaf.—Friend of India.

CHOLERA IN CENTRAL INDIA.—Cholera, says the Central India Times, has at last made its appearance among the European troops at Kamptee, and "up to date about fifty cases have occurred, of which number two-thirds have been fatal." The troops, it is understood, are to move into camp immediately. According to the Delhi Gazette, it is doing fearful havoc among the villages of the Jubbulpore district. Ninety per cent. of those attacked by the disease are being carried off. In the presence of such a terrible epidemic, the local papers, both official and private, are remarkably reticent on the subject. We are dependent, says the Gazette, upon private sources for the information we publish. Is it too much to expect the head of the administration to order weekly abstracts of the reports made by the police, or by whomsoever else, as the case may be, to be published, with a statement of the measures adopted by the civil and medical authorities to relieve the people?

ADVANCES TO OFFICERS IN QUARTERS.—The following extract from Military Department letter No. 179, dated 10th June, 1868, to the Quartermaster-general, relative to advances to officers under the operation of G.G.O. No. 985, dated 15th October, 1867, was published in general orders dated Simla, July 2nd, 1867:—"The Government of India fully concurs with his Excellency that, as the chief object of these advances was to enable an officer to provide himself with accommodation within his own lines and near his men, the principle should be set aside only on very special grounds. 2. In the case of building a house it should be in the lines of the officer's regiment, should ground be available; and in the case of purchase, the house should not be out of the lines, save on a certificate that no house is to be had within them."

MILITARY INSUBORDINATION.—On the night of the 6th July a very serious affair took place in the 45th Regiment N.I. at Peshawur. A sepoy of the regiment deliberately shot a kote-havildar, and displayed a wanton savagery in hacking the body afterwards with a sword. The culprit was quickly apprehended, and lies now under charge of the civil authorities awaiting his trial. This is the third instance of a similar affair within five months. On the 11th of February a Sikh havildar of the 28th N.I. shot a Pathan sepoy of his own regiment. On the 1st of May a recruit of the 3rd Sikhs shot a jemadar of his own regiment. On the 6th June a sepoy of the 45th N.I. shot a kote-havildar of his own regiment. The Sikh havildar of the 28th N.I. was transported for life. The recruit of the 3rd Sikhs was hanged at the jail. We venture to think Major-general Haly would have been wise if he had ordered a general parade, and had the murderer hanged in the face of the garrison. And in the present case we hope that his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief will hint to the authorities at Peshawur that a public execution before the troops of the garrison is called for. The civil authorities would have offered no obstacle in the way of such an execution in the previous, nor are they likely to do so in the present instance. Like some epidemics the commission of great crimes spreads by contagion; and extraordinary measures are not unfrequently required to check the progress of both.—Delhi Gazette.

CIVIL SERVANTS' EXAMINATIONS.—The following rule is notified for general information, in continuation of the rules published dated Oct. 25, 1867:—A civil servant shall be at liberty to present himself for examination in the obligatory and another language simultaneously; but no report of his proficiency in the second language shall be prepared unless he is declared to have passed in the obligatory language.

THE PORT CANNING COMPANY.—CALCUTTA, July 18.—An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Port Canning Company has been held, in compliance with a requisition of shareholders, dated March 31st. Mr. Swinhoe occupied the chair. Mr. Schiller's party intimated an intention not to bring forward any resolution, considering it unnecessary after the proceedings of the meeting in May. A resolution was passed expressing confidence in the present direction, and approving and confirming their actions. The chairman held proxies representing 850 votes. The ordinary annual meeting was held thereafter, at which the directors' report and the statements of accounts were adopted, and a resolution passed abolishing the Bombay board of directors and secretary's office. Mr. Schiller's party withdrew from the meeting before the adoption of the report.

NEWS FROM LADAKH.—Dr. Cayley, our agent in Ladakh, resumed his post for the season at Lé on the 22nd of May. The weather en route had been unusually severe, but has led to a plentiful supply of water and splendid crops. The new Governor of Ladakh, Syad Ali Akbar, is popular on account of his probity and justice, and Dr. Cayley feels the utmost confidence that the new tariff will be strictly carried out. So much for public discussion. No news from Eastern Turkistan had arrived at Lé between November and May, but the return of messengers sent by the Wazir was expected. The traders from the Punjab were still on the way. A Lhasa merchant was selling brick tea at Lé at Rs. 3 per lb., and the same fetched Rs. 5 at Cashmere. What a future is in store for the first planter who will hit the taste of Cashmere and Central Asia in brick tea!—Friend of India.

A CURIOUS CHARGE OF INSUBORDINATION.—A General Court-martial, of which Colonel Burroughs was president, has sat at Chinsurah, to investigate a curious charge of insubordination against Lieutenant MacDonnell, of the 2-12th Regiment. The officer commanding the depot had issued an order that officers should see daily that each man had on a cholera belt. Lieutenant MacDonnell sent in a memorandum, stating that it was the duty of a non-commissioned officer to inspect half nude soldiers, not of a gentleman; and that with God's help he would be guided as long as he held her Majesty's commission by the principle that when a soldier comes into the presence of an officer he should be properly dressed. This memorandum Captain Brown considered as insubordinate, but subsequently withdrew the obnoxious order. Letters were read attesting the good character of the accused. The chief extra judicial point in Lieutenant MacDonnell's favour is, that it is doubtful whether any precedent exists for compelling officers to act up to the letter of the standing orders regarding personal examination of the soldiers' cholera belts. The finding of the Court-martial has not yet been published.

A MURDEROUS OUTBREAK.—The Lahore Chronicle records a dreadful crime which has been committed at Ferozepore. At three o'clock on the morning of the 9th inst. a blacksmith murdered his wife on the roof of the house with a straw chopper; he then murdered his married daughter, aged eighteen, another daughter, aged seven, and a son, aged ten. After this he went to a bheestie's house, and with the same weapon severely wounded the bheestie's wife, who is not expected to live. The murderer was arrested by a constable at the bheestie's house just in time to prevent his doing more mischief. When taken to the kotwalce, he told the police he had murdered his whole family. Mr. Aldridge went at once to the man's house, and there found the two children on a charpoy with their heads nearly severed from their bodies; on another bed was the married daughter with a fearful gash in her throat and jaw, and the left hand cut off; the wife was also found with a tremendous gash in the throat. Every one of the victims must have died instantaneously. The reason for these wholesale murders is that the bheestie was carrying on an intrigue with the blacksmith's wife, and his (the murderer's) daughter was conniving at the intrigue.

WILKINSON, Officiating Administrator-General, Calcutta, July 9, 1868.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers have obtained leave of absence for the season:—Royal Artillery: Brevet Major Elgee (B battery 8th brigade), to the hills north of Dehra, on private affairs, from the 15th July to the 15th October. 5th Foot: Captain Legge, to remain in Cashmere, from 16th July to the 15th October, in extension. THE BANK OF MADRAS.—At a meeting of directors on the 14th July the rates of interest and discount were reduced one per cent. all round.

RETIREMENT.—Lieut.-colonel Jones, of the Infantry, is permitted to retire from the service, on the pension of his rank, from Aug. 14, 1868, or date of departure from Madras.

ARRIVAL OF ABYSSINIAN OFFICERS.—The services of the under-mentioned officers who have returned from Abyssinia have been replaced at the disposal of the Public Works Department:—Major H. N. D. Prendergast, c.v., Captain H. W. Wood, Lieutenant J. Penny-quick, Lieutenant J. N. Manwaring, and Lieutenant W. H. Coaker—Royal Engineers.

MYSORE COMMISSION.—The following promotions in the Mysore Commission are sanctioned by the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council, consequent on the retirement of Captain Acton, 1st Grade Assistant Superintendent:—Captain H. G. Thomson, to be an Assistant Superintendent of the 1st Grade; Captain A. G. D. Logan, to be an Assistant Superintendent of the 2nd Grade.

THE PIER.—In reply to their telegram regarding the accident to the pier, the Government have received a message from the pier contractors, announcing the departure overland to Madras of an engineer whose duty it will be to effect the necessary repairs. The shipment of the piles and rods requisite will be made immediately in a Government chartered vessel.

THE GREAT SOUTHERN OF INDIA RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts for the week ending 30th May, 1868, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 10,216-11-0, and for luggage, goods, &c., to Rs. 6,281-13-0, making together Rs. 16,498-8-0, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 98-3-3. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 10,801-10-4, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 85-0-10.

TRANSFER.—Captain J. O. Mayne, Royal (Madras) Engineers, is transferred from Madras to Bengal as a Superintending Engineer, 2nd Class, 2nd Grade.

FISCAL.—The Act for the appointment of a Commissioner for the Administration of Civil and Criminal Justice and for the superintendence and collection of the revenues on the Nilgherry Hills came into operation and had effect from Aug. 1.

Cornet Dalrymple, H.M.'s 19th Hussars, to be Extra Aid de-Camp to H.E. the Governor, from the 15th July. A CURIOUS NOTIFICATION.—The following general order appears in the Madras Gazette:—The Governor in Council is pleased to rule that all natives of India wearing boots or shoes of European fashion may appear thus habited before all the servants of Government, in all places within the Madras Presidency and its dependencies, on all official or semi-official occasions, including Durbars of all descriptions. In the case of natives wearing shoes of Indian fashion the old social practice, whereby such shoes must be taken off within the customary limits, will be maintained by the servants of Government in their official or semi-official capacities.

THE MADRAS RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts of the south-west line for the week ending 4th July, 1868, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 35,804-13-9, for goods, &c., to Rs. 52,857-10-0, making together Rs. 88,662-7-9; or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 180-3-4. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 84-349-14-8, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 171-5-4. The receipts of the north-west line for the same week amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 5,810-9-5, for goods, &c., to Rs. 32,306-7-6, making together Rs. 38,117-0-11; or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 249-2-1. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 22,004-0-6, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 143-13-1.

EXPORTS FROM COCONADA.—From a statement of the comparative exports from Coconada from 1st January to 1st July now before us, we learn that the half-year's exports of cotton amounted to 7,390 bales (300 lbs.) in 1865, 34,322 bales in 1866, 8,604 in 1867, and 16,520 bales in 1868. Thus the exports this year are about twice as large as those in 1865 and 1867, and less than half those in 1866. Of rice the exports to Europe chiefly have greatly increased of late. They were 1,585 bags (164 lbs.) in 1865, 33,250 bags in 1866, 26,378 bags in 1867, and 74,326 bags in 1868. Then of gingelly seed the exports were 52,571, 10,017, 2,261, and 56,803 bags in those four years respectively; and of cane jaggery 33,986, 38,045, 2,643 and 27,048 bags respectively. Unusually heavy rains are reported to have fallen lately in Coconada.

HYDERABAD.—We hear from Hyderabad that it is currently reported Brigadier-general Lumsden, in command of the contingent, will shortly receive promotion. Should this rumour prove true, it is to be hoped his successor will be found amongst the officers of the contingent. It is also said the Nizam and his Minister have resolved not to press any further their claims on the Berars. With reference to the report that the Nizam was anxious to make his reformed troops supply the place of the contingent, it is remarked that Colonel Low, before the cession of Berar, plainly asked the Nizam if he desired the abolition of the contingent, and received a reply in the negative. This ought to be conclusive; however, in these days of sentiment, there is a probability of Mr. Mill or some other philosophical member of Parliament asking why the Nizam should not be relieved of the expense of the contingent. It is said that severe distress exists in the extreme eastern talooks of the Berars; the Deputy Commissioner of Woon has been sent to investigate the matter.

SIR S. NORTHCOTE'S CHARITIES IN MADRAS.—Of the sum of money placed in the hands of Lord Napier by Sir Stafford Northcote to be appropriated to charitable and useful purposes in Madras, his Lordship (says the Madras Times) has presented Rs. 1,000 to the Madras University to be applied in the following manner:—Rs. 500 as a prize to the 1st graduate in Arts at the next examination, provided that he be ranked in the first class. Rs. 300 for the candidate who may pass first at the next first Arts examination, provided he attained 250 marks. Rs. 200 for the candidate who may pass first at the next Matriculation Examination, provided he attains 250 marks. "The Senate," says Sir Colley Scotland, the Vice-Chancellor, in acknowledging receipt of this donation, "set much value on such rewards on account not only of the increased interest in the higher branches of study and the spirit of emulation which they promote, but also of the aid they afford to talented native youths of the poorer classes, many of whom are now eager for advancement. And I have it in charge to express through you to Sir Stafford Northcote, that the senate very gratefully appreciates his liberal benefaction."

THE WEATHER.—A strange season we are having. In the north of India the heat is said to be terrific, and rain is sorely needed, but it comes not. On the other hand, this should be our hottest month, and rain should be very scanty; but the temperature is so mild that the use of warm clothing has been generally resumed, and rain falls almost every day. The public health is on the whole satisfactory; but, as is usual in damp seasons, fever is prevalent among the poorer natives.

PROJECTED BREAKWATER FOR MADRAS.—The project of a breakwater for Madras has been revived, and is said to have met with favour in influential quarters; but the million sterling needed is rather a large sum, and Madras is not very sanguine about obtaining it for some time. The town is becoming slowly conscious of the necessity of being up and doing for the preservation of her trade. Commerce must be invited to and fostered in a port like this, for so long as the port is so inconvenient to both ships and shippers, there is always a danger of trade going Bombaywards. A vigorous-minded governor who would throw his whole heart into the interests of Madras as did Munro is what we need at this juncture in our affairs. Unless Madras asserts her rights, they will assuredly be lost sight of in Calcutta and Simla. The conservatism of this Presidency is of the worst type, for it is synonymous with apathy. Madras needs rousing from her long sleep. Are there no Munros now-a-days?—Madras Times.

ENCOURAGEMENT OF NATIVE AGENCY.—The Madras Government are evidently anxious to comply with the crude philanthropic theories of the India-office, and have actually had under discussion the removal, as an experiment, of all European civil servants from one district, and supplying their place with natives of eminent ability. It is understood that this scheme has been shelved; but the Governor is known to be particularly anxious to put natives in good posts in Madras immediately under the observation of the Government. Already the Vepery police-court and the stamp-office are presided over by Hindoos, and it is rumoured that the acting appointment of collector of sea customs during the absence on leave of the present incumbent will also be filled by a native. The intention of most of the threatened reforms is undoubtedly good and praiseworthy, as it is tantamount to raising meritorious natives from a condition of serfdom to one of such independence as is but consistent with their position as British subjects; what has to be guarded against is lest the ripe Western grain should be forced upon the Indian soil before the field has been prepared, and this is just the danger that is not apparent to philanthropists who labour much for, but have not been residents in India. Western ideas are not applicable pur et simple to intellectual Orientalism of the Hindoo type. The process of grafting to be successful must be methodic and comparatively slow.—Madras Times.

FURLOUGHS AND LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—Lieut.-col. Pringle, of the Staff Corps, 2nd in command and wing officer 35th Regiment Native Infantry, on furlough to Europe for two years; Captain Beatty, 10th Regiment Native Infantry, on furlough to Europe for two years; Surgeon Busted, Deputy-Assay Master, Bombay, to the Neilgherry Hills, for six months on medical certificate; Lieutenant Onslow, of the Cavalry General List, on medical certificate for twenty months, to Europe; Lieut.-col. Mayne, Deputy-Judge Advocate-general, Centre Division and Straits District, for sixty days, from the 5th of July, 1868; Captain Thomas, 24th Foot, to England, overland, on medical certificate; Captain Creagh, 1st Foot, to England, overland, on medical certificate; Captain Callander, R.A., 14th Brigade, to England via the Cape, on medical certificate; Lieut.-col. Jones, of the Infantry, is permitted to retire from the service on the pension of his rank, from the 14th August, 1868, or date of departure from Madras; Lieutenant Robinson, of the Staff Corps, Quartermaster 27th Regiment Native Infantry, is commuted to furlough for two years, on medical certificate, under the regulations of 1868; Lieut. Gahan, of the Staff Corps, 2nd Wing Subaltern 31st Regiment Light Infantry, who was granted leave to Europe on medical certificate under the regulations of 1864, is now permitted to elect the furlough regulations of 1868.

AN INTERESTING DISCOVERY.—"No researches," writes the British Medical Journal, "could well have created greater scientific interest than those by which Dr. Bence Jones some time since pointed out and investigated the existence in the human body of a substance closely resembling quinine in fluorescence, possessing all its optical qualities and answering to its chemical tests. He showed, at the same time, that the tissues yielded a more intense fluorescence after the administration of quinine. This seemed at once to suggest a most interesting solution of the 'specific' virtues of vegetable quinine in febrile, agueish, and other forms of disease. Drs. Rhoads and Pepper, following out the line of investigation, have made twelve carefully conducted observations, in which they have examined the blood in agueish fevers. They conclude ('Pennsylvania Hospital Reports') that there is a close connection between the diminution of animal quinoidine and malarial disease. A short time, they say, appears to effect marked reduction in the normal amount of fluorescent substance; and it may, they think, be confidently inferred that it is not essential for fully formed febrile paroxysms to occur in order to produce this peculiar effect. It remains for further investigation to confirm these interesting results, and to ascertain whether such diminution of animal quinoidine is produced by other causes than the malarial poison."—Madras Times.

MAGIC LANTERNS.—According to the subjoined General Order by the Commander-in-Chief, that functionary appears to be sedulously anxious to have the phantasmagoria introduced into regimental schools as a means towards education:—Referring to Horse Guards G.O. No. 769, of Sept. 26, 1861, on the subject of magic lanterns and the delivery of lectures to the troops, it is notified that an additional supply of magic lanterns has now been received from England and forwarded to the stations of Poona, Mhow, Nusseerabad, Deesa, Kurrachee, Belgaum, Bombay and Aden. The Commander-in-Chief calls upon General Officers commanding divisions and brigades and Commanding Officers of regiments to do all in their power to induce officers and others under their command to deliver lectures to soldiers.

Watson assumed charge of the 3rd Political Assistant's office on the 13th idem. Captain L. Russell assumed charge of the 4th Political Assistant's office on the 8th idem. Captain G. E. Hancock assumed charge of the Assistant Political Agent's office on the 13th idem. Mr. J. Crowley assumed charge as 4th Extra Assistant on the 13th idem. Lieutenant Colonel W. A. Havelock gave over charge of his duties as Commissioner in Sind to Mr. J. G. Moore, Assistant Commissioner, July 3. Lieutenant Colonel W. L. Merewether, C.B., assumed charge of the duties of Commissioner in Sind, July 10.

SOLDIERS' BOUNTY.—Doubts having arisen as to the amount of bounty to be refunded by soldiers who may take their discharge after having volunteered under the provisions of General Order by the Governor-general, June 13, 1864, the Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council directs the substitution of the following form of agreement to be signed by soldiers receiving bounty for volunteering, in place of that contained in the order above referred to:—I, ———, having received, under the provisions of G.G.O. No. 695 of 1863, Rs. ———, bounty for volunteering, have done so on the condition that I cannot claim my discharge, unless, in addition to any purchase money which may be claimable from me under the Regulations of the service, I refund the amount of bounty I have received, deducting ten rupees for each year of service I shall have completed since volunteering.

THE PILGRIMAGE TO MECCA.—The Hedjaz Sanitary Commission give very satisfactory accounts of the health of the pilgrims during the recent pilgrim season. The death rate at Mecca during the height of the pilgrimage was at a minimum. The only disease was a few cases of mild dysentery and intermittent fever. There were only thirty-eight patients in the public hospital. The authorities appear to have exercised extreme caution in carrying out sanitary arrangements. The streets were watered twice a day, the sewage was conveyed by underground channels to a distance from the city, and the slaughter-house was also removed some distance. The only inconvenience seems to have arisen from the difficulty of housing the pilgrims, many of whom had to quarter themselves in the streets. From ten to twelve thousand persons, for whom no shelter had been provided, have arrived at Mecca, and a caravan of 4,000 pilgrims had gone on to Medina. The number of pilgrims is stated approximately at 85,000, which is considerably in excess of the numbers assembled last year.

AN ENGLISH ARTIST IN KATTYWAR.—We learn from a correspondent in Kattywar that Mr. Paul Rainford, the artist, has just completed a life-size portrait of the Thakoor of Jhusdun. He has also taken the portraits of several Kattywar chiefs, and some time since those of distinguished natives in other parts of the Western Presidency. Several of the productions of Mr. Rainford that were "hung" in the Art Exhibition, which took place in Bombay in February last, commanded considerable notice—their faithfulness to the originals and their artistic character in general being very distinguished. There is one exquisite production of this artist, which represents the youthful son of the Thakoor of Palitana playing with flowers in a garden; each flower is carefully and minutely painted, as though it were a picture by itself. Mr. Rainford seems to be in a fair way towards forming a portrait gallery for all India. Seeing that so few genuine artists visit this country, we are glad to find Mr. Rainford's services so generally availed of and his merits so much appreciated by those who can afford to patronise professional gentlemen of Mr. Rainford's attainments.—Times of India.

GOOD ADVICE.—On the book-shelves of our office is an old copy of Malcolm's "Government of India," on the flyleaf of which is an inscription forming an interesting memento of a notable Bombay citizen of the last generation—the one whose statue is perhaps the best specimen of the sculptor's art amongst those which adorn the vestibule of our town-hall. The inscription speaks for itself, and is thoroughly characteristic of this Bombay worthy of the olden time:—"To Mr. Joseph Charles Coley, Cadet of Infantry on the Bombay Establishment, from Sir Charles Forbes, Bart., Fitzroy-square, 18th Dec., 1839.—Be kind to the natives; treat them as your equals and fellow-subjects; give them your confidence, and you will be amply repaid. 'Gratitude' is their natural motto. They may forget an injury, but a kindness never! This, I say, after living among them twenty-two years and twenty-eight years after leaving them.—CHAS. FORBES." Of the career of the said cadet we have no particulars, but trust he laid to heart not only the benign lesson on the title-page, but also the wise counsel with which the pages of the volume are replete. In reproducing this little relic of bygone days it may serve to show that a certain policy now being advocated is founded on no new doctrines.—Times of India.

HOW JURYMEN ARE TREATED IN BOMBAY.—To the Editor of the Times of India.—Sir,—May I take the liberty of stating how the jurors at the sessions on Tuesday were put to great inconvenience? His lordship, the chief justice, after confining the jury at about eight o'clock at night, went home, ordering the clerk to wait till eleven o'clock, and see if the jury came to an unanimous verdict; if so, then to bring them to his lordship's bungalow. This was done. His lordship, after hearing the verdict from the foreman, discharged the jury. The police officer in charge of the jury brought them back as far as the Two Tanks, Bhendy Bazaar-road, and then told them to find their own conveyances to go to their respective homes. What sort of justice is this, after keeping the jury nearly twelve hours in confinement without food? They had to find buggies at such a late hour as one o'clock, and some had to walk a distance of about six miles, after being without food all day. This is a great zoolum. Formerly, the presiding judges ordered tiffins to all the jurors, and according to their religion. I think the above statement will be sufficient for his lordship to inquire into the hardships jurors are put to, and to order effective measures to prevent a repetition of the same.—Times of India, July 10.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.—We believe the following notice of motion will be shortly submitted by an honourable member to the House of Commons:—"Notice of Motion.—To ask H.M.'s Secretary of State for India the reason why a surgeon and surgeon-major of an Indian regiment, holding the relative rank of major and lieutenant-colonel respectively, are paid 110 and 427 rupees per mensem less than a regimental major and lieutenant-colonel of the same service; also to inquire whether it is the intention of H.M.'s Government to restore to Indian army surgeons the staff salary formerly granted by the Honourable East India Company, in addition to the military pay of their rank; and which would be in accordance with the system already adopted with military officers, under the new organisation of the Indian army, by which even the adjutant is permitted to draw a larger staff salary, in addition to the pay of his rank, than what is included in the 'consolidated pay' of a surgeon or surgeon-major in medical charge of a regiment." As it is not to be expected that the regimental surgeon, to whose judgment and skill are entrusted the health and lives of some 3,000 officers, men, and families of the regiment, is likely to continue to serve in a corps in which military officers of the same rank as himself enjoy a much higher rate of remuneration, proof of which may have been seen by the numerous surgeons who have lately retired from the Indian army in the prime of life, and as the untimely loss of their professional experience is a public misfortune, the subject is not likely to have escaped the attention of Government.—Times of India, July 11.

MAZAGON LAND AND RECLAMATION COMPANY.—On Thursday afternoon, July 17, an extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Mazagon Land and Reclamation Company was held in the offices of the secretaries and treasurers (Messrs. Ritchie, Stuart, and Co.)—Mr. J. G. Smith in the chair—to explain to the shareholders the result of the deliberations of the committee which was appointed on the 9th July to consult with the directors, for the purpose of devising a scheme to form a new company. Mr. Byranjee Cursetjee, at the request of the chairman, explained to the shareholders that the result of the consultation between the committee and the directors was a proposal to form a new company with a capital of Rs. 32,00,000 (thirty-two lakhs), divided into 1,600 shares of Rs. 2,000 each, with powers to the directors to increase the capital up to Rs. 50,00,000 (fifty lakhs), by issuing new shares. Mr. Moteram Bhugobhoy suggested that a provision should be inserted in the new deed that the directors should consult the shareholders before increasing the capital. After some discussion a proposal of Mr. K. R. Kolah that the suggestions of the committee should be agreed to, excepting only that the directors' power of increasing the capital should be limited to Rs. 50,000, was carried. The chairman having stated that that was all the business, Mr. Moteram asked why the proposition to wind up the company should not be confirmed at that meeting, to which Mr. Hurrell, solicitor to the company, answered that another meeting would require to be held for that purpose.

CABUL.—Hafiz Jee, chief of the Kohistanee tribe, died at Cabul a few days ago. His death was greatly deplored by the Ameer and the general residents of the city, by all of whom he was greatly beloved. The Ameer Azim Khan has left for the field in person. He proposes to challenge his nephew, Sirdar Yakoob Khan, to a hand-to-hand encounter. Before the Ameer left for Ghiznee he despatched the prisoners Sirdars Mahomed Shureef Khan, Wally Mahomed Khan, and other relatives and friends of Ameer Shere Ally Khan to Turkistan, there to remain in the custody of Sirdar Abdoolrahman Khan. Reports have also reached Peshawur to the effect that the Cabul Ameer has fled in the direction of Turkistan, and that he has sent the whole of his family to the residence of Sahibzadah Ghoolam Jan, a chief of the Ghilzies. General Mahomed Zaman Khan, a commandant of Ameer Azim Khan's troops, was killed in the last engagement with the troops of Ameer Shere Ali Khan at Moker. Yakoob Khan proposes to advance on Cabul at once, so that a most bloody battle is now expected every day. Salleh Mahomed Khan, the governor of Khost, has come to Cabul with all his force to assist the Ameer Azim Khan. By the latest report the Ameer of Cabul's camp was at Deh Baria, on the Killah Quazee and Ghiznee road. Ferozeshah was at Boonair, neglected by the Akhoond, though respected and received by the people.—Punjab Times, July 14.

THE BOMBAY BANK COMMISSION.—A correspondent of the Bombay Gazette, who signs himself "The Day of Humbug," suggests a few questions for Sir Charles Jackson. They are pointed enough, certainly, but perhaps Sir Charles will consider them irrelevant to the inquiry. We append them, however, for what they are worth:—1. Let Sir C. Jackson summon all the bankrupts and question them, on oath, one after another, how each and all of them came to lose some hundreds of thousand pounds sterling and became penniless? 2. If they are really penniless and in a helpless and destitute condition, as they ought to be, how is it that almost all of them are still living in bungalows worth lakhs of rupees and are driving their carriage and pair? 3. If they have really suffered misfortune, how is it that each and all the bankrupts are in bodies much fatter, and in appearance much fresher and livelier than their true creditors, and that they are still getting fatter and fresher day after day? 4. How many of them have made over properties and cash in the names of their wives and relations, as trust property and trust money? And what is the aggregate amount of it all? "The Day of Humbug" adds:—"Take the photographs of all the bankrupts, and all the applicants for the benefit of the notorious Act XXVIII. of 1865, and distribute them (with a statement of the liabilities, &c.) amongst the bankers and merchants of Hindoostan and England, and the ruined widows and orphans, to let them see how gloriously happy and contented beings those men are. Besides this, let another fact also be noted down—that the Bombay Government of the day is so marvellously liberal, that almost all the insolvents are enjoying, up to this hour, the honours of justices of the peace, first class jurors, fellows of colleges, delegates in the Parsee law courts," &c., &c.

FURLOUGHS.—The following officers obtained furlough to Europe on medical certificate and leave of absence in July last:—Surgeon Hewlett to Europe for six months; Major Roberts, Assistant Quartermaster-general on the Bengal Army Establishment, for twenty months; Captain Ormsby, 2nd Dragoon Guards, August 3, 1868, to December 3, 1868, to remain in England on private affairs; Lieut. Fagan, adjutant 2nd Light Cavalry, for two years to Europe—this cancels G.O. No. 437, July 2; Major Briggs, Staff Corps, Commandant 3rd Regiment Sind Horse, for two years, under Regulations of 1868—this cancels G.O. No. 440, July 6; Captain Stewart, 18th Hu-sars, Paymaster the Hon. M. Mostyn, 21st Fusiliers, Staff Assistant Surgeon Paliologus, to proceed to England by the overland route. These officers will on arrival report themselves to the Adjutant-general, Horse Guards. Staff Assistant Surgeon Paliologus is available for duty with troops. Captain and Brevet Major Bogle, R.A., July 21, 1868, to Jan. 21, 1869, to England on urgent private affairs.

TESTIMONIAL TO CAPTAIN TRYON, R.N.—The shipmasters in Bombay harbour met on the 17th of July at the Royal Hotel, Fort, for the purpose of deciding upon the best way of expressing their respect and good feelings towards Captain Tryon, R.N., late Principal Transport Officer in Annesley Bay. The chairman, Captain Miller, remarked that before the subscription lists were handed round it would be as well to speak of the claims of Captain Tryon to their respect and esteem. Of course different people looked through different glasses, but for himself, he (the chairman) would say that in Captain Tryon he found a gentleman of superior intellect, one who had the tact of viewing the right side of a question that came before him. This was a rare merit, one that could not be found in every person. Shipmasters had met with a great deal of kindness at his hands on every occasion they came in contact with him during the expedition to Abyssinia. He would allude to his liberality and generosity in subscribing towards the relief of the widows and children of captains who died in Annesley Bay. He (Captain Tryon) did not belong to their cloth, and there was no necessity for him to subscribe in those cases. Every one present would testify to the courteous, affable, and kind manner in which he did everything. There was another case in which the chief officer of a ship, who was sick, was allowed to go to Suez for the benefit of his health. Now, it is not every man who will go out of his way to do kind acts like these when he is not bound to do so. Ship captains were always ready to stand up for their rights, and he (the chairman) had no doubt they would all of them show themselves alive to acknowledge the kindness they had experienced at Capt. Tryon's hands. (Cheers.)—Captain Emerson would add one more instance to those already related. He (Captain Tryon) on one occasion offered a free passage to the widow and daughter of a captain who had died; and in another case, as mentioned by the chairman, his (Captain Emerson's) chief officer was allowed twenty-eight days' leave to go to Suez for the benefit of his health.—Captain Watson was of opinion that the health of the shipping at Zoula was owing to the way in which Captain Tryon managed his business. Had there been in his place a man of an irritable, exacting disposition, it would have created an amount of ill-feeling and vexation certainly to be regretted. Everything however went on in a satisfactory way. The speaker could not help attributing the health of the shipping at Zoula to the judicious management of Captain Tryon. Subscriptions for a piece of plate have already been taken to the amount of Rs. 3,000.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE COLABA COMPANY.—On the afternoon of July 17 the second ordinary general meeting of the Colaba Company was held in the offices of the secretaries and treasurers (Messrs. Remington and Co.). There was a good attendance of shareholders and the chair was occupied by Mr. G. M. Stewart. The chairman in opening the proceedings, said the report showed that nine-tenths of the cotton trade of Bombay passed through Colaba, and very much of it had to be carted from the station, which was still at a distance from their property. This clearly showed that with railway communication Colaba would always be the depot for the cotton trade of this port. He had nothing fresh to tell the meeting with reference to the question which had lately been raised as to the extension of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway; but he believed no change could be made in the original plans without the concurrence of the Local Government, the Government of India, and the Secretary of State, and they might rest confident that due consideration would be shown to the interests of all involved. The claims of the Colaba Company had been fully represented. At all events they might be sure of a goods extension with a station for the trade which would naturally find its way to Colaba. One satisfactory feature to be pointed out in the accounts was that there was almost no liability, the whole amount of the liabilities being a few arrears in working expenses, which had already been paid. There was a considerable sum of money in cash and Government paper which would be of great service in adding to the value of the property. He concluded by proposing that the report of the directors and the accounts be adopted, which was seconded by Mr. Cowasjee Hormusjee. Mr. Sorabjee Rustomjee Bunshaw thought it would be throwing away money into the sea if they made any more reclamations. In his opinion the directors might better dispose of the Rs. 5,39,000 by investing in Government securities, which might fetch perhaps between Rs. 25,000 and Rs. 30,000 every year, and that would be a good addition to what might be gained every year from the property of the company. The chairman's motion was then put to the meeting and unanimously adopted. On the motion of Mr. Keir, solicitor, it was agreed that, as recommended, a dividend of Rs. 80 should be sanctioned, payable from the 22nd inst. Messrs. T. F. Lidderdale and Nowrojee Furdoonjee were then appointed directors in place of Mr. G. M. Stewart and the Hon. Munguldass Nathooobhoy, who retired by rotation; and Messrs. James Ranken and Jehangeerjee Gustadjee were elected auditors for the ensuing year at a remuneration of Rs. 200 each. Some discussion then took place as to an application by certain shareholders in the United Victoria and Colaba Reclamation and Pier Company for shares in the Colaba Company in lieu of shares in the old company, forfeited for nonpayment of third call of Rs. 200. Thirty-one shares had been so forfeited, and the meeting agreed to leave it to the discretion of the directors whether the applications should be complied with.

COURTS-MARTIAL.

CAPTAIN J. G. E. CAMERON, MADRAS STAFF CORPS.
 At a general Court-martial assembled at Poona on the 15th June, 1868, Captain Joseph George Ellis Cameron, Madras Staff Corps, was arraigned on the following charges:—
 1st. For having been drunk on duty under arms, when acting as field officer of the day at Poona, on or about the 23rd day of April.
 2nd. For having neglected to obey the standing orders of the Poona brigade, in not having visited the arsenal guard when performing grand rounds as acting field officer of the day at Poona, on or about the 23rd day of April.
 3rd. For having, at Poona, on or about the date mentioned in the first charge, when acting field officer of the day, appeared at the Club of Western India in a state of intoxication and made a disturbance there.
 4th. For having, at Poona, on or about the 24th day of April, in his report as officer coming off duty, falsely stated that he had on the previous night performed grand rounds, and that all the guards were present and sober; whereas, in truth, and in fact, he had not visited the arsenal guard at any time during the night of the 23rd day of April.
 Finding.—The Court find that the prisoner is—of the first charge, guilty; of the second charge, guilty; of the third charge, guilty; with the exception of the words, "and made a disturbance there," of which the Court acquit him. Of the fourth charge not guilty.
 Sentence.—The Court sentence the prisoner to be cashiered.
 A. G. VEYSEY, Colonel, 46th Regiment, President.
 Poona, June 19.
 Confirmed.
 The C. in C. in India is unable to concur in the finding on the fourth charge with regard to the evidence stated before the Court, although his Excellency is willing to believe that the prisoner in the matter of that charge erred through carelessness, and not through intention to deceive, of which he is not accused in the charge.

The case is a very grievous one, but with respect to the example set to the army by the offences of which the prisoner has been found guilty, his Excellency regrets that it is out of his power to extend pardon to the prisoner.

W. R. MANSFIELD, General, C. in C. in India.
Head-quarters, Simla, July 6.

COLOUR SERGEANT E. CARTHY, H.M.'s 104TH FOOT.

Head Qrs., Simla, July 1.—At a General Court-martial, assembled at Dugshaie, on June 15 last, Colour Sergeant Edward Carthy, 104th regt. of foot, was arraigned on the following charges:—

First Charge.—That he, Edward Carthy, on the 6th day of May, 1868, being a soldier of H.M.'s British army, serving at Dugshaie, a place in H.M.'s dominions in India, at a distance of upwards of 120 miles from the Presidencies of Fort William, Fort St. George, and Bombay, respectively, did, at Dugshaie aforesaid, cause the death of Mary Ann Carthy, his wife, by doing acts, that is to say, by violently striking and kicking the said Mary Ann Carthy, with the intention of causing such bodily injury as was likely to cause her death.

Second Charge.—That he, Edward Carthy, on the 6th day of May, 1868, being a soldier of H.M.'s British army, serving at Dugshaie, a place in H.M.'s dominions in India, at a distance of upwards of 120 miles from the Presidencies of Fort William, Fort St. George, and Bombay, respectively, did at Dugshaie aforesaid, without grave and sudden provocation, voluntarily cause grievous hurt to Mary Ann Carthy, by violently striking and kicking her, with the knowledge of the likelihood that he would thereby cause grievous hurt, and whereby he did cause grievous hurt to her, and endangered her life.

Finding.—The Court finds that the prisoner, No. 2,712, Colour Sergeant Edward Carthy, of the 104th regt. of foot, is not guilty of the first charge, and does acquit him thereof, and is guilty of the second charge, of voluntarily causing grievous hurt on provocation.

Sentence.—The Court sentences the prisoner, No. 2,712, Colour Sergeant Edward Carthy, of the 104th regt. of foot, to suffer simple imprisonment for the term of one (1) year.

(Signed) W. R. CUNNINGHAM, Colonel, President.

Dugshaie, June 18, 1868.

Confirmed.

(Signed) W. R. MANSFIELD, General, C. in C.

Head Quarters, Simla, June 28, 1868.

Remarks by H.E. the Commander-in-Chief.

After the most careful consideration of this case, I arrive at the conclusion that the verdict is in accordance with the evidence submitted to the Court.

The sentence is legal, and certainly not excessive, if compared with the crime of which the prisoner has been found guilty.

There are, however, circumstances connected with this case which induce me to pause before giving effect to this sentence.

In the first place, it is proved that the prisoner is a man of most exemplary character, and possessed of a good temper.

2ndly. That he had received the most cruel provocation from the unfortunate woman before he committed the sudden assault which caused her death.

3dly. That in the evening in question he had already tried hard to keep peace with his wife, notwithstanding the strong excitement under which the prisoner was suffering from previous conviviality.

4thly. That the prisoner was in general a kind and considerate husband, and on good terms with the deceased.

5thly. It is, I think, proved that the assault which caused the death of Mrs. Carthy was not only the result of provocation as proved by the Court, but that it was sudden and unpremeditated.

This fact being taken into consideration, together with the prisoner's high and exemplary character, his long service of nineteen years without previous blemish of any kind, his numerous campaigns, and finally the suffering he must have undergone since the shocking event which has brought him to trial, a suffering which cannot fail to make itself felt in after years, I hold Sergeant Carthy to be an object for pity and clemency, and I hereby remit the sentence accordingly.

(Signed) W. R. MANSFIELD, General.

Commander-in-Chief in India.

MR. COOPER'S EXPLORING EXPEDITION.—The Government of India deserve credit for the way in which they have endeavoured to smooth the later and rougher stages of Mr. Cooper's adventurous attempt to penetrate into India, from the head-waters of the Yangtse-Kiang. The Burmese officials have been interested in his success should he be deflected to Burmese territory, whilst in Assam the officials in Luckimpore have exerted all their powers of persuasion and influence over the wild Mishmees, to spread an idea that the safe conduct and protection of the traveller will be an acceptable act in the eyes of the English Government, resulting in the immediate benefit of the tribes concerned. Should Mr. Cooper follow the head-waters of the river to the northward beyond the bed spoken of by Captain Blackisten, he will probably have to find his way through the western districts of the large Chinese province of Tzechusen, or Su-chuen, and thence through Thibet to Nepal or Sikkim. Bearing this contingency in mind, the Government have made a powerful and successful effort at Khatmandoo to interest Sir Jung Bahadur and the Nepal Durbar on Mr. Cooper's behalf. The Maharajah has promised to write to the chief officers of the Nepalese mission, detained at Su-chuen, and to the Nepalese agent at Thana. Nay, more than this, he suggested that a letter should be addressed to the Chinese Amlah at Thana, asking their protection on behalf of Mr. Cooper. This suggestion was too valuable not to have been readily accepted. In speaking of the journey, the Maharajah, judging from the treatment accorded his own mission, expressed his doubts as to Mr. Cooper's being allowed to cross this portion of China into Thibet, and supported his argument by a reference to the treatment meted out of late years to the French Missionaries in Thibet, in spite of their being protected by an Imperial pureana. He also agreed that Mr. Cooper, if he fell in with the Nepalese embassy or agents, should have an escort, and if possible be sent into India via Darjeeling. The Maharajah, we are told, is greatly annoyed at the treatment experienced by his embassy to the Emperor of China, but he has no immediate intention of making this treatment a casus belli with Thibet. No military preparations are being made in Nepal, and indeed the Maharajah will probably dissemble his mortification until the members of the embassy are safe in Nepal. He is anxious, too, before proceeding to extremities, to secure the countenance, if not something more tangible, of the Indian Government.—Englishman.

Miscellaneous.

SALE OF SILVER.—About £35,000 of the Maria Theresa dollars, lately returned from Abyssinia, was sold on Monday at 4s. 6½d. per ounce.

NEW PEERAGES IN CONTEMPLATION.—It is not uncommon to see high appointments gazetted during the Parliamentary recess, and it is said that several distinguished supporters of the Government were, before the prorogation, selected by the Ministry as worthy of being advanced to the dignity of the peerage, or that it would be advisable to so distinguish them. Some names have already been mentioned as likely to be shortly ennobled, and the latest addition to the new peerage list is, we have heard, Sir John Lawrence, Viceroy and Governor-general of India. The conference of a peerage in Sir John Lawrence's case does not seem improbable. His Excellency's services have been important to British interests in India, and surely the high functionary who selected or recommended Sir Robert Napier for the command of the successful Abyssinian Expeditionary Force might be invited to join company in the House of Lords with Baron Napier of Magdala.—Broad Arrow.

PROBABLE RETIREMENTS.—We are informed that one or two lieutenant-colonels of the Royal (late Bengal) Artillery will probably retire from the service shortly. The success which has attended the purchase scheme of Lieutenant-colonel Grey in India is likely to prove more satisfactory by arrangements which are being matured for working the scheme on a better and less dilatory plan than has hitherto been unavoidably adopted.—Army and Navy Gazette.

THE LATE GENERAL SIR GEORGE P. WYMER, K.C.B.—The death of General Sir George Petre Wymer, K.C.B., Colonel of her Majesty's 107th Regiment, is announced. He died on the 12th inst., within a few days of completing his eightieth year. The gallant general, who was buried on Tuesday, the 18th inst., at Kensal-green Cemetery, was the son of Mr. George Wymer, of Reepham, Norfolk. He was born in 1788, and entered the military service of the East India Company in 1804. He served under Lord Lake and Sir D. Ochterlony (receiving the thanks of Parliament for his services against the Ghoorkas) and Sir William Nott. The late Sir George was an aide-de-camp to the Queen, and has received medals for Candahar, Ghuznee, and Cabul.

MILITARY.—3rd Hussars: On landing in India the regiment will probably be quartered at Ahmednuggur, in place of the 3rd Dragoon Guards, and not sent on to Lucknow, as originally intended. 21st Fusiliers: The embarkation of the 1st battalion for India will take place about January, 1869. 25th Regiment: Major George Bent, of the 2nd Battalion, has been promoted to the local rank of lieutenant-colonel in India. 36th Regiment: Colonel McMahon, C.B., is appointed temporarily a brigadier on the staff of the Bengal Army. 37th Regiment: Ensign Swetenham is a candidate for the Bengal Staff Corps, and is doing duty with the 35th Native Infantry. 39th Regiment: The embarkation of the regiment for India will take place about January 1869.
